One morning, when Gregor Samsa woke from troubled dreams, he found himself transformed in his bed into a horrible vermin. He lay on his armour-like back, and if he lifted his head a little he could see his brown belly, slightly domed and divided by arches into stiff sections. The bedding was hardly able to cover it and seemed ready to slide off any moment. His many legs, pitifully thin compared with the size of the rest of him, waved about helplessly as he looked.

"What's happened to me?" he thought. It wasn't a dream. His room, a proper human room although a little too small, lay peacefully between its four familiar walls. A collection of textile samples lay spread out on the table - Samsa was a travelling salesman - and above it there hung a picture that he had recently cut out of an illustrated magazine and housed in a nice, gilded frame. It showed a lady fitted out with a fur hat and fur boa who sat upright, raising a heavy fur muff that covered the whole of her lower arm towards the viewer.

Gregor then turned to look out the window at the dull weather. Drops of rain could be heard hitting the pane, which made him feel quite sad. "How about if I sleep a little bit longer and forget all this nonsense", he thought, but that was something he was unable to do because he was used to sleeping on his right, and in his present state couldn't get into that position. However hard he threw himself onto his right, he always rolled back to where he was. He must have tried it a hundred times, shut his eyes so that he wouldn't have to look at the floundering legs, and only stopped when he began to feel a mild, dull pain there that he had never felt before.

He slid back into his former position. "Getting up early all the time", he thought, "it makes you stupid. You've got to get enough sleep. Other travelling salesmen live a life of luxury. For instance, whenever I go back to the guest house during the morning to copy out the contract, these gentlemen are always still sitting there eating their breakfasts. I ought to just try that with my boss; I'd get kicked out on the spot. But who knows, maybe that would be the best thing for me. If I didn't have my parents to think about I'd have given in my notice a long time ago, I'd have gone up to the boss and told him just what I think, tell him everything I would, let him know just what I feel. He'd fall right off his desk! And it's a funny sort of business to be sitting up there at your desk, talking down at your subordinates from up there, especially when you have to go right up close because the boss is hard of hearing. Well, there's still some hope; once I've got the money together to pay off my parents' debt to him - another five or six years I suppose - that's definitely what I'll do. That's when I'll make the big change. First of all though, I've got to get up, my train leaves at five."

And he looked over at the alarm clock, ticking on the chest of drawers. "God in Heaven!" he thought. It was half past six and the hands were quietly moving forwards, it was even later than half past, more like quarter to seven. Had the alarm clock not rung? He could see from the bed that it had been set for four o'clock as it should have been; it certainly must have rung. Yes, but was it possible to quietly sleep through that furniture-rattling noise? True, he had not slept peacefully, but probably all the more deeply because of that. What should he do now? The next train went at seven; if he were to catch that he would have to rush like mad and the collection of samples was still not packed, and he did not at all feel particularly fresh and lively. And even if he did catch the train he would not avoid his boss's anger as the office assistant would have been there to see the five o'clock train go, he would have put in his report about Gregor's not being there a long time ago. The office assistant was the boss's man, spineless, and with no understanding. What about if he reported sick? But that would be extremely strained and suspicious as in fifteen years of service Gregor had never once yet been ill. His boss would certainly come round with the doctor from the medical insurance company, accuse his parents of having a lazy son, and accept the doctor's recommendation not to make any claim as the doctor believed that no-one was ever ill but that many were workshy. And what's more, would he have been entirely wrong in this case? Gregor did in fact, apart from excessive sleepiness after sleeping for so long, feel completely well and even felt much hungrier than usual.

He was still hurriedly thinking all this through, unable to decide to get out of the bed, when the clock struck quarter to seven. There was a cautious knock at the door near his head. "Gregor", somebody called - it was his mother - "it's quarter to seven. Didn't you want to go somewhere?" That gentle voice! Gregor was shocked when he heard his own voice answering, it could hardly be recognised as the voice he had had before. As if from deep inside him, there was a painful and uncontrollable squeaking mixed in with it, the words could be made out at first but then there was a sort of echo which made them unclear, leaving the hearer unsure whether he had heard properly or not. Gregor had wanted to give a full answer and explain everything, but in the circumstances contented himself with saying: "Yes, mother, yes, thank-you, I'm getting up now." The change in Gregor's voice probably could not be noticed outside through the wooden door, as his mother was satisfied with this explanation and shuffled away. But this short conversation made the other members of the family aware that Gregor, against their expectations was still at home, and soon his father came knocking at one of the side doors, gently, but with his fist. "Gregor, Gregor", he called, "what's wrong?" And after a short while he called again with a warning deepness in his voice: "Gregor! Gregor!" At the other side door his sister came plaintively:

"Gregor? Aren't you well? Do you need anything?" Gregor answered to both sides: "I'm ready, now", making an effort to remove all the strangeness from his voice by enunciating very carefully and putting long pauses between each, individual word. His father went back to his breakfast, but his sister whispered: "Gregor, open the door, I beg of you." Gregor, however, had no thought of opening the door, and instead congratulated himself for his cautious habit, acquired from his travelling, of locking all doors at night even when he was at home.

The first thing he wanted to do was to get up in peace without being disturbed, to get dressed, and most of all to have his breakfast. Only then would he consider what to do next, as he was well aware that he would not bring his thoughts to any sensible conclusions by lying in bed. He remembered that he had often felt a slight pain in bed, perhaps caused by lying awkwardly, but that had always turned out to be pure imagination and he wondered how his imaginings would slowly resolve themselves today. He did not have the slightest doubt that the change in his voice was nothing more than the first sign of a serious cold, which was an occupational hazard for travelling salesmen.

It was a simple matter to throw off the covers; he only had to blow himself up a little and they fell off by themselves. But it became difficult after that, especially as he was so exceptionally broad. He would have used his arms and his hands to push himself up; but instead of them he only had all those little legs continuously moving in different directions, and which he was moreover unable to control. If he wanted to bend one of them, then that was the first one that would stretch itself out; and if he finally managed to do what he wanted with that leg, all the others seemed to be set free and would move about painfully. "This is something that can't be done in bed", Gregor said to himself, "so don't keep trying to do it".

The first thing he wanted to do was get the lower part of his body out of the bed, but he had never seen this lower part, and could not imagine what it looked like; it turned out to be too hard to move; it went so slowly; and finally, almost in a frenzy, when he carelessly shoved himself forwards with all the force he could gather, he chose the wrong direction, hit hard against the lower bedpost, and learned from the burning pain he felt that the lower part of his body might well, at present, be the most sensitive.

So then he tried to get the top part of his body out of the bed first, carefully turning his head to the side. This he managed quite easily, and despite its breadth and its weight, the bulk of his body eventually followed slowly in the direction of the head.

But when he had at last got his head out of the bed and into the fresh air it occurred to him that if he let himself fall it would be a miracle if his head were not injured, so he became afraid to carry on pushing himself forward the same way. And he could not knock himself out now at any price; better to stay in bed than lose consciousness.

It took just as much effort to get back to where he had been earlier, but when he lay there sighing, and was once more watching his legs as they struggled against each other even harder than before, if that was possible, he could think of no way of bringing peace and order to this chaos. He told himself once more that it was not possible for him to stay in bed and that the most sensible thing to do would be to get free of it in whatever way he could at whatever sacrifice. At the same time, though, he did not forget to remind himself that calm consideration was much better than rushing to desperate conclusions. At times like this he would direct his eyes to the window and look out as clearly as he could, but unfortunately, even the other side of the narrow street was enveloped in morning fog and the view had little confidence or cheer to offer him. "Seven o'clock, already", he said to himself when the clock struck again, "seven o'clock, and there's still a fog like this." And he lay there quietly a while longer, breathing lightly as if he perhaps expected the total stillness to bring things back to their real and natural state.

But then he said to himself: "Before it strikes quarter past seven I'll definitely have to have got properly out of bed. And by then somebody will have come round from work to ask what's happened to me as well, as they open up at work before seven o'clock." And so he set himself to the task of swinging the entire length of his body out of the bed all at the same time. If he succeeded in falling out of bed in this way and kept his head raised as he did so he could probably avoid injuring it. His back seemed to be quite hard, and probably nothing would happen to it falling onto the carpet. His main concern was for the loud noise he was bound to make, and which even through all the doors would probably raise concern if not alarm. But it was something that had to be risked.

When Gregor was already sticking half way out of the bed - the new method was more of a game than an effort, all he had to do was rock back and forth - it occurred to him how simple everything would be if somebody came to help him. Two strong people - he had his father and the maid in mind - would have been more than enough; they would only have to push their arms under the dome of his back, peel him away from the bed, bend down with the load and then be patient and careful as he swang over onto the floor, where, hopefully, the little legs would find a use. Should he really call for help though, even apart from the fact that all the doors were locked? Despite all the difficulty he was in, he could not suppress a smile at this thought.

After a while he had already moved so far across that it would have been hard for him to keep his balance if he rocked too hard. The time was now ten past seven and he would have to make a final decision very soon. Then there was a ring at the door of the flat. "That'll be someone from work", he said to himself, and froze very still, although his little legs only became all the more lively as they danced around. For a moment everything remained quiet. "They're not opening the door", Gregor said to himself, caught in some nonsensical hope. But then of course, the maid's firm steps went to the door as ever and opened it. Gregor only needed to hear the visitor's first words of greeting and he knew who it was - the chief clerk himself. Why did Gregor have to be the only one condemned to work for a company where they immediately became highly suspicious at the slightest shortcoming? Were all employees, every one of them, louts, was there not one of them who was faithful and devoted who would go so mad with pangs of conscience that he couldn't get out of bed if he didn't spend at least a couple of hours in the morning on company business? Was it really not enough to let one of the trainees make enquiries - assuming enquiries were even necessary - did the chief clerk have to come himself, and did they have to show the whole, innocent family that this was so suspicious that only the chief clerk could be trusted to have the wisdom to investigate it? And more because these thoughts had made him upset than through any proper decision, he swang himself with all his force out of the bed. There was a loud thump, but it wasn't really a loud noise. His fall was softened a little by the carpet, and Gregor's back was also more elastic than he had thought, which made the sound muffled and not too noticeable. He had not held his head carefully enough, though, and hit it as he fell; annoyed and in pain, he turned it and rubbed it against the carpet.

"Something's fallen down in there", said the chief clerk in the room on the left. Gregor tried to imagine whether something of the sort that had happened to him today could ever happen to the chief clerk too; you had to concede that it was possible. But as if in gruff reply to this question, the chief clerk's firm footsteps in his highly polished boots could now be heard in the adjoining room. From the room on his right, Gregor's sister whispered to him to let him know: "Gregor, the chief clerk is here." "Yes, I know", said Gregor to himself; but without daring to raise his voice loud enough for his sister to hear him.

early train. We don't know what to say to him. And anyway, he wants to speak to you personally. So please open up this door. I'm sure he'll be good enough to forgive the untidiness of your room." Then the chief clerk called "Good morning, Mr. Samsa". "He isn't well", said his mother to the chief clerk, while his father continued to speak through the door. "He isn't well, please believe me. Why else would Gregor have missed a train! The lad only ever thinks about the business. It nearly makes me cross the way he never goes out in the evenings; he's been in town for a week now but stayed home every evening. He sits with us in the kitchen and just reads the paper or studies train timetables. His idea of relaxation is working with his fretsaw. He's made a little frame, for instance, it only took him two or three evenings, you'll be amazed how nice it is; it's hanging up in his room; you'll see it as soon as Gregor opens the door. Anyway, I'm glad you're here; we wouldn't have been able to get Gregor to open the door by ourselves; he's so stubborn; and I'm sure he isn't well, he said this morning that he is, but he isn't." "I'll be there in a moment", said Gregor slowly and thoughtfully, but without moving so that he would not miss any word of the conversation. "Well I can't think of any other way of explaining it, Mrs. Samsa", said the chief clerk, "I hope it's nothing serious. But on the other hand, I must say that if we people in commerce ever become slightly unwell then, fortunately or unfortunately as you like, we simply have to overcome it because of business considerations." "Can the chief clerk come in to see you now then?", asked his father impatiently, knocking at the door again. "No", said Gregor. In the room on his right there followed a painful silence; in the room on his left his sister began to cry.

So why did his sister not go and join the others? She had probably only just got up and had not even begun to get dressed. And why was she crying? Was it because he had not got up, and had not let the chief clerk in, because he was in danger of losing his job and if that happened his boss would once more pursue their parents with the same demands as before? There was no need to worry about things like that yet. Gregor was still there and had not the slightest intention of abandoning his family. For the time being he just lay there on the carpet, and no-one who knew the condition he was in would seriously have expected him to let the chief clerk in. It was only a minor courtesy, and a suitable excuse could easily be found for it later on, it was not something for which Gregor could be sacked on the spot. And it seemed to Gregor much more sensible to leave him now in peace instead of disturbing him with talking at him and crying. But the others didn't know what was happening, they were worried, that would excuse their behaviour.

than yes or no for an answer, you are causing serious and unnecessary concern to your parents and you fail - and I mention this just by the way - you fail to carry out your business duties in a way that is quite unheard of. I'm speaking here on behalf of your parents and of your employer, and really must request a clear and immediate explanation. I am astonished, quite astonished. I thought I knew you as a calm and sensible person, and now you suddenly seem to be showing off with peculiar whims. This morning, your employer did suggest a possible reason for your failure to appear, it's true - it had to do with the money that was recently entrusted to you - but I came near to giving him my word of honour that that could not be the right explanation. But now that I see your incomprehensible stubbornness I no longer feel any wish whatsoever to intercede on your behalf. And nor is your position all that secure. I had originally intended to say all this to you in private, but since you cause me to waste my time here for no good reason I don't see why your parents should not also learn of it. Your turnover has been very unsatisfactory of late; I grant you that it's not the time of year to do especially good business, we recognise that; but there simply is no time of year to do no business at all, Mr. Samsa, we cannot allow there to be."

"But Sir", called Gregor, beside himself and forgetting all else in the excitement, "I'll open up immediately, just a moment. I'm slightly unwell, an attack of dizziness, I haven't been able to get up. I'm still in bed now. I'm quite fresh again now, though. I'm just getting out of bed. Just a moment. Be patient! It's not quite as easy as I'd thought. I'm quite alright now, though. It's shocking, what can suddenly happen to a person! I was quite alright last night, my parents know about it, perhaps better than me, I had a small symptom of it last night already. They must have noticed it. I don't know why I didn't let you know at work! But you always think you can get over an illness without staying at home. Please, don't make my parents suffer! There's no basis for any of the accusations you're making; nobody's ever said a word to me about any of these things. Maybe you haven't read the latest contracts I sent in. I'll set off with the eight o'clock train, as well, these few hours of rest have given me strength. You don't need to wait, sir; I'll be in the office soon after you, and please be so good as to tell that to the boss and recommend me to him!"

And while Gregor gushed out these words, hardly knowing what he was saying, he made his way over to the chest of drawers - this was easily done, probably because of the practise he had already had in bed - where he now tried to get himself upright. He really did want to open the door, really did want to let them see him and to speak with the chief clerk; the others were being so insistent, and he was curious to learn what they would say when they caught sight of him.

If they were shocked then it would no longer be Gregor's responsibility and he could rest. If, however, they took everything calmly he would still have no reason to be upset, and if he hurried he really could be at the station for eight o'clock. The first few times he tried to climb up on the smooth chest of drawers he just slid down again, but he finally gave himself one last swing and stood there upright; the lower part of his body was in serious pain but he no longer gave any attention to it. Now he let himself fall against the back of a nearby chair and held tightly to the edges of it with his little legs. By now he had also calmed down, and kept quiet so that he could listen to what the chief clerk was saying.

Gregor, in contrast, had become much calmer. So they couldn't understand his words any more, although they seemed clear enough to him, clearer than before - perhaps his ears had become used to the sound. They had realised, though, that there was something wrong with him, and were ready to help. The first response to his situation had been confident and wise, and that made him feel better. He felt that he had been drawn back in among people, and from the doctor and the locksmith he expected great and surprising achievements - although he did not really distinguish one from the other. Whatever was said next would be crucial, so, in order to make his voice as clear as possible, he coughed a little, but taking care to do this not too loudly as even this might well sound different from the way that a human coughs and he was no longer sure he could judge this for himself. Meanwhile, it had become very quiet in the next room. Perhaps his parents were sat at the table whispering with the chief clerk, or perhaps they were all pressed against the door and listening.

Gregor slowly pushed his way over to the door with the chair. Once there he let go of it and threw himself onto the door, holding himself upright against it using the adhesive on the tips of his legs. He rested there a little while to recover from the effort involved and then set himself to the task of turning the key in the lock with his mouth. He seemed, unfortunately, to have no proper teeth - how was he, then, to grasp the key? - but the lack of teeth was, of course, made up for with a very strong jaw; using the jaw, he really was able to start the key turning, ignoring the fact that he must have been causing some kind of damage as a brown fluid came from his mouth, flowed over the key and dripped onto the floor.

"Listen", said the chief clerk in the next room, "he's turning the key." Gregor was greatly encouraged by this; but they all should have been calling to him, his father and his mother too: "Well done, Gregor", they should have cried, "keep at it, keep hold of the lock!" And with the idea that they were all excitedly following his efforts, he bit on the key with all his strength, paying no attention to the pain he was causing himself. As the key turned round he turned around the lock with it, only holding himself upright with his mouth, and hung onto the key or pushed it down again with the whole weight of his body as needed. The clear sound of the lock as it snapped back was Gregor's sign that he could break his concentration, and as he regained his breath he said to himself: "So, I didn't need the locksmith after all". Then he lay his head on the handle of the door to open it completely.

Because he had to open the door in this way, it was already wide open before he could be seen. He had first to slowly turn himself around one of the double doors, and he had to do it very carefully if he did not want to fall flat on his back before entering the room. He was still occupied with this difficult movement, unable to pay attention to anything else, when he heard the chief clerk exclaim a loud "Oh!", which sounded like the soughing of the wind. Now he also saw him - he was the nearest to the door - his hand pressed against his open mouth and slowly retreating as if driven by a steady and invisible force. Gregor's mother, her hair still dishevelled from bed despite the chief clerk's being there, looked at his father. Then she unfolded her arms, took two steps forward towards Gregor and sank down onto the floor into her skirts that spread themselves out around her as her head disappeared down onto her breast. His father looked hostile, and clenched his fists as if wanting to knock Gregor back into his room. Then he looked uncertainly round the living room, covered his eyes with his hands and wept so that his powerful chest shook.

So Gregor did not go into the room, but leant against the inside of the other door which was still held bolted in place. In this way only half of his body could be seen, along with his head above it which he leant over to one side as he peered out at the others.

Meanwhile the day had become much lighter; part of the endless, grey-black building on the other side of the street - which was a hospital - could be seen quite clearly with the austere and regular line of windows piercing its facade; the rain was still falling, now throwing down large, individual droplets which hit the ground one at a time. The washing up from breakfast lay on the table; there was so much of it because, for Gregor's father, breakfast was the most important meal of the day and he would stretch it out for several hours as he sat reading a number of different newspapers. On the wall exactly opposite there was photograph of Gregor when he was a lieutenant in the army, his sword in his hand and a carefree smile on his face as he called forth respect for his uniform and bearing. The door to the entrance hall was open and as the front door of the flat was also open he could see onto the landing and the stairs where they began their way down below.

"Now, then", said Gregor, well aware that he was the only one to have kept calm, "I'll get dressed straight away now, pack up my samples and set off. Will you please just let me leave? You can see", he said to the chief clerk, "that I'm not stubborn and I like to do my job; being a commercial traveller is arduous but without travelling I couldn't earn my living. So where are you going, in to the office? Yes? Will you report everything accurately, then? It's quite possible for someone to be temporarily unable to work, but that's just the right time to remember what's been achieved in the past and consider that later on, once the difficulty has been removed, he will certainly work with all the more diligence and concentration. You're well aware that I'm seriously in debt to our employer as well as having to look after my parents and my sister, so that I'm trapped in a difficult situation, but I will work my way out of it again. Please don't make things any harder for me than they are already, and don't take sides against me at the office. I know that nobody likes the travellers. They think we earn an enormous wage as well as having a soft time of it. That's just prejudice but they have no particular reason to think better of it. But you, sir, you have a better overview than the rest of the staff, in fact, if I can say this in confidence, a better overview than the boss himself - it's very easy for a businessman like him to make mistakes about his employees and judge them more harshly than he should. And you're also well aware that we travellers spend almost the whole year away from the office, so that we can very easily fall victim to gossip and chance and groundless complaints, and it's almost impossible to defend yourself from that sort of thing, we don't usually even hear about them, or if at all it's when we arrive back home exhausted from a trip, and that's when we feel the harmful effects of what's been going on without even knowing what caused them. Please, don't go away, at least first say something to show that you grant that I'm at least partly right!"

But the chief clerk had turned away as soon as Gregor had started to speak, and, with protruding lips, only stared back at him over his trembling shoulders as he left. He did not keep still for a moment while Gregor was speaking, but moved steadily towards the door without taking his eyes off him. He moved very gradually, as if there had been some secret prohibition on leaving the room. It was only when he had reached the entrance hall that he made a sudden movement, drew his foot from the living room, and rushed forward in a panic. In the hall, he stretched his right hand far out towards the stairway as if out there, there were some supernatural force waiting to save him.

she had forgotten that the table was behind her with all the breakfast things on it; when she reached the table she sat quickly down on it without knowing what she was doing; without even seeming to notice that the coffee pot had been knocked over and a gush of coffee was pouring down onto the carpet.

"Mother, mother", said Gregor gently, looking up at her. He had completely forgotten the chief clerk for the moment, but could not help himself snapping in the air with his jaws at the sight of the flow of coffee. That set his mother screaming anew, she fled from the table and into the arms of his father as he rushed towards her. Gregor, though, had no time to spare for his parents now; the chief clerk had already reached the stairs; with his chin on the banister, he looked back for the last time. Gregor made a run for him; he wanted to be sure of reaching him; the chief clerk must have expected something, as he leapt down several steps at once and disappeared; his shouts resounding all around the staircase. The flight of the chief clerk seemed, unfortunately, to put Gregor's father into a panic as well. Until then he had been relatively self controlled, but now, instead of running after the chief clerk himself, or at least not impeding Gregor as he ran after him, Gregor's father seized the chief clerk's stick in his right hand (the chief clerk had left it behind on a chair, along with his hat and overcoat), picked up a large newspaper from the table with his left, and used them to drive Gregor back into his room, stamping his foot at him as he went. Gregor's appeals to his father were of no help, his appeals were simply not understood, however much he humbly turned his head his father merely stamped his foot all the harder. Across the room, despite the chilly weather, Gregor's mother had pulled open a window, leant far out of it and pressed her hands to her face. A strong draught of air flew in from the street towards the stairway, the curtains flew up, the newspapers on the table fluttered and some of them were blown onto the floor. Nothing would stop Gregor's father as he drove him back, making hissing noises at him like a wild man. Gregor had never had any practice in moving backwards and was only able to go very slowly. If Gregor had only been allowed to turn round he would have been back in his room straight away, but he was afraid that if he took the time to do that his father would become impatient, and there was the threat of a lethal blow to his back or head from the stick in his father's hand any moment. Eventually, though, Gregor realised that he had no choice as he saw, to his disgust, that he was quite incapable of going backwards in a straight line; so he began, as quickly as possible and with frequent anxious glances at his father, to turn himself round. It went very slowly, but perhaps his father was able to see his good intentions as he did nothing to hinder him, in fact now and then he used the tip of his stick to give directions from a distance as to which way to turn. If only his father would stop that unbearable hissing! It was making Gregor quite confused. When he had nearly finished turning round, still listening to that hissing, he made a mistake and turned himself back a little the way he had just come. He was pleased when he finally had his head in front of the doorway, but then saw that it was too narrow, and his body was too broad to get through it without further difficulty. In his present mood, it obviously did not occur to his father to open the other of the double doors so that Gregor would have enough space to get through. He was merely fixed on the idea that Gregor should be got back into his room as quickly as possible. Nor would he ever have allowed Gregor the time to get himself upright as preparation for getting through the doorway. What he did, making more noise than ever, was to drive Gregor forwards all the harder as if there had been nothing in the way; it sounded to Gregor as if there was now more than one father behind him; it was not a pleasant experience, and Gregor pushed himself into the doorway without regard for what might happen. One side of his body lifted itself, he lay at an angle in the doorway, one flank scraped on the white door and was painfully injured, leaving vile brown flecks on it, soon he was stuck fast and would not have been able to move at all by himself, the little legs along one side hung quivering in the air while those on the other side were pressed painfully against the ground. Then his father gave him a hefty shove from behind which released him from where he was held and sent him flying, and heavily bleeding, deep into his room. The door was slammed shut with the stick, then, finally, all was quiet.

II

It was not until it was getting dark that evening that Gregor awoke from his deep and coma-like sleep. He would have woken soon afterwards anyway even if he hadn't been disturbed, as he had had enough sleep and felt fully rested. But he had the impression that some hurried steps and the sound of the door leading into the front room being carefully shut had woken him. The light from the electric street lamps shone palely here and there onto the ceiling and tops of the furniture, but down below, where Gregor was, it was dark. He pushed himself over to the door, feeling his way clumsily with his antennae - of which he was now beginning to learn the value - in order to see what had been happening there. The whole of his left side seemed like one, painfully stretched scar, and he limped badly on his two rows of legs. One of the legs had been badly injured in the events of that morning - it was nearly a miracle that only one of them had been - and dragged along lifelessly.

Through the crack in the door, Gregor could see that the gas had been lit in the living room. His father at this time would normally be sat with his evening paper, reading it out in a loud voice to Gregor's mother, and sometimes to his sister, but there was now not a sound to be heard. Gregor's sister would often write and tell him about this reading, but maybe his father had lost the habit in recent times. It was so quiet all around too, even though there must have been somebody in the flat. "What a quiet life it is the family lead", said Gregor to himself, and, gazing into the darkness, felt a great pride that he was able to provide a life like that in such a nice home for his sister and parents. But what now, if all this peace and wealth and comfort should come to a horrible and frightening end? That was something that Gregor did not want to think about too much, so he started to move about, crawling up and down the room.

Once during that long evening, the door on one side of the room was opened very slightly and hurriedly closed again; later on the door on the other side did the same; it seemed that someone needed to enter the room but thought better of it. Gregor went and waited immediately by the door, resolved either to bring the timorous visitor into the room in some way or at least to find out who it was; but the door was opened no more that night and Gregor waited in vain. The previous morning while the doors were locked everyone had wanted to get in there to him, but now, now that he had opened up one of the doors and the other had clearly been unlocked some time during the day, no-one came, and the keys were in the other sides.

of time to think undisturbed about how he would have to re-arrange his life. For some reason, the tall, empty room where he was forced to remain made him feel uneasy as he lay there flat on the floor, even though he had been living in it for five years. Hardly aware of what he was doing other than a slight feeling of shame, he hurried under the couch. It pressed down on his back a little, and he was no longer able to lift his head, but he nonetheless felt immediately at ease and his only regret was that his body was too broad to get it all underneath.

He spent the whole night there. Some of the time he passed in a light sleep, although he frequently woke from it in alarm because of his hunger, and some of the time was spent in worries and vague hopes which, however, always led to the same conclusion: for the time being he must remain calm, he must show patience and the greatest consideration so that his family could bear the unpleasantness that he, in his present condition, was forced to impose on them.

Gregor soon had the opportunity to test the strength of his decisions, as early the next morning, almost before the night had ended, his sister, nearly fully dressed, opened the door from the front room and looked anxiously in. She did not see him straight away, but when she did notice him under the couch - he had to be somewhere, for God's sake, he couldn't have flown away - she was so shocked that she lost control of herself and slammed the door shut again from outside. But she seemed to regret her behaviour, as she opened the door again straight away and came in on tip-toe as if entering the room of someone seriously ill or even of a stranger. Gregor had pushed his head forward, right to the edge of the couch, and watched her. Would she notice that he had left the milk as it was, realise that it was not from any lack of hunger and bring him in some other food that was more suitable? If she didn't do it herself he would rather go hungry than draw her attention to it, although he did feel a terrible urge to rush forward from under the couch, throw himself at his sister's feet and beg her for something good to eat. However, his sister noticed the full dish immediately and looked at it and the few drops of milk splashed around it with some surprise. She immediately picked it up - using a rag, not her bare hands - and carried it out. Gregor was extremely curious as to what she would bring in its place, imagining the wildest possibilities, but he never could have guessed what his sister, in her goodness, actually did bring. In order to test his taste, she brought him a whole selection of things, all spread out on an old newspaper. There were old, half-rotten vegetables; bones from the evening meal, covered in white sauce that had gone hard; a few raisins and almonds; some cheese that Gregor had declared inedible two days before; a dry roll and some bread spread with butter and salt. As well as all that she had poured some water into the dish, which had probably been permanently set aside for Gregor's use, and placed it beside them. Then, out of consideration for Gregor's feelings, as she knew that he would not eat in front of her, she hurried out again and even turned the key in the lock so that Gregor would know he could make things as comfortable for himself as he liked. Gregor's little legs whirred, at last he could eat. What's more, his injuries must already have completely healed as he found no difficulty in moving. This amazed him, as more than a month earlier he had cut his finger slightly with a knife, he thought of how his finger had still hurt the day before yesterday. "Am I less sensitive than I used to be, then?", he thought, and was already sucking greedily at the cheese which had immediately, almost compellingly, attracted him much more than the other foods on the newspaper. Quickly one after another, his eyes watering with pleasure, he consumed the cheese, the vegetables and the sauce; the fresh foods, on the other hand, he didn't like at all, and even dragged the things he did want to eat a little way away from them because he couldn't stand the smell. Long after he had finished eating and lay lethargic in the same place, his sister slowly turned the key in the lock as a sign to him that he should withdraw. He was immediately startled, although he had been half asleep, and he hurried back under the couch. But he needed great self-control to stay there even for the short time that his sister was in the room, as eating so much food had rounded out his body a little and he could hardly breathe in that narrow space. Half suffocating, he watched with bulging eyes as his sister unselfconsciously took a broom and swept up the left-overs, mixing them in with the food he had not even touched at all as if it could not be used any more. She quickly dropped it all into a bin, closed it with its wooden lid, and carried everything out. She had hardly turned her back before Gregor came out again from under the couch and stretched himself.

This was how Gregor received his food each day now, once in the morning while his parents and the maid were still asleep, and the second time after everyone had eaten their meal at midday as his parents would sleep for a little while then as well, and Gregor's sister would send the maid away on some errand. Gregor's father and mother certainly did not want him to starve either, but perhaps it would have been more than they could stand to have any more experience of his feeding than being told about it, and perhaps his sister wanted to spare them what distress she could as they were indeed suffering enough.

thought that he could understand them, so he had to be content to hear his sister's sighs and appeals to the saints as she moved about his room. It was only later, when she had become a little more used to everything - there was, of course, no question of her ever becoming fully used to the situation - that Gregor would sometimes catch a friendly comment, or at least a comment that could be construed as friendly. "He's enjoyed his dinner today", she might say when he had diligently cleared away all the food left for him, or if he left most of it, which slowly became more and more frequent, she would often say, sadly, "now everything's just been left there again".

Although Gregor wasn't able to hear any news directly he did listen to much of what was said in the next rooms, and whenever he heard anyone speaking he would scurry straight to the appropriate door and press his whole body against it. There was seldom any conversation, especially at first, that was not about him in some way, even if only in secret. For two whole days, all the talk at every mealtime was about what they should do now; but even between meals they spoke about the same subject as there were always at least two members of the family at home - nobody wanted to be at home by themselves and it was out of the question to leave the flat entirely empty. And on the very first day the maid had fallen to her knees and begged Gregor's mother to let her go without delay. It was not very clear how much she knew of what had happened but she left within a quarter of an hour, tearfully thanking Gregor's mother for her dismissal as if she had done her an enormous service. She even swore emphatically not to tell anyone the slightest about what had happened, even though no-one had asked that of her.

Now Gregor's sister also had to help his mother with the cooking; although that was not so much bother as no-one ate very much. Gregor often heard how one of them would unsuccessfully urge another to eat, and receive no more answer than "no thanks, I've had enough" or something similar. No-one drank very much either. His sister would sometimes ask his father whether he would like a beer, hoping for the chance to go and fetch it herself. When his father then said nothing she would add, so that he would not feel selfish, that she could send the housekeeper for it, but then his father would close the matter with a big, loud "No", and no more would be said.

of the first good news that Gregor heard since he had first been incarcerated in his room. He had thought that nothing at all remained from his father's business, at least he had never told him anything different, and Gregor had never asked him about it anyway. Their business misfortune had reduced the family to a state of total despair, and Gregor's only concern at that time had been to arrange things so that they could all forget about it as quickly as possible. So then he started working especially hard, with a fiery vigour that raised him from a junior salesman to a travelling representative almost overnight, bringing with it the chance to earn money in quite different ways. Gregor converted his success at work straight into cash that he could lay on the table at home for the benefit of his astonished and delighted family. They had been good times and they had never come again, at least not with the same splendour, even though Gregor had later earned so much that he was in a position to bear the costs of the whole family, and did bear them. They had even got used to it, both Gregor and the family, they took the money with gratitude and he was glad to provide it, although there was no longer much warm affection given in return. Gregor only remained close to his sister now. Unlike him, she was very fond of music and a gifted and expressive violinist, it was his secret plan to send her to the conservatory next year even though it would cause great expense that would have to be made up for in some other way. During Gregor's short periods in town, conversation with his sister would often turn to the conservatory but it was only ever mentioned as a lovely dream that could never be realised. Their parents did not like to hear this innocent talk, but Gregor thought about it quite hard and decided he would let them know what he planned with a grand announcement of it on Christmas day.

That was the sort of totally pointless thing that went through his mind in his present state, pressed upright against the door and listening. There were times when he simply became too tired to continue listening, when his head would fall wearily against the door and he would pull it up again with a start, as even the slightest noise he caused would be heard next door and they would all go silent. "What's that he's doing now", his father would say after a while, clearly having gone over to the door, and only then would the interrupted conversation slowly be taken up again.

money that Gregor had been bringing home every month, keeping only a little for himself, so that that, too, had been accumulating. Behind the door, Gregor nodded with enthusiasm in his pleasure at this unexpected thrift and caution. He could actually have used this surplus money to reduce his father's debt to his boss, and the day when he could have freed himself from that job would have come much closer, but now it was certainly better the way his father had done things.

This money, however, was certainly not enough to enable the family to live off the interest; it was enough to maintain them for, perhaps, one or two years, no more. That's to say, it was money that should not really be touched but set aside for emergencies; money to live on had to be earned. His father was healthy but old, and lacking in self confidence. During the five years that he had not been working - the first holiday in a life that had been full of strain and no success - he had put on a lot of weight and become very slow and clumsy. Would Gregor's elderly mother now have to go and earn money? She suffered from asthma and it was a strain for her just to move about the home, every other day would be spent struggling for breath on the sofa by the open window. Would his sister have to go and earn money? She was still a child of seventeen, her life up till then had been very enviable, consisting of wearing nice clothes, sleeping late, helping out in the business, joining in with a few modest pleasures and most of all playing the violin. Whenever they began to talk of the need to earn money, Gregor would always first let go of the door and then throw himself onto the cool, leather sofa next to it, as he became quite hot with shame and regret.

He would often lie there the whole night through, not sleeping a wink but scratching at the leather for hours on end. Or he might go to all the effort of pushing a chair to the window, climbing up onto the sill and, propped up in the chair, leaning on the window to stare out of it. He had used to feel a great sense of freedom from doing this, but doing it now was obviously something more remembered than experienced, as what he actually saw in this way was becoming less distinct every day, even things that were quite near; he had used to curse the ever-present view of the hospital across the street, but now he could not see it at all, and if he had not known that he lived in Charlottenstrasse, which was a quiet street despite being in the middle of the city, he could have thought that he was looking out the window at a barren waste where the grey sky and the grey earth mingled inseparably. His observant sister only needed to notice the chair twice before she would always push it back to its exact position by the window after she had tidied up the room, and even left the inner pane of the window open from then on.

If Gregor had only been able to speak to his sister and thank her for all that she had to do for him it would have been easier for him to bear it; but as it was it caused him pain. His sister, naturally, tried as far as possible to pretend there was nothing burdensome about it, and the longer it went on, of course, the better she was able to do so, but as time went by Gregor was also able to see through it all so much better. It had even become very unpleasant for him, now, whenever she entered the room. No sooner had she come in than she would quickly close the door as a precaution so that no-one would have to suffer the view into Gregor's room, then she would go straight to the window and pull it hurriedly open almost as if she were suffocating. Even if it was cold, she would stay at the window breathing deeply for a little while. She would alarm Gregor twice a day with this running about and noise making; he would stay under the couch shivering the whole while, knowing full well that she would certainly have liked to spare him this ordeal, but it was impossible for her to be in the same room with him with the windows closed.

One day, about a month after Gregor's transformation when his sister no longer had any particular reason to be shocked at his appearance, she came into the room a little earlier than usual and found him still staring out the window, motionless, and just where he would be most horrible. In itself, his sister's not coming into the room would have been no surprise for Gregor as it would have been difficult for her to immediately open the window while he was still there, but not only did she not come in, she went straight back and closed the door behind her, a stranger would have thought he had threatened her and tried to bite her. Gregor went straight to hide himself under the couch, of course, but he had to wait until midday before his sister came back and she seemed much more uneasy than usual. It made him realise that she still found his appearance unbearable and would continue to do so, she probably even had to overcome the urge to flee when she saw the little bit of him that protruded from under the couch. One day, in order to spare her even this sight, he spent four hours carrying the bedsheets over to the couch on his back and arranged it so that he was completely covered and his sister would not be able to see him even if she bent down. If she did not think this sheet was necessary then all she had to do was take it off again, as it was clear enough that it was no pleasure for Gregor to cut himself off so completely. She left the sheet where it was. Gregor even thought he glimpsed a look of gratitude one time when he carefully looked out from under the sheet to see how his sister liked the new arrangement.

For the first fourteen days, Gregor's parents could not bring themselves to come into the room to see him. He would often hear them say how they appreciated all the new work his sister was doing

even though, before, they had seen her as a girl who was somewhat useless and frequently been annoyed with her. But now the two of them, father and mother, would often both wait outside the door of Gregor's room while his sister tidied up in there, and as soon as she went out again she would have to tell them exactly how everything looked, what Gregor had eaten, how he had behaved this time and whether, perhaps, any slight improvement could be seen. His mother also wanted to go in and visit Gregor relatively soon but his father and sister at first persuaded her against it. Gregor listened very closely to all this, and approved fully. Later, though, she had to be held back by force, which made her call out: "Let me go and see Gregor, he is my unfortunate son! Can't you understand I have to see him?", and Gregor would think to himself that maybe it would be better if his mother came in, not every day of course, but one day a week, perhaps; she could understand everything much better than his sister who, for all her courage, was still just a child after all, and really might not have had an adult's appreciation of the burdensome job she had taken on.

Gregor's wish to see his mother was soon realised. Out of consideration for his parents, Gregor wanted to avoid being seen at the window during the day, the few square meters of the floor did not give him much room to crawl about, it was hard to just lie quietly through the night, his food soon stopped giving him any pleasure at all, and so, to entertain himself, he got into the habit of crawling up and down the walls and ceiling. He was especially fond of hanging from the ceiling; it was quite different from lying on the floor; he could breathe more freely; his body had a light swing to it; and up there, relaxed and almost happy, it might happen that he would surprise even himself by letting go of the ceiling and landing on the floor with a crash. But now, of course, he had far better control of his body than before and, even with a fall as great as that, caused himself no damage. Very soon his sister noticed Gregor's new way of entertaining himself - he had, after all, left traces of the adhesive from his feet as he crawled about - and got it into her head to make it as easy as possible for him by removing the furniture that got in his way, especially the chest of drawers and the desk. Now, this was not something that she would be able to do by herself; she did not dare to ask for help from her father; the sixteen year old maid had carried on bravely since the cook had left but she certainly would not have helped in this, she had even asked to be allowed to keep the kitchen locked at all times and never to have to open the door unless it was especially important; so his sister had no choice but to choose some time when Gregor's father was not there and fetch his mother to help her. As she approached the room, Gregor could hear his mother express her joy, but once at the door she went silent. First, of course, his sister came in and looked round to see that everything in the room was alright; and only then did she let her mother enter. Gregor had hurriedly pulled the sheet down lower over the couch and put more folds into it so that everything really looked as if it had just been thrown down by chance. Gregor also refrained, this time, from spying out from under the sheet; he gave up the chance to see his mother until later and was simply glad that she had come. "You can come in, he can't be seen", said his sister, obviously leading her in by the hand. The old chest of drawers was too heavy for a pair of feeble women to be heaving about, but Gregor listened as they pushed it from its place, his sister always taking on the heaviest part of the work for herself and ignoring her mother's warnings that she would strain herself. This lasted a very long time. After labouring at it for fifteen minutes or more his mother said it would be better to leave the chest where it was, for one thing it was too heavy for them to get the job finished before Gregor's father got home and leaving it in the middle of the room it would be in his way even more, and for another thing it wasn't even sure that taking the furniture away would really be any help to him. She thought just the opposite; the sight of the bare walls saddened her right to her heart; and why wouldn't Gregor feel the same way about it, he'd been used to this furniture in his room for a long time and it would make him feel abandoned to be in an empty room like that. Then, quietly, almost whispering as if wanting Gregor (whose whereabouts she did not know) to hear not even the tone of her voice, as she was convinced that he did not understand her words, she added "and by taking the furniture away, won't it seem like we're showing that we've given up all hope of improvement and we're abandoning him to cope for himself? I think it'd be best to leave the room exactly the way it was before so that when Gregor comes back to us again he'll find everything unchanged and he'll be able to forget the time in between all the easier".

Hearing these words from his mother made Gregor realise that the lack of any direct human communication, along with the monotonous life led by the family during these two months, must have made him confused - he could think of no other way of explaining to himself why he had seriously wanted his room emptied out. Had he really wanted to transform his room into a cave, a warm room fitted out with the nice furniture he had inherited? That would have let him crawl around unimpeded in any direction, but it would also have let him quickly forget his past when he had still been human. He had come very close to forgetting, and it had only been the voice of his mother, unheard for so long, that had shaken him out of it. Nothing should be removed; everything had to stay; he could not do without the good influence the furniture had on his condition; and if the furniture made it difficult for him to crawl about mindlessly that was not a loss but a great advantage.

His sister, unfortunately, did not agree; she had become used to the idea, not without reason, that she was Gregor's spokesman to his parents about the things that concerned him. This meant that his mother's advice now was sufficient reason for her to insist on removing not only the chest of drawers and the desk, as she had thought at first, but all the furniture apart from the all-important couch. It was more than childish perversity, of course, or the unexpected confidence she had recently acquired, that made her insist; she had indeed noticed that Gregor needed a lot of room to crawl about in, whereas the furniture, as far as anyone could see, was of no use to him at all. Girls of that age, though, do become enthusiastic about things and feel they must get their way whenever they can. Perhaps this was what tempted Grete to make Gregor's situation seem even more shocking than it was so that she could do even more for him. Grete would probably be the only one who would dare enter a room dominated by Gregor crawling about the bare walls by himself.

So she refused to let her mother dissuade her. Gregor's mother already looked uneasy in his room, she soon stopped speaking and helped Gregor's sister to get the chest of drawers out with what strength she had. The chest of drawers was something that Gregor could do without if he had to, but the writing desk had to stay. Hardly had the two women pushed the chest of drawers, groaning, out of the room than Gregor poked his head out from under the couch to see what he could do about it. He meant to be as careful and considerate as he could, but, unfortunately, it was his mother who came back first while Grete in the next room had her arms round the chest, pushing and pulling at it from side to side by herself without, of course, moving it an inch. His mother was not used to the sight of Gregor, he might have made her ill, so Gregor hurried backwards to the far end of the couch. In his startlement, though, he was not able to prevent the sheet at its front from moving a little. It was enough to attract his mother's attention. She stood very still, remained there a moment, and then went back out to Grete.

clearly worn into the floor, the desk where he had done his homework as a business trainee, at high school, even while he had been at infant school--he really could not wait any longer to see whether the two women's intentions were good. He had nearly forgotten they were there anyway, as they were now too tired to say anything while they worked and he could only hear their feet as they stepped heavily on the floor.

So, while the women were leant against the desk in the other room catching their breath, he sallied out, changed direction four times not knowing what he should save first before his attention was suddenly caught by the picture on the wall - which was already denuded of everything else that had been on it - of the lady dressed in copious fur. He hurried up onto the picture and pressed himself against its glass, it held him firmly and felt good on his hot belly. This picture at least, now totally covered by Gregor, would certainly be taken away by no-one. He turned his head to face the door into the living room so that he could watch the women when they came back.

They had not allowed themselves a long rest and came back quite soon; Grete had put her arm around her mother and was nearly carrying her. "What shall we take now, then?", said Grete and looked around. Her eyes met those of Gregor on the wall. Perhaps only because her mother was there, she remained calm, bent her face to her so that she would not look round and said, albeit hurriedly and with a tremor in her voice: "Come on, let's go back in the living room for a while?" Gregor could see what Grete had in mind, she wanted to take her mother somewhere safe and then chase him down from the wall. Well, she could certainly try it! He sat unyielding on his picture. He would rather jump at Grete's face.

But Grete's words had made her mother quite worried, she stepped to one side, saw the enormous brown patch against the flowers of the wallpaper, and before she even realised it was Gregor that she saw screamed: "Oh God, oh God!" Arms outstretched, she fell onto the couch as if she had given up everything and stayed there immobile. "Gregor!" shouted his sister, glowering at him and shaking her fist. That was the first word she had spoken to him directly since his transformation. She ran into the other room to fetch some kind of smelling salts to bring her mother out of her faint; Gregor wanted to help too - he could save his picture later, although he stuck fast to the glass and had to pull himself off by force; then he, too, ran into the next room as if he could advise his sister like in the old days; but he had to just stand behind her doing nothing; she was looking into various bottles, he startled her when she turned round; a bottle fell to the ground and broke; a splinter cut Gregor's face, some kind of caustic medicine splashed all over him; now, without delaying any longer, Grete took hold of all the bottles she could and ran with them in to her mother; she slammed the door shut with her foot. So now Gregor was shut out from his mother, who, because of him, might be near to death; he could not open the door if he did not want to chase his sister away, and she had to stay with his mother; there was nothing for him to do but wait; and, oppressed with anxiety and self-reproach, he began to crawl about, he crawled over everything, walls, furniture, ceiling, and finally in his confusion as the whole room began to spin around him he fell down into the middle of the dinner table.

He lay there for a while, numb and immobile, all around him it was quiet, maybe that was a good sign. Then there was someone at the door. The maid, of course, had locked herself in her kitchen so that Grete would have to go and answer it. His father had arrived home. "What's happened?" were his first words; Grete's appearance must have made everything clear to him. She answered him with subdued voice, and openly pressed her face into his chest: "Mother's fainted, but she's better now. Gregor got out." "Just as I expected", said his father, "just as I always said, but you women wouldn't listen, would you." It was clear to Gregor that Grete had not said enough and that his father took it to mean that something bad had happened, that he was responsible for some act of violence. That meant Gregor would now have to try to calm his father, as he did not have the time to explain things to him even if that had been possible. So he fled to the door of his room and pressed himself against it so that his father, when he came in from the hall, could see straight away that Gregor had the best intentions and would go back into his room without delay, that it would not be necessary to drive him back but that they had only to open the door and he would disappear.

His father, though, was not in the mood to notice subtleties like that; "Ah!", he shouted as he came in, sounding as if he were both angry and glad at the same time. Gregor drew his head back from the door and lifted it towards his father. He really had not imagined his father the way he stood there now; of late, with his new habit of crawling about, he had neglected to pay attention to what was going on the rest of the flat the way he had done before. He really ought to have expected things to have changed, but still, still, was that really his father? The same tired man as used to be laying there entombed in his bed when Gregor came back from his business trips, who would receive him sitting in the armchair in his nightgown when he came back in the evenings; who was hardly even able to stand up but, as a sign of his pleasure, would just raise his arms and who, on the couple of times a year when they went for a walk together on a Sunday or public holiday wrapped up tightly in his overcoat between Gregor and his mother, would always labour his way forward a little more slowly than them, who were already walking slowly for his sake; who would place his stick down carefully and, if he wanted to say something would invariably stop and gather his companions around him. He was standing up straight enough now; dressed in a smart blue uniform with gold buttons, the sort worn by the employees at the banking institute; above the high, stiff collar of the coat his strong double-chin emerged; under the bushy eyebrows, his piercing, dark eyes looked out fresh and alert; his normally unkempt white hair was combed down painfully close to his scalp. He took his cap, with its gold monogram from, probably, some bank, and threw it in an arc right across the room onto the sofa, put his hands in his trouser pockets, pushing back the bottom of his long uniform coat, and, with look of determination, walked towards Gregor. He probably did not even know himself what he had in mind, but nonetheless lifted his feet unusually high. Gregor was amazed at the enormous size of the soles of his boots, but wasted no time with that - he knew full well, right from the first day of his new life, that his father thought it necessary to always be extremely strict with him. And so he ran up to his father, stopped when his father stopped, scurried forwards again when he moved, even slightly. In this way they went round the room several times without anything decisive happening, without even giving the impression of a chase as everything went so slowly. Gregor remained all this time on the floor, largely because he feared his father might see it as especially provoking if he fled onto the wall or ceiling. Whatever he did, Gregor had to admit that he certainly would not be able to keep up this running about for long, as for each step his father took he had to carry out countless movements. He became noticeably short of breath, even in his earlier life his lungs had not been very reliable. Now, as he lurched about in his efforts to muster all the strength he could for running he could hardly keep his eyes open; his thoughts became too slow for him to think of any other way of saving himself than running; he almost forgot that the walls were there for him to use although, here, they were concealed behind carefully carved furniture full of notches and protrusions - then, right beside him, lightly tossed, something flew down and rolled in front of him. It was an apple; then another one immediately flew at him; Gregor froze in shock; there was no longer any point in running as his father had decided to bombard him. He had filled his pockets with fruit from the bowl on the sideboard and now, without even taking the time for careful aim, threw one apple after another. These little, red apples rolled about on the floor, knocking into each other as if they had electric motors. An apple thrown without much force glanced against Gregor's back and slid off without doing any harm. Another one however, immediately following it, hit squarely and lodged in his back; Gregor wanted to drag himself away, as if he could remove the surprising, the incredible pain by changing his position; but he felt as if nailed to the spot and spread himself out, all his senses in confusion. The last thing he saw was the door of his room being pulled open, his sister was screaming, his mother ran out in front of her in her blouse (as his sister had taken off some of her clothes after she had fainted to make it easier for her to breathe), she ran to his father, her skirts unfastened and sliding one after another to the ground, stumbling over the skirts she pushed herself to his father, her arms around him, uniting herself with him totally - now Gregor lost his ability to see anything - her hands behind his father's head begging him to spare Gregor's life.

III

Because of his injuries, Gregor had lost much of his mobility - probably permanently. He had been reduced to the condition of an ancient invalid and it took him long, long minutes to crawl across his room - crawling over the ceiling was out of the question - but this deterioration in his condition was fully (in his opinion) made up for by the door to the living room being left open every evening.

He got into the habit of closely watching it for one or two hours before it was opened and then, lying in the darkness of his room where he could not be seen from the living room, he could watch the family in the light of the dinner table and listen to their conversation - with everyone's permission, in a way, and thus quite differently from before.

They no longer held the lively conversations of earlier times, of course, the ones that Gregor always thought about with longing when he was tired and getting into the damp bed in some small hotel room.

All of them were usually very quiet nowadays. Soon after dinner, his father would go to sleep in his chair; his mother and sister would urge each other to be quiet; his mother, bent deeply under the lamp, would sew fancy underwear for a fashion shop; his sister, who had taken a sales job, learned shorthand and French in the evenings so that she might be able to get a better position later on. Sometimes his father would wake up and say to Gregor's mother "you're doing so much sewing again today!", as if he did not know that he had been dozing - and then he would go back to sleep again while mother and sister would exchange a tired grin.

With a kind of stubbornness, Gregor's father refused to take his uniform off even at home; while his nightgown hung unused on its peg Gregor's father would slumber where he was, fully dressed, as if always ready to serve and expecting to hear the voice of his superior even here. The uniform had not been new to start with, but as a result of this it slowly became even shabbier despite the efforts of Gregor's mother and sister to look after it. Gregor would often spend the whole evening looking at all the stains on this coat, with its gold buttons always kept polished and shiny, while the old man in it would sleep, highly uncomfortable but peaceful.

As soon as it struck ten, Gregor's mother would speak gently to his father to wake him and try to persuade him to go to bed, as he couldn't sleep properly where he was and he really had to get his sleep if he was to be up at six to get to work. But since he had been in work he had become more obstinate and would always insist on staying longer at the table, even though he regularly fell asleep and it was then harder than ever to persuade him to exchange the chair for his bed. Then, however much mother and sister would importune him with little reproaches and warnings he would keep slowly shaking his head for a quarter of an hour with his eyes closed and refusing to get up. Gregor's mother would tug at his sleeve, whisper endearments into his ear, Gregor's sister would leave her work to help her mother, but nothing would have any effect on him. He would just sink deeper into his chair. Only when the two women took him under the arms he would abruptly open his eyes, look at them one after the other and say: "What a life! This is what peace I get in my old age!" And supported by the two women he would lift himself up carefully as if he were carrying the greatest load himself, let the women take him to the door, send them off and carry on by himself while Gregor's mother would throw down her needle and his sister her pen so that they could run after his father and continue being of help to him.

of wearing them at functions and celebrations. But the loudest complaint was that although the flat was much too big for their present circumstances, they could not move out of it, there was no imaginable way of transferring Gregor to the new address. He could see quite well, though, that there were more reasons than consideration for him that made it difficult for them to move, it would have been quite easy to transport him in any suitable crate with a few air holes in it; the main thing holding the family back from their decision to move was much more to do with their total despair, and the thought that they had been struck with a misfortune unlike anything experienced by anyone else they knew or were related to. They carried out absolutely everything that the world expects from poor people, Gregor's father brought bank employees their breakfast, his mother sacrificed herself by washing clothes for strangers, his sister ran back and forth behind her desk at the behest of the customers, but they just did not have the strength to do any more. And the injury in Gregor's back began to hurt as much as when it was new. After they had come back from taking his father to bed Gregor's mother and sister would now leave their work where it was and sit close together, cheek to cheek; his mother would point to Gregor's room and say "Close that door, Grete", and then, when he was in the dark again, they would sit in the next room and their tears would mingle, or they would simply sit there staring dry-eyed at the table.

Gregor hardly slept at all, either night or day. Sometimes he would think of taking over the family's affairs, just like before, the next time the door was opened; he had long forgotten about his boss and the chief clerk, but they would appear again in his thoughts, the salesmen and the apprentices, that stupid teaboy, two or three friends from other businesses, one of the chambermaids from a provincial hotel, a tender memory that appeared and disappeared again, a cashier from a hat shop for whom his attention had been serious but too slow, - all of them appeared to him, mixed together with strangers and others he had forgotten, but instead of helping him and his family they were all of them inaccessible, and he was glad when they disappeared. Other times he was not at all in the mood to look after his family, he was filled with simple rage about the lack of attention he was shown, and although he could think of nothing he would have wanted, he made plans of how he could get into the pantry where he could take all the things he was entitled to, even if he was not hungry. Gregor's sister no longer thought about how she could please him but would hurriedly push some food or other into his room with her foot before she rushed out to work in the morning and at midday, and in the evening she would sweep it away again with the broom, indifferent as to whether it had been eaten or - more often than not - had been left totally untouched. She still cleared up the room in the evening, but now she could not have been any quicker about it. Smears of dirt were left on the walls, here and there were little balls of dust and filth. At first, Gregor went into one of the worst of these places when his sister arrived as a reproach to her, but he could have stayed there for weeks without his sister doing anything about it; she could see the dirt as well as he could but she had simply decided to leave him to it. At the same time she became touchy in a way that was quite new for her and which everyone in the family understood - cleaning up Gregor's room was for her and her alone. Gregor's mother did once thoroughly clean his room, and needed to use several bucketfuls of water to do it - although that much dampness also made Gregor ill and he lay flat on the couch, bitter and immobile. But his mother was to be punished still more for what she had done, as hardly had his sister arrived home in the evening than she noticed the change in Gregor's room and, highly aggrieved, ran back into the living room where, despite her mother's raised and imploring hands, she broke into convulsive tears. Her father, of course, was startled out of his chair and the two parents looked on astonished and helpless; then they, too, became agitated; Gregor's father, standing to the right of his mother, accused her of not leaving the cleaning of Gregor's room to his sister; from her left, Gregor's sister screamed at her that she was never to clean Gregor's room again; while his mother tried to draw his father, who was beside himself with anger, into the bedroom; his sister, quaking with tears, thumped on the table with her small fists; and Gregor hissed in anger that no-one had even thought of closing the door to save him the sight of this and all its noise.

Gregor's sister was exhausted from going out to work, and looking after Gregor as she had done before was even more work for her, but even so his mother ought certainly not to have taken her place. Gregor, on the other hand, ought not to be neglected. Now, though, the charwoman was here. This elderly widow, with a robust bone structure that made her able to withstand the hardest of things in her long life, wasn't really repelled by Gregor. Just by chance one day, rather than any real curiosity, she opened the door to Gregor's room and found herself face to face with him. He was taken totally by surprise, no-one was chasing him but he began to rush to and fro while she just stood there in amazement with her hands crossed in front of her. From then on she never failed to open the door slightly every evening and morning and look briefly in on him. At first she would call to him as she did so with words that she probably considered friendly, such as "come on then, you old dung-beetle!", or "look at the old dung-beetle there!" Gregor never responded to being spoken to in that way, but just remained where he was without moving as if the door had never even been opened. If only they had told this charwoman to clean up his room every day instead of letting her disturb him for no reason whenever she felt like it! One day, early in the morning while a heavy rain struck the windowpanes, perhaps indicating that spring was coming, she began to speak to him in that way once again. Gregor was so resentful of it that he started to move toward her, he was slow and infirm, but it was like a kind of attack. Instead of being afraid, the charwoman just lifted up one of the chairs from near the door and stood there with her mouth open, clearly intending not to close her mouth until the chair in her hand had been slammed down into Gregor's back. "Aren't you coming any closer, then?", she asked when Gregor turned round again, and she calmly put the chair back in the corner.

Gregor had almost entirely stopped eating. Only if he happened to find himself next to the food that had been prepared for him he might take some of it into his mouth to play with it, leave it there a few hours and then, more often than not, spit it out again. At first he thought it was distress at the state of his room that stopped him eating, but he had soon got used to the changes made there. They had got into the habit of putting things into this room that they had no room for anywhere else, and there were now many such things as one of the rooms in the flat had been rented out to three gentlemen. These earnest gentlemen - all three of them had full beards, as Gregor learned peering through the crack in the door one day - were painfully insistent on things' being tidy. This meant not only in their own room but, since they had taken a room in this establishment, in the entire flat and especially in the kitchen. Unnecessary clutter was something they could not tolerate, especially if it was dirty. They had moreover brought most of their own furnishings and equipment with them. For this reason, many things had become superfluous which, although they could not be sold, the family did not wish to discard. All these things found their way into Gregor's room. The dustbins from the kitchen found their way in there too. The charwoman was always in a hurry, and anything she couldn't use for the time being she would just chuck in there. He, fortunately, would usually see no more than the object and the hand that held it. The woman most likely meant to fetch the things back out again when she had time and the opportunity, or to throw everything out in one go, but what actually happened was that they were left where they landed when they had first been thrown unless Gregor made his way through the junk and moved it somewhere else. At first he moved it because, with no other room free where he could crawl about, he was forced to, but later on he came to enjoy it although moving about in that way left him sad and tired to death, and he would remain immobile for hours afterwards.

all, often failed to make use of it when it was open and, without the family having noticed it, lain in his room in its darkest corner. One time, though, the charwoman left the door to the living room slightly open, and it remained open when the gentlemen who rented the room came in in the evening and the light was put on. They sat up at the table where, formerly, Gregor had taken his meals with his father and mother, they unfolded the serviettes and picked up their knives and forks. Gregor's mother immediately appeared in the doorway with a dish of meat and soon behind her came his sister with a dish piled high with potatoes. The food was steaming, and filled the room with its smell. The gentlemen bent over the dishes set in front of them as if they wanted to test the food before eating it, and the gentleman in the middle, who seemed to count as an authority for the other two, did indeed cut off a piece of meat while it was still in its dish, clearly wishing to establish whether it was sufficiently cooked or whether it should be sent back to the kitchen. It was to his satisfaction, and Gregor's mother and sister, who had been looking on anxiously, began to breathe again and smiled.

The family themselves ate in the kitchen. Nonetheless, Gregor's father came into the living room before he went into the kitchen, bowed once with his cap in his hand and did his round of the table. The gentlemen stood as one, and mumbled something into their beards. Then, once they were alone, they ate in near perfect silence. It seemed remarkable to Gregor that above all the various noises of eating their chewing teeth could still be heard, as if they had wanted to show Gregor that you need teeth in order to eat and it was not possible to perform anything with jaws that are toothless however nice they might be. "I'd like to eat something", said Gregor anxiously, "but not anything like they're eating. They do feed themselves. And here I am, dying!"

Throughout all this time, Gregor could not remember having heard the violin being played, but this evening it began to be heard from the kitchen. The three gentlemen had already finished their meal, the one in the middle had produced a newspaper, given a page to each of the others, and now they leant back in their chairs reading them and smoking. When the violin began playing they became attentive, stood up and went on tip-toe over to the door of the hallway where they stood pressed against each other. Someone must have heard them in the kitchen, as Gregor's father called out: "Is the playing perhaps unpleasant for the gentlemen? We can stop it straight away." "On the contrary", said the middle gentleman, "would the young lady not like to come in and play for us here in the room, where it is, after all, much more cosy and comfortable?" "Oh yes, we'd love to", called back Gregor's father as if he had been the violin player himself. The gentlemen stepped back into the room and waited.

Gregor's father soon appeared with the music stand, his mother with the music and his sister with the violin. She calmly prepared everything for her to begin playing; his parents, who had never rented a room out before and therefore showed an exaggerated courtesy towards the three gentlemen, did not even dare to sit on their own chairs; his father leant against the door with his right hand pushed in between two buttons on his uniform coat; his mother, though, was offered a seat by one of the gentlemen and sat - leaving the chair where the gentleman happened to have placed it - out of the way in a corner.

His sister began to play; father and mother paid close attention, one on each side, to the movements of her hands. Drawn in by the playing, Gregor had dared to come forward a little and already had his head in the living room. Before, he had taken great pride in how considerate he was but now it hardly occurred to him that he had become so thoughtless about the others. What's more, there was now all the more reason to keep himself hidden as he was covered in the dust that lay everywhere in his room and flew up at the slightest movement; he carried threads, hairs, and remains of food about on his back and sides; he was much too indifferent to everything now to lay on his back and wipe himself on the carpet like he had used to do several times a day. And despite this condition, he was not too shy to move forward a little onto the immaculate floor of the living room.

No-one noticed him, though. The family was totally preoccupied with the violin playing; at first, the three gentlemen had put their hands in their pockets and come up far too close behind the music stand to look at all the notes being played, and they must have disturbed Gregor's sister, but soon, in contrast with the family, they withdrew back to the window with their heads sunk and talking to each other at half volume, and they stayed by the window while Gregor's father observed them anxiously. It really now seemed very obvious that they had expected to hear some beautiful or entertaining violin playing but had been disappointed, that they had had enough of the whole performance and it was only now out of politeness that they allowed their peace to be disturbed. It was especially unnerving, the way they all blew the smoke from their cigarettes upwards from their mouth and noses. Yet Gregor's sister was playing so beautifully. Her face was leant to one side, following the lines of music with a careful and melancholy expression. Gregor crawled a little further forward, keeping his head close to the ground so that he could meet her eyes if the chance came. Was he an animal if music could captivate him so? It seemed to him that he was being shown the way to the unknown nourishment he had been yearning for. He was determined to make his way forward to his sister and tug at her skirt to show her she might come into his room with her violin, as no-one appreciated her playing here as much as he would. He never wanted to let her out of his room, not while he lived, anyway; his shocking appearance should, for once, be of some use to him; he wanted to be at every door of his room at once to hiss and spit at the attackers; his sister should not be forced to stay with him, though, but stay of her own free will; she would sit beside him on the couch with her ear bent down to him while he told her how he had always intended to send her to the conservatory, how he would have told everyone about it last Christmas - had Christmas really come and gone already? - if this misfortune hadn't got in the way, and refuse to let anyone dissuade him from it. On hearing all this, his sister would break out in tears of emotion, and Gregor would climb up to her shoulder and kiss her neck, which, since she had been going out to work, she had kept free without any necklace or collar.

"Mr. Samsa!", shouted the middle gentleman to Gregor's father, pointing, without wasting any more words, with his forefinger at Gregor as he slowly moved forward. The violin went silent, the middle of the three gentlemen first smiled at his two friends, shaking his head, and then looked back at Gregor. His father seemed to think it more important to calm the three gentlemen before driving Gregor out, even though they were not at all upset and seemed to think Gregor was more entertaining than the violin playing had been. He rushed up to them with his arms spread out and attempted to drive them back into their room at the same time as trying to block their view of Gregor with his body. Now they did become a little annoyed, and it was not clear whether it was his father's behaviour that annoyed them or the dawning realisation that they had had a neighbour like Gregor in the next room without knowing it. They asked Gregor's father for explanations, raised their arms like he had, tugged excitedly at their beards and moved back towards their room only very slowly. Meanwhile Gregor's sister had overcome the despair she had fallen into when her playing was suddenly interrupted. She had let her hands drop and let violin and bow hang limply for a while but continued to look at the music as if still playing, but then she suddenly pulled herself together, lay the instrument on her mother's lap who still sat laboriously struggling for breath where she was, and ran into the next room which, under pressure from her father, the three gentlemen were more quickly moving toward. Under his sister's experienced hand, the pillows and covers on the beds flew up and were put into order and she had already finished making the beds and slipped out again before the three gentlemen had reached the room. Gregor's father seemed so obsessed with what he was doing that he forgot all the respect he owed to his tenants. He urged them and pressed them until, when he was already at the door of the room, the middle of the three gentlemen shouted like thunder and stamped his foot and thereby brought Gregor's father to a halt. "I declare here and now", he said, raising his hand and glancing at Gregor's mother and sister to gain their attention too, "that with regard to the repugnant conditions that prevail in this flat and with this family" - here he looked briefly but decisively at the floor - "I give immediate notice on my room. For the days that I have been living here I will, of course, pay nothing at all, on the contrary I will consider whether to proceed with some kind of action for damages from you, and believe me it would be very easy to set out the grounds for such an action." He was silent and looked straight ahead as if waiting for something. And indeed, his two friends joined in with the words: "And we also give immediate notice." With that, he took hold of the door handle and slammed the door.

Gregor's father staggered back to his seat, feeling his way with his hands, and fell into it; it looked as if he was stretching himself out for his usual evening nap but from the uncontrolled way his head kept nodding it could be seen that he was not sleeping at all. Throughout all this, Gregor had lain still where the three gentlemen had first seen him. His disappointment at the failure of his plan, and perhaps also because he was weak from hunger, made it impossible for him to move. He was sure that everyone would turn on him any moment, and he waited. He was not even startled out of this state when the violin on his mother's lap fell from her trembling fingers and landed loudly on the floor.

"Father, Mother", said his sister, hitting the table with her hand as introduction, "we can't carry on like this. Maybe you can't see it, but I can. I don't want to call this monster my brother, all I can say is: we have to try and get rid of it. We've done all that's humanly possible to look after it and be patient, I don't think anyone could accuse us of doing anything wrong."

"She's absolutely right", said Gregor's father to himself. His mother, who still had not had time to catch her breath, began to cough dully, her hand held out in front of her and a deranged expression in her eyes.

Gregor's sister rushed to his mother and put her hand on her forehead. Her words seemed to give Gregor's father some more definite ideas. He sat upright, played with his uniform cap between the plates left by the three gentlemen after their meal, and occasionally looked down at Gregor as he lay there immobile.

to be tortured like this, we can't endure it. I can't endure it any more." And she broke out so heavily in tears that they flowed down the face of her mother, and she wiped them away with mechanical hand movements.

"My child", said her father with sympathy and obvious understanding, "what are we to do?"

His sister just shrugged her shoulders as a sign of the helplessness and tears that had taken hold of her, displacing her earlier certainty.

"If he could just understand us", said his father almost as a question; his sister shook her hand vigorously through her tears as a sign that of that there was no question.

"It's got to go", shouted his sister, "that's the only way, Father. You've got to get rid of the idea that that's Gregor. We've only harmed ourselves by believing it for so long. How can that be Gregor? If it were Gregor he would have seen long ago that it's not possible for human beings to live with an animal like that and he would have gone of his own free will. We wouldn't have a brother any more, then, but we could carry on with our lives and remember him with respect. As it is this animal is persecuting us, it's driven out our tenants, it obviously wants to take over the whole flat and force us to sleep on the streets. Father, look, just look", she suddenly screamed, "he's starting again!" In her alarm, which was totally beyond Gregor's comprehension, his sister even abandoned his mother as she pushed herself vigorously out of her chair as if more willing to sacrifice her own mother than stay anywhere near Gregor. She rushed over to behind her father, who had become excited merely because she was and stood up half raising his hands in front of Gregor's sister as if to protect her.

"Maybe now they'll let me turn round", thought Gregor and went back to work. He could not help panting loudly with the effort and had sometimes to stop and take a rest. No-one was making him rush any more, everything was left up to him. As soon as he had finally finished turning round he began to move straight ahead. He was amazed at the great distance that separated him from his room, and could not understand how he had covered that distance in his weak state a little while before and almost without noticing it. He concentrated on crawling as fast as he could and hardly noticed that there was not a word, not any cry, from his family to distract him. He did not turn his head until he had reached the doorway. He did not turn it all the way round as he felt his neck becoming stiff, but it was nonetheless enough to see that nothing behind him had changed, only his sister had stood up. With his last glance he saw that his mother had now fallen completely asleep.

"What now, then?", Gregor asked himself as he looked round in the darkness. He soon made the discovery that he could no longer move at all. This was no surprise to him, it seemed rather that being able to actually move around on those spindly little legs until then was unnatural. He also felt relatively comfortable. It is true that his entire body was aching, but the pain seemed to be slowly getting weaker and weaker and would finally disappear altogether. He could already hardly feel the decayed apple in his back or the inflamed area around it, which was entirely covered in white dust. He thought back of his family with emotion and love. If it was possible, he felt that he must go away even more strongly than his sister. He remained in this state of empty and peaceful rumination until he heard the clock tower strike three in the morning. He watched as it slowly began to get light everywhere outside the window too. Then, without his willing it, his head sank down completely, and his last breath flowed weakly from his nostrils.

arrived and from then on it was impossible to sleep in peace - she made her usual brief look in on Gregor and at first found nothing special. She thought he was laying there so still on purpose, playing the martyr; she attributed all possible understanding to him. She happened to be holding the long broom in her hand, so she tried to tickle Gregor with it from the doorway. When she had no success with that she tried to make a nuisance of herself and poked at him a little, and only when she found she could shove him across the floor with no resistance at all did she start to pay attention. She soon realised what had really happened, opened her eyes wide, whistled to herself, but did not waste time to yank open the bedroom doors and shout loudly into the darkness of the bedrooms: "Come and 'ave a look at this, it's dead, just lying there, stone dead!"

Mr. and Mrs. Samsa sat upright there in their marriage bed and had to make an effort to get over the shock caused by the cleaner before they could grasp what she was saying. But then, each from his own side, they hurried out of bed. Mr. Samsa threw the blanket over his shoulders, Mrs. Samsa just came out in her nightdress; and that is how they went into Gregor's room. On the way they opened the door to the living room where Grete had been sleeping since the three gentlemen had moved in; she was fully dressed as if she had never been asleep, and the paleness of her face seemed to confirm this. "Dead?", asked Mrs. Samsa, looking at the charwoman enquiringly, even though she could have checked for herself and could have known it even without checking. "That's what I said", replied the cleaner, and to prove it she gave Gregor's body another shove with the broom, sending it sideways across the floor. Mrs. Samsa made a movement as if she wanted to hold back the broom, but did not complete it. "Now then", said Mr. Samsa, "let's give thanks to God for that". He crossed himself, and the three women followed his example. Grete, who had not taken her eyes from the corpse, said: "Just look how thin he was. He didn't eat anything for so long. The food came out again just the same as when it went in". Gregor's body was indeed completely dried up and flat, they had not seen it until then, but now he was not lifted up on his little legs, nor did he do anything to make them look away.

"Grete, come with us in here for a little while", said Mrs. Samsa with a pained smile, and Grete followed her parents into the bedroom but not without looking back at the body. The cleaner shut the door and opened the window wide. Although it was still early in the morning the fresh air had something of warmth mixed in with it. It was already the end of March, after all.

The three gentlemen stepped out of their room and looked round in amazement for their breakfasts; they had been forgotten about. "Where is our breakfast?", the middle gentleman asked the cleaner

irritably. She just put her finger on her lips and made a quick and silent sign to the men that they might like to come into Gregor's room. They did so, and stood around Gregor's corpse with their hands in the pockets of their well-worn coats. It was now quite light in the room.

Then the door of the bedroom opened and Mr. Samsa appeared in his uniform with his wife on one arm and his daughter on the other. All of them had been crying a little; Grete now and then pressed her face against her father's arm.

"Leave my home. Now!", said Mr. Samsa, indicating the door and without letting the women from him. "What do you mean?", asked the middle of the three gentlemen somewhat disconcerted, and he smiled sweetly. The other two held their hands behind their backs and continually rubbed them together in gleeful anticipation of a loud quarrel which could only end in their favour. "I mean just what I said", answered Mr. Samsa, and, with his two companions, went in a straight line towards the man. At first, he stood there still, looking at the ground as if the contents of his head were rearranging themselves into new positions. "Alright, we'll go then", he said, and looked up at Mr. Samsa as if he had been suddenly overcome with humility and wanted permission again from Mr. Samsa for his decision. Mr. Samsa merely opened his eyes wide and briefly nodded to him several times. At that, and without delay, the man actually did take long strides into the front hallway; his two friends had stopped rubbing their hands some time before and had been listening to what was being said. Now they jumped off after their friend as if taken with a sudden fear that Mr. Samsa might go into the hallway in front of them and break the connection with their leader. Once there, all three took their hats from the stand, took their sticks from the holder, bowed without a word and left the premises. Mr. Samsa and the two women followed them out onto the landing; but they had had no reason to mistrust the men's intentions and as they leaned over the landing they saw how the three gentlemen made slow but steady progress down the many steps. As they turned the corner on each floor they disappeared and would reappear a few moments later; the further down they went, the more that the Samsa family lost interest in them; when a butcher's boy, proud of posture with his tray on his head, passed them on his way up and came nearer than they were, Mr. Samsa and the women came away from the landing and went, as if relieved, back into the flat.

They decided the best way to make use of that day was for relaxation and to go for a walk; not only had they earned a break from work but they were in serious need of it. So they sat at the table and wrote three letters of excusal, Mr. Samsa to his employers, Mrs. Samsa to her contractor and Grete to her principal. The cleaner came in

while they were writing to tell them she was going, she'd finished her work for that morning. The three of them at first just nodded without looking up from what they were writing, and it was only when the cleaner still did not seem to want to leave that they looked up in irritation. "Well?", asked Mr. Samsa. The charwoman stood in the doorway with a smile on her face as if she had some tremendous good news to report, but would only do it if she was clearly asked to. The almost vertical little ostrich feather on her hat, which had been a source of irritation to Mr. Samsa all the time she had been working for them, swayed gently in all directions. "What is it you want then?", asked Mrs. Samsa, whom the cleaner had the most respect for. "Yes", she answered, and broke into a friendly laugh that made her unable to speak straight away, "well then, that thing in there, you needn't worry about how you're going to get rid of it. That's all been sorted out." Mrs. Samsa and Grete bent down over their letters as if intent on continuing with what they were writing; Mr. Samsa saw that the cleaner wanted to start describing everything in detail but, with outstretched hand, he made it quite clear that she was not to. So, as she was prevented from telling them all about it, she suddenly remembered what a hurry she was in and, clearly peeved, called out "Cheerio then, everyone", turned round sharply and left, slamming the door terribly as she went.

After that, the three of them left the flat together, which was something they had not done for months, and took the tram out to the open country outside the town. They had the tram, filled with warm sunshine, all to themselves. Leant back comfortably on their seats, they discussed their prospects and found that on closer examination they were not at all bad - until then they had never asked each other about their work but all three had jobs which were very good and held particularly good promise for the future. The greatest improvement for the time being, of course, would be achieved quite easily by moving house; what they needed now was a flat that was smaller and cheaper than the current one which had been chosen by Gregor, one that was in a better location and, most of all, more practical. All the time, Grete was becoming livelier. With all the worry they had been having of late her cheeks had become pale, but, while they were talking, Mr. and Mrs. Samsa were struck, almost simultaneously, with the thought of how their daughter was blossoming into a well built and beautiful young lady. They became quieter. Just from each other's glance and almost without knowing it they agreed that it would soon be time to find a good man for her. And, as if in confirmation of their new dreams and good intentions, as soon as they reached their destination Grete was the first to get up and stretch out her young body.

Creating the works from public domain print editions means that no one owns a United States copyright in these works, so the Foundation (and you!) can copy and distribute it in the United States without permission and without paying copyright royalties. Special rules, set forth in the General Terms of Use part of this license, apply to copying and distributing Project Gutenberg-tm electronic works to protect the PROJECT GUTENBERG-tm concept and trademark. Project Gutenberg is a registered trademark, and may not be used if you charge for the eBooks, unless you receive specific permission. If you do not charge anything for copies of this eBook, complying with the rules is very easy. You may use this eBook for nearly any purpose such as creation of derivative works, reports, performances and research. They may be modified and printed and given away--you may do practically ANYTHING with public domain eBooks. Redistribution is subject to the trademark license, especially commercial redistribution.

THE FULL PROJECT GUTENBERG LICENSE PLEASE READ THIS BEFORE YOU DISTRIBUTE OR USE THIS WORK

To protect the Project Gutenberg-tm mission of promoting the free distribution of electronic works, by using or distributing this work (or any other work associated in any way with the phrase "Project Gutenberg"), you agree to comply with all the terms of the Full Project Gutenberg-tm License (available with this file or online at <http://gutenberg.net/license>).

Section 1. General Terms of Use and Redistributing Project Gutenberg-tm electronic works

1.A. By reading or using any part of this Project Gutenberg-tm electronic work, you indicate that you have read, understand, agree to and accept all the terms of this license and intellectual property (trademark/copyright) agreement. If you do not agree to abide by all the terms of this agreement, you must cease using and return or destroy all copies of Project Gutenberg-tm electronic works in your possession. If you paid a fee for obtaining a copy of or access to a Project Gutenberg-tm electronic work and you do not agree to be bound by the terms of this agreement, you may obtain a refund from the person or entity to whom you paid the fee as set forth in paragraph 1.E.8.

1.B. "Project Gutenberg" is a registered trademark. It may only be used on or associated in any way with an electronic work by people who agree to be bound by the terms of this agreement. There are a few things that you can do with most Project Gutenberg-tm electronic works even without complying with the full terms of this agreement. See paragraph 1.C below. There are a lot of things you can do with Project Gutenberg-tm electronic works if you follow the terms of this agreement and help preserve free future access to Project Gutenberg-tm electronic works. See paragraph 1.E below.

1.C. The Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation ("the Foundation" or PGLAF), owns a compilation copyright in the collection of Project Gutenberg-tm electronic works. Nearly all the individual works in the collection are in the public domain in the United States. If an individual work is in the public domain in the United States and you are located in the United States, we do not claim a right to prevent you from copying, distributing, performing, displaying or creating derivative works based on the work as long as all references to Project Gutenberg are removed. Of course, we hope that you will support the Project Gutenberg-tm mission of promoting free access to electronic works by freely sharing Project Gutenberg-tm works in compliance with the terms of this agreement for keeping the Project Gutenberg-tm name associated with the work. You can easily comply with the terms of this agreement by keeping this work in the same format with its attached full Project Gutenberg-tm License when you share it without charge with others. This particular work is one of the few copyrighted individual works included with the permission of the copyright holder. Information on the copyright owner for this particular work and the terms of use imposed by the copyright holder on this work are set forth at the beginning of this work.

1.D. The copyright laws of the place where you are located also govern what you can do with this work. Copyright laws in most countries are in a constant state of change. If you are outside the United States, check the laws of your country in addition to the terms of this agreement before downloading, copying, displaying, performing, distributing or creating derivative works based on this work or any other Project Gutenberg-tm work. The Foundation makes no representations concerning the copyright status of any work in any country outside the United States.

1.E. Unless you have removed all references to Project Gutenberg:

1.E.1. The following sentence, with active links to, or other immediate access to, the full Project Gutenberg-tm License must appear prominently whenever any copy of a Project Gutenberg-tm work (any work on which the phrase "Project Gutenberg" appears, or with which the phrase "Project Gutenberg" is associated) is accessed, displayed, performed, viewed, copied or distributed:

This eBook is for the use of anyone anywhere at no cost and with almost no restrictions whatsoever. You may copy it, give it away or re-use it under the terms of the Project Gutenberg License included with this eBook or online at www.gutenberg.net

1.E.3. If an individual Project Gutenberg-tm electronic work is posted with the permission of the copyright holder, your use and distribution must comply with both paragraphs 1.E.1 through 1.E.7 and any additional terms imposed by the copyright holder. Additional terms will be linked to the Project Gutenberg-tm License for all works posted with the permission of the copyright holder found at the beginning of this work.

1.E.4. Do not unlink or detach or remove the full Project Gutenberg-tm License terms from this work, or any files containing a part of this work or any other work associated with Project Gutenberg-tm.

1.E.6. You may convert to and distribute this work in any binary, compressed, marked up, nonproprietary or proprietary form, including any word processing or hypertext form. However, if you provide access to or distribute copies of a Project Gutenberg-tm work in a format other than "Plain Vanilla ASCII" or other format used in the official version posted on the official Project Gutenberg-tm web site (www.gutenberg.net), you must, at no additional cost, fee or expense to the user, provide a copy, a means of exporting a copy, or a means of obtaining a copy upon request, of the work in its original "Plain Vanilla ASCII" or other form. Any alternate format must include the full Project Gutenberg-tm License as specified in paragraph 1.E.1.

- You provide a full refund of any money paid by a user who notifies you in writing (or by e-mail) within 30 days of receipt that s/he does not agree to the terms of the full Project Gutenberg-tm License. You must require such a user to return or destroy all copies of the works possessed in a physical medium and discontinue all use of and all access to other copies of Project Gutenberg-tm works.

- You provide, in accordance with paragraph 1.F.3, a full refund of any money paid for a work or a replacement copy, if a defect in the electronic work is discovered and reported to you within 90 days of receipt of the work.
- You comply with all other terms of this agreement for free distribution of Project Gutenberg-tm works.

1.E.9. If you wish to charge a fee or distribute a Project Gutenberg-tm electronic work or group of works on different terms than are set forth in this agreement, you must obtain permission in writing from both the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation and Michael Hart, the owner of the Project Gutenberg-tm trademark. Contact the Foundation as set forth in Section 3 below.

1.F.

1.F.1. Project Gutenberg volunteers and employees expend considerable effort to identify, do copyright research on, transcribe and proofread public domain works in creating the Project Gutenberg-tm collection. Despite these efforts, Project Gutenberg-tm electronic works, and the medium on which they may be stored, may contain "Defects," such as, but not limited to, incomplete, inaccurate or corrupt data, transcription errors, a copyright or other intellectual property infringement, a defective or damaged disk or other medium, a computer virus, or computer codes that damage or cannot be read by your equipment.

1.F.2. LIMITED WARRANTY, DISCLAIMER OF DAMAGES - Except for the "Right of Replacement or Refund" described in paragraph 1.F.3, the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, the owner of the Project Gutenberg-tm trademark, and any other party distributing a Project Gutenberg-tm electronic work under this agreement, disclaim all liability to you for damages, costs and expenses, including legal fees. YOU AGREE THAT YOU HAVE NO REMEDIES FOR NEGLIGENCE, STRICT LIABILITY, BREACH OF WARRANTY OR BREACH OF CONTRACT EXCEPT THOSE PROVIDED IN PARAGRAPH F3. YOU AGREE THAT THE FOUNDATION, THE TRADEMARK OWNER, AND ANY DISTRIBUTOR UNDER THIS AGREEMENT WILL NOT BE LIABLE TO YOU FOR ACTUAL, DIRECT, INDIRECT, CONSEQUENTIAL, PUNITIVE OR INCIDENTAL DAMAGES EVEN IF YOU GIVE NOTICE OF THE POSSIBILITY OF SUCH DAMAGE.

1.F.3. LIMITED RIGHT OF REPLACEMENT OR REFUND - If you discover a defect in this electronic work within 90 days of receiving it, you can receive a refund of the money (if any) you paid for it by sending a written explanation to the person you received the work from. If you received the work on a physical medium, you must return the medium with your written explanation. The person or entity that provided you with the defective work may elect to provide a replacement copy in lieu of a refund. If you received the work electronically, the person or entity providing it to you may choose to give you a second opportunity to receive the work electronically in lieu of a refund. If the second copy is also defective, you may demand a refund in writing without further opportunities to fix the problem.

1.F.5. Some states do not allow disclaimers of certain implied warranties or the exclusion or limitation of certain types of damages. If any disclaimer or limitation set forth in this agreement violates the law of the state applicable to this agreement, the agreement shall be interpreted to make the maximum disclaimer or limitation permitted by the applicable state law. The invalidity or unenforceability of any provision of this agreement shall not void the remaining provisions.

1.F.6. INDEMNITY - You agree to indemnify and hold the Foundation, the trademark owner, any agent or employee of the Foundation, anyone providing copies of Project Gutenberg-tm electronic works in accordance with this agreement, and any volunteers associated with the production, promotion and distribution of Project Gutenberg-tm electronic works, harmless from all liability, costs and expenses, including legal fees, that arise directly or indirectly from any of the following which you do or cause to occur: (a) distribution of this or any Project Gutenberg-tm work, (b) alteration, modification, or additions or deletions to any Project Gutenberg-tm work, and (c) any Defect you cause.

Section 2. Information about the Mission of Project Gutenberg-tm

Project Gutenberg-tm is synonymous with the free distribution of electronic works in formats readable by the widest variety of computers including obsolete, old, middle-aged and new computers. It exists because of the efforts of hundreds of volunteers and donations from people in all walks of life.

goals and ensuring that the Project Gutenberg-tm collection will remain freely available for generations to come. In 2001, the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation was created to provide a secure and permanent future for Project Gutenberg-tm and future generations. To learn more about the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation and how your efforts and donations can help, see Sections 3 and 4 and the Foundation web page at <http://www.pglaf.org>.

Section 3. Information about the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation

The Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation is a non profit 501(c)(3) educational corporation organized under the laws of the state of Mississippi and granted tax exempt status by the Internal Revenue Service. The Foundation's EIN or federal tax identification number is 64-6221541. Its 501(c)(3) letter is posted at <http://pglaf.org/fundraising>. Contributions to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation are tax deductible to the full extent permitted by U.S. federal laws and your state's laws.

The Foundation's principal office is located at 4557 Melan Dr. S. Fairbanks, AK, 99712., but its volunteers and employees are scattered throughout numerous locations. Its business office is located at 809 North 1500 West, Salt Lake City, UT 84116, (801) 596-1887, email business@pglaf.org. Email contact links and up to date contact information can be found at the Foundation's web site and official page at <http://pglaf.org>

Section 4. Information about Donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation

Project Gutenberg-tm depends upon and cannot survive without wide spread public support and donations to carry out its mission of increasing the number of public domain and licensed works that can be freely distributed in machine readable form accessible by the widest array of equipment including outdated equipment. Many small donations ($1 to $5,000) are particularly important to maintaining tax exempt status with the IRS.

The Foundation is committed to complying with the laws regulating charities and charitable donations in all 50 states of the United States. Compliance requirements are not uniform and it takes a considerable effort, much paperwork and many fees to meet and keep up with these requirements. We do not solicit donations in locations where we have not received written confirmation of compliance. To SEND DONATIONS or determine the status of compliance for any particular state visit <http://pglaf.org>

While we cannot and do not solicit contributions from states where we have not met the solicitation requirements, we know of no prohibition against accepting unsolicited donations from donors in such states who approach us with offers to donate.

International donations are gratefully accepted, but we cannot make any statements concerning tax treatment of donations received from outside the United States. U.S. laws alone swamp our small staff.

Section 5. General Information About Project Gutenberg-tm electronic works.

Professor Michael S. Hart is the originator of the Project Gutenberg-tm concept of a library of electronic works that could be freely shared with anyone. For thirty years, he produced and distributed Project Gutenberg-tm eBooks with only a loose network of volunteer support.

Project Gutenberg-tm eBooks are often created from several printed editions, all of which are confirmed as Public Domain in the U.S. unless a copyright notice is included. Thus, we do not necessarily keep eBooks in compliance with any particular paper edition.

Most people start at our Web site which has the main PG search facility:

This Web site includes information about Project Gutenberg-tm, including how to make donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, how to help produce our new eBooks, and how to subscribe to our email newsletter to hear about new eBooks.

found\nhimself transformed in his bed into a horrible vermin.', 'He lay on\nhis armour-like back, and if he lifted his head a little he could\nsee his brown belly, slightly domed and divided by arches into stiff\nsections.',
    'The bedding was hardly able to cover it and seemed ready\nslide off any moment.',
    'His many legs, pitifully thin compared\nwith the size of the rest of him, waved about helplessly as he\nlooked.',
    '"What\'s happened to me?"',
    'he thought.',
    "It wasn't a dream.",
    'His room,\na proper human room although a little too small, lay peacefully\nbetween its four familiar walls.',

'A collection of textile samples\nlay spread out on the table - Samsa was a travelling salesman - and\nabove it there hung a picture that he had recently cut out of an\nillustrated magazine and housed in a nice, gilded frame.',

'It showed\na lady fitted out with a fur hat and fur boa who sat upright,\nraising a heavy fur muff that covered the whole of her lower arm\\ntowards the viewer.',

'Gregor then turned to look out the window at the dull weather.',

'Drops of rain could be heard hitting the pane, which made him feel\\nquite sad.',

"How about if I sleep a little bit longer and forget all\\nthis nonsense", he thought, but that was something he was unable to\\ndo because he was used to sleeping on his right, and in his present\\nstate couldn\\'t get into that position.',

'However hard he threw\\nhimself onto his right, he always rolled back to where he was.',

"He\\nmust have tried it a hundred times, shut his eyes so that he\\nwouldn't have to look at the floundering legs, and only stopped when\\nhe began to feel a mild, dull pain there that he had never felt\\nbefore.",

"Oh, God", he thought, "what a strenuous career it is that I\\'ve\\nchosen!",

'Travelling day in and day out.',

"Doing business like this\\ntakes much more effort than doing your own business at home, and on\\ntop of that there's the curse of travelling, worries about making\\ntrain connections, bad and irregular food, contact with different\\npeople all the time so that you can never get to know anyone or\\nbecome friendly with them.",

'It can all go to Hell!"',

"He felt a\\nslight itch up on his belly; pushed himself slowly up on his back\\ntowards the headboard so that he could lift his head better; found\\nwhere the itch was, and saw that it was covered with lots of little\\nwhite spots which he didn't know what to make of; and when he tried\\nto feel the place with one of his legs he drew it quickly back\\nbecause as soon as he touched it he was overcome by a cold shudder.",

'He slid back into his former position.',

"Getting up early all the\\ntime", he thought, "it makes you stupid.",

"You've got to get enough\\nsleep.",

'Other travelling salesmen live a life of luxury.',

'For\\ninstance, whenever I go back to the guest house during the morning\\nto copy out the contract, these gentlemen are always still sitting\\nthere eating their breakfasts.',

"I ought to just try that with my\\nboss; I'd get kicked out on the spot.",

'But who knows, maybe that\\nwould be the best thing for me.',

"If I didn't have my parents to\\nthink about I'd have given in my notice a long time ago, I'd have\\ngone up to the boss and told him just what I think, tell him\\neverything I would, let him know just what I feel.",

"He'd fall right\\noff his desk!",

"And it's a funny sort of business to be sitting up\\nthere at your desk, talking down at your subordinates from up there,\\nespecially when you have to go right up close because the boss is\nhard of hearing.",

"Well, there's still some hope; once I've got the\nmoney together to pay off my parents' debt to him - another five or\nsix years I suppose - that's definitely what I'll do.",

"That's when\nI'll make the big change.",

'First of all though, I've got to get up,\nmy train leaves at five."',

'And he looked over at the alarm clock, ticking on the chest of\ndrawers.',

"God in Heaven!"',

'he thought.',

'Had the alarm clock not rung?',

"He\ncould see from the bed that it had been set for four o'clock as it\nshould have been; it certainly must have rung.",

'Yes, but was it\npossible to quietly sleep through that furniture-rattling noise?',

'True, he had not slept peacefully, but probably all the more deeply\nbecause of that.',

'What should he do now?',

'The next train went at\nseven; if he were to catch that he would have to rush like mad and\nthe collection of samples was still not packed, and he did not at\nall feel particularly fresh and lively.',

"And even if he did catch\nthe train he would not avoid his boss's anger as the office\nassistant would have been there to see the five o'clock train go, he\nwould have put in his report about Gregor's not being there a long\ntime ago.",

"The office assistant was the boss's man, spineless, and\nwith no understanding.",

'What about if he reported sick?',

"But that\nwould be extremely strained and suspicious as in fifteen years of\nservice Gregor had never once yet been ill. His boss would\ncertainly come round with the doctor from the medical insurance\ncompany, accuse his parents of having a lazy son, and accept the\ndoctor's recommendation not to make any claim as the doctor believed\nthat no-one was ever ill but that many were workshy.",

"And what's\nmore, would he have been entirely wrong in this case?",

'Gregor did in\nfact, apart from excessive sleepiness after sleeping for so long,\nfeel completely well and even felt much hungrier than usual.',

'He was still hurriedly thinking all this through, unable to decide\nto get out of the bed, when the clock struck quarter to seven.',

'There was a cautious knock at the door near his head.',

"Gregor",\nsomebody called - it was his mother - "it's quarter to seven.",

'Didn't you want to go somewhere?"',

'That gentle voice!',

'Gregor was\nshocked when he heard his own voice answering, it could hardly be\nrecognised as the voice he had had before.',

'As if from deep inside\nhim, there was a painful and uncontrollable squeaking mixed in with\nit, the words could be made out at first but then there was a sort\nof echo which made them unclear, leaving the hearer unsure whether\nhe had heard properly or not.',

'Gregor had wanted to give a full\nanswer and explain everything, but in the circumstances contented\nhimself with saying: "Yes, mother, yes, thank-you, I\\'m getting up\\nnow."',

"The change in Gregor's voice probably could not be noticed\noutside through the wooden door, as his mother was satisfied with\nthis explanation and shuffled away.",

'But this short conversation\nmade the other members of the family aware that Gregor, against\ntheir expectations was still at home, and soon his father came\nknocking at one of the side doors, gently, but with his fist.',

"Gregor, Gregor", he called, "what\\'s wrong?",

'And after a short\nwhile he called again with a warning deepness in his voice: "Gregor!",

'Gregor!"',

'At the other side door his sister came plaintively:\n"Gregor?",

"Aren't you well?",

'Do you need anything?",

'Gregor answered to\nboth sides: "I\\'m ready, now", making an effort to remove all the\nstrangeness from his voice by enunciating very carefully and putting\nlong pauses between each, individual word.',

'His father went back to\nhis breakfast, but his sister whispered: "Gregor, open the door, I\\nbeg of you."',

'Gregor, however, had no thought of opening the door,\nand instead congratulated himself for his cautious habit, acquired\nfrom his travelling, of locking all doors at night even when he was\nat home.',

'The first thing he wanted to do was to get up in peace without being\nundisturbed, to get dressed, and most of all to have his breakfast.',

'Only then would he consider what to do next, as he was well aware\nthat he would not bring his thoughts to any sensible conclusions by\nlying in bed.',

'He remembered that he had often felt a slight pain in\nbed, perhaps caused by lying awkwardly, but that had always turned\nto be pure imagination and he wondered how his imaginings would\nslowly resolve themselves today.',

'He did not have the slightest\ndoubt that the change in his voice was nothing more than the first\nsign of a serious cold, which was an occupational hazard for\ntravelling salesmen.',

'It was a simple matter to throw off the covers; he only had to blow\nhimself up a little and they fell off by themselves.',

'But it became\ndifficult after that, especially as he was so exceptionally broad.',

'He would have used his arms and his hands to push himself up; but\ninstead of them he only had all those little legs continuously\nmoving in different directions, and which he was moreover unable to\ncontrol.',

'If he wanted to bend one of them, then that was the first\nnone that would stretch itself out; and if he finally managed to do\nwhat he wanted with that leg, all the others seemed to be set free\nand would move about painfully.', "This is something that can\\'t be\\ndone in bed", Gregor said to himself, "so don't keep trying to do'nit'.',

'The first thing he wanted to do was get the lower part of his body\nout of the bed, but he had never seen this lower part, and could not\nimagine what it looked like; it turned out to be too hard to move;\nit went so slowly; and finally, almost in a frenzy, when he\ncarelessly shoved himself forwards with all the force he could\ngather, he chose the wrong direction, hit hard against the lower\nbedpost, and learned from the burning pain he felt that the lower\npart of his body might well, at present, be the most sensitive.',

'So then he tried to get the top part of his body out of the bed\nfirst, carefully turning his head to the side.',

'This he managed\nquite easily, and despite its breadth and its weight, the bulk of\nhis body eventually followed slowly in the direction of the head.',

'But when he had at last got his head out of the bed and into the\\nfresh air it occurred to him that if he let himself fall it would be\\na miracle if his head were not injured, so he became afraid to carry\\non pushing himself forward the same way.',

'And he could not knock\\nhimself out now at any price; better to stay in bed than lose\\nconsciousness.',

'It took just as much effort to get back to where he had been\\nearlier, but when he lay there sighing, and was once more watching\\nhis legs as they struggled against each other even harder than\\nbefore, if that was possible, he could think of no way of bringing\\npeace and order to this chaos.',

'He told himself once more that it\\was not possible for him to stay in bed and that the most sensible\\nthing to do would be to get free of it in whatever way he could at\\nwhatever sacrifice.',

'At the same time, though, he did not forget to\\nremind himself that calm consideration was much better than rushing\\nto desperate conclusions.',

'At times like this he would direct his\\neyes to the window and look out as clearly as he could, but\\nunfortunately, even the other side of the narrow street was\\nenveloped in morning fog and the view had little confidence or cheer\\nto offer him.',

"Seven o\\'clock, already", he said to himself when the\\nclock struck again, "seven o\\'clock, and there\\'s still a fog like\\nthis."',

'And he lay there quietly a while longer, breathing lightly\\nas if he perhaps expected the total stillness to bring things back\\nto their real and natural state.',

'But then he said to himself: "Before it strikes quarter past seven\\nI\\'ll definitely have to have got properly out of bed.'',

'And by then\\nsomebody will have come round from work to ask what\\'s happened to me\\nas well, as they open up at work before seven o\\'clock."',

'And so he\\nset himself to the task of swinging the entire length of his body\\nout of the bed all at the same time.',

'If he succeeded in falling out\\nof bed in this way and kept his head raised as he did so he could\\nprobably avoid injuring it.',

'His back seemed to be quite hard, and\\nprobably nothing would happen to it falling onto the carpet.',

'His\\nmain concern was for the loud noise he was bound to make, and which\\neven through all the doors would probably raise concern if not\nalarm.', 'But it was something that had to be risked.',

'When Gregor was already sticking half way out of the bed - the new\nmethod was more of a game than an effort, all he had to do was rock\nback and forth - it occurred to him how simple everything would be\nif somebody came to help him.',
'Two strong people - he had his father\nand the maid in mind - would have been more than enough; they would\nonly have to push their arms under the dome of his back, peel him\naway from the bed, bend down with the load and then be patient and\nncareful as he swang over onto the floor, where, hopefully, the\nlittle legs would find a use.',
'Should he really call for help\nthough, even apart from the fact that all the doors were locked?',
'Despite all the difficulty he was in, he could not suppress a smile\nat this thought.',
'After a while he had already moved so far across that it would have\nbeen hard for him to keep his balance if he rocked too hard.',
'The\ntime was now ten past seven and he would have to make a final\ndecision very soon.',
'Then there was a ring at the door of the flat.',
'"That'll be someone from work", he said to himself, and froze very\nstill, although his little legs only became all the more lively as\nthey danced around.',
'For a moment everything remained quiet.',
'"They're not opening the door", Gregor said to himself, caught in\nsome nonsensical hope.',
"But then of course, the maid's firm steps\nwent to the door as ever and opened it.",
"Gregor only needed to hear\nthe visitor's first words of greeting and he knew who it was - the\nchief clerk himself.",
'Why did Gregor have to be the only one\ncondemned to work for a company where they immediately became highly\nnsuspicious at the slightest shortcoming?',
'Was it really not enough\nto let one of the trainees make enquiries - assuming enquiries were\nnever necessary - did the chief clerk have to come himself, and did\nthey have to show the whole, innocent family that this was so\nnsuspicious that only the chief clerk could be trusted to have the\nwisdom to investigate it?',
'And more because these thoughts had made\nhim upset than through any proper decision, he swang himself with\nall his force out of the bed.',
"There was a loud thump, but it wasn't\nreally a loud noise.",
"His fall was softened a little by the carpet,\nand Gregor's back was also more elastic than he had thought, which\nmade the sound muffled and not too noticeable.",
'He had not held his\nhead carefully enough, though, and hit it as he fell; annoyed and in\ncerned, he turned it and rubbed it against the carpet.', "Something\'s fallen down in there", said the chief clerk in the room\non the left.',

'Gregor tried to imagine whether something of the sort\nthat had happened to him today could ever happen to the chief clerk\nntoo; you had to concede that it was possible.',
"But as if in gruff\nreply to this question, the chief clerk's firm footsteps in his\nhighly polished boots could now be heard in the adjoining room.",
'From the room on his right, Gregor\'s sister whispered to him to let\nhim know: "Gregor, the chief clerk is here."',
'"Yes, I know", said\nGregor to himself; but without daring to raise his voice loud enough\nfor his sister to hear him.',
'"Gregor", said his father now from the room to his left, "the chief\nclerk has come round and wants to know why you didn\'t leave on the\\nearly train.",
"We don't know what to say to him.",
'And anyway, he\\nwants to speak to you personally.',
'So please open up this door.',
'I\\'m\\nsure he\\ll be good enough to forgive the untidiness of your room."',
'Then the chief clerk called "Good morning, Mr. Samsa".', '"He isn\\'t\\nwell", said his mother to the chief clerk, while his father\\ncontinued to speak through the door.',
'"He isn\\'t well, please believe\\nme.',
'Why else would Gregor have missed a train!',
'The lad only ever\\nthink about the business.',
"It nearly makes me cross the way he\\nnever goes out in the evenings; he's been in town for a week now but\\nstayed home every evening.",
'He sits with us in the kitchen and just\\nreads the paper or studies train timetables.',
'His idea of relaxation\\nis working with his fretsaw.',
"He's made a little frame, for\\ninstance, it only took him two or three evenings, you'll be amazed\\nhow nice it is; it's hanging up in his room; you'll see it as soon\\nas Gregor opens the door.",
'Anyway, I\\'m glad you\\'re here; we wouldn\\'t\\nhave been able to get Gregor to open the door by ourselves; he\\'s so\\nstubborn; and I\\'m sure he isn\\'t well, he said this morning that he\\nis, but he isn\\'t."',
'"I\\'ll be there in a moment", said Gregor slowly\\nand thoughtfully, but without moving so that he would not miss any\\nword of the conversation.',
'"Well I can\\'t think of any other way of\\nexplaining it, Mrs. Samsa", said the chief clerk, "I hope it\\'s\\nnothing serious.',
"But on the other hand, I must say that if we\\npeople in commerce ever become slightly unwell then, fortunately or\\nunfortunately as you like, we simply have to overcome it because of\\nbusiness considerations."',
'"Can the chief clerk come in to see you\\nnow then? ',
'", asked his father impatiently, knocking at the door\\nagain.',
'"No", said Gregor.',
'In the room on his right there followed\\na painful silence; in the room on his left his sister began to cry.',

'So why did his sister not go and join the others? ',
'She had probably\only just got up and had not even begun to get dressed.',
'And why was\nshe crying?',
'Was it because he had not got up, and had not let the\nchief clerk in, because he was in danger of losing his job and if\nthat happened his boss would once more pursue their parents with the\nsame demands as before?',
'There was no need to worry about things like\nthat yet.',
'Gregor was still there and had not the slightest\nintention of abandoning his family.',
'For the time being he just lay\nthere on the carpet, and no-one who knew the condition he was in\\would seriously have expected him to let the chief clerk in.',
'It was\\only a minor courtesy, and a suitable excuse could easily be\\nfound for it later on, it was not something for which Gregor could\\be sacked on the spot.',
'And it seemed to Gregor much more sensible\\to leave him now in peace instead of disturbing him with talking at\\nhim and crying.',
"But the others didn't know what was happening, they\\nwere worried, that would excuse their behaviour.",
'The chief clerk now raised his voice, "Mr. Samsa", he called to him,\n"what is wrong?",
'You barricade yourself in your room, give us no more\\nthan yes or no for an answer, you are causing serious and\\nnecessary concern to your parents and you fail - and I mention\\nthis just by the way - you fail to carry out your business duties in\\na way that is quite unheard of.',
"I'm speaking here on behalf of your\\nparents and of your employer, and really must request a clear and\\nimmediate explanation.",
'I am astonished, quite astonished.',
'I\\nthought I knew you as a calm and sensible person, and now you\\nsuddenly seem to be showing off with peculiar whims.',
"This morning,\\nyour employer did suggest a possible reason for your failure to\\nappear, it's true - it had to do with the money that was recently\\nentrusted to you - but I came near to giving him my word of honour\\nthat that could not be the right explanation.",
'But now that I see\\nyour incomprehensible stubbornness I no longer feel any wish\\nwhatsoever to intercede on your behalf.',
'And nor is your position\\nall that secure.',
"I had originally intended to say all this to you\\nin private, but since you cause me to waste my time here for no good\\nreason I don't see why your parents should not also learn of it.",
'Your turnover has been very unsatisfactory of late; I grant you that\\nit\\'s not the time of year to do especially good business, we\\nrecognise that; but there simply is no time of year to do no\\nbusiness at all, Mr. Samsa, we cannot allow there to be.'",
'"But Sir", called Gregor, beside himself and forgetting all else in\\nthe excitement, "I\\'ll open up immediately, just a moment.",
"I'm\\nslightly unwell, an attack of dizziness, I haven't been able to get\up.",

"I'm still in bed now.",
"I'm quite fresh again now, though.",
"I'm\njust getting out of bed.",
'Just a moment.',
'Be patient!',
"It's not quite\nas easy as I'd thought.",
"I'm quite alright now, though.",
"It's\nshocking, what can suddenly happen to a person!",
'I was quite alright\nlast night, my parents know about it, perhaps better than me, I had\na small symptom of it last night already.',
'They must have noticed\nit.',
"I don't know why I didn't let you know at work!",
'But you always\nthink you can get over an illness without staying at home.',
"Please,\ndon't make my parents suffer!",
"There's no basis for any of the\naccusations you're making; nobody's ever said a word to me about any\nof these things.",
"Maybe you haven't read the latest contracts I sent\nin.",
"I'll set off with the eight o'clock train, as well, these few\nhours of rest have given me strength.",
'You don't need to wait, sir;\nI'll be in the office soon after you, and please be so good as to\ntell that to the boss and recommend me to him!"',
'And while Gregor gushed out these words, hardly knowing what he was\nsaying, he made his way over to the chest of drawers - this was\nreadily done, probably because of the practise he had already had in\nbed - where he now tried to get himself upright.',
'He really did want\nto open the door, really did want to let them see him and to speak\nwith the chief clerk; the others were being so insistent, and he was\ncurious to learn what they would say when they caught sight of him.',
"If they were shocked then it would no longer be Gregor's\nresponsibility and he could rest.",
"If, however, they took everything\nCALMLY he would still have no reason to be upset, and if he hurried\nhe really could be at the station for eight o'clock.",
'The first few\ntimes he tried to climb up on the smooth chest of drawers he just\nslid down again, but he finally gave himself one last swing and\nstood there upright; the lower part of his body was in serious pain\nbut he no longer gave any attention to it.',
'Now he let himself fall\nagainst the back of a nearby chair and held tightly to the edges of\nit with his little legs.',
"By now he had also calmed down, and kept\nquiet so that he could listen to what the chief clerk was saying.',
'"Did you understand a word of all that?"',
'the chief clerk asked his\nparents, "surely he's not trying to make fools of us".',
'"Oh, God!"',
'called his mother, who was already in tears, "he could be seriously\nill and we're making him suffer.',

'Grete!',
'Grete!"',
'she then cried.',
'"Mother?"',
'his sister called from the other side.',
"They communicated\nacross Gregor's room.",
'"You'll have to go for the doctor straight\naway.', 'Gregor is ill. Quick, get the doctor.',
'Did you hear the way\nGregor spoke just now?"',
'"That was the voice of an animal", said the\nchief clerk, with a calmness that was in contrast with his mother's\nscreams.', '"Anna!',
'Anna!"',
'his father called into the kitchen through\nthe entrance hall, clapping his hands, "get a locksmith here, now!"', 'And the two girls, their skirts swishing, immediately ran out\nthrough the hall, wrenching open the front door of the flat as they\ngone.', 'How had his sister managed to get dressed so quickly?', 'There\nwas no sound of the door banging shut again; they must have left it\nopen; people often do in homes where something awful has happened.', 'Gregor, in contrast, had become much calmer.', "So they couldn't\nunderstand his words any more, although they seemed clear enough to\nhim, clearer than before - perhaps his ears had become used to the\nsound.",
'They had realised, though, that there was something wrong\nwith him, and were ready to help.',
'The first response to his\nsituation had been confident and wise, and that made him feel\nbetter.', 'He felt that he had been drawn back in among people, and\nfrom the doctor and the locksmith he expected great and surprising\nachievements - although he did not really distinguish one from the\nother.', 'Whatever was said next would be crucial, so, in order to\nmake his voice as clear as possible, he coughed a little, but taking\ncare to do this not too loudly as even this might well sound\ndifferent from the way that a human coughs and he was no longer sure\nhe could judge this for himself.',
'Meanwhile, it had become very\nquiet in the next room.',
'Perhaps his parents were sat at the table\nwhispering with the chief clerk, or perhaps they were all pressed\nagainst the door and listening.', 'Gregor slowly pushed his way over to the door with the chair.',
'Once\nthere he let go of it and threw himself onto the door, holding\nhimself upright against it using the adhesive on the tips of his\nlegs.', 'He rested there a little while to recover from the effort\ninvolved and then set himself to the task of turning the key in the\nlock with his mouth.', 'He seemed, unfortunately, to have no proper\n teeth - how was he, then, to grasp the key?',
'- but the lack of teeth\nwas, of course, made up for with a very strong jaw; using the jaw,\nhe really was able to start the key turning, ignoring the fact that he must have been causing some kind of damage as a brown fluid came from his mouth, flowed over the key and dripped onto the floor.',

"Listen", said the chief clerk in the next room, "he's turning the key."',

'Gregor was greatly encouraged by this; but they all should have been calling to him, his father and his mother too: "Well done, Gregor", they should have cried, "keep at it, keep hold of the lock!"',

'And with the idea that they were all excitedly following his efforts, he bit on the key with all his strength, paying no attention to the pain he was causing himself.',

'As the key turned round he turned around the lock with it, only holding himself upright with his mouth, and hung onto the key or pushed it down again with the whole weight of his body as needed.',

'The clear sound of the lock as it snapped back was Gregor's sign that he could break his concentration, and as he regained his breath he said to himself:\n"So, I didn't need the locksmith after all".',

'Then he lay his head on the handle of the door to open it completely.',

'Because he had to open the door in this way, it was already wide open before he could be seen.',

'He had first to slowly turn himself around one of the double doors, and he had to do it very carefully if he did not want to fall flat on his back before entering the room.',

'He was still occupied with this difficult movement, unable to pay attention to anything else, when he heard the chief clerk exclaim a loud "Oh!",

", which sounded like the soughing of the wind.',

'Now he also saw him - he was the nearest to the door - his hand pressed against his open mouth and slowly retreating as if driven by a steady and invisible force.',

"Gregor's mother, her hair still dishevelled from bed despite the chief clerk's being there, looked at his father.",

'Then she unfolded her arms, took two steps forward towards Gregor and sank down onto the floor into her skirts that spread themselves out around her as her head disappeared down onto her breast.',

'His father looked hostile, and clenched his fists as if wanting to knock Gregor back into his room.',

'Then he looked uncertainly round the living room, covered his eyes with his hands and wept so that his powerful chest shook.',

'In this way only half of his body could be seen, along with his head above it which he leant over to one side as he peered out at the others.',

'Meanwhile the day had become much lighter; part of the endless, grey-black building on the other side of the street - which was a hospital - could be seen quite clearly with the austere and regular line of windows piercing its facade; the rain was still falling, now throwing down large, individual droplets which hit the ground one at a time.',

"The washing up from breakfast lay on the table; there was so much of it because, for Gregor's father, breakfast was the most important meal of the day and he would\NSTRETCH it out for several hours as he sat reading a number of\Ndifferent newspapers.",

'On the wall exactly opposite there was\Nphotograph of Gregor when he was a lieutenant in the army, his sword\NIN his hand and a carefree smile on his face as he called forth\Nrespect for his uniform and bearing.',

'The door to the entrance hall\NWAS open and as the front door of the flat was also open he could\NSEE onto the landing and the stairs where they began their way down\NBELOW.',

"Now, then", said Gregor, well aware that he was the only one to\Nhave kept calm, "I'\LL get dressed straight away now, pack up my\Nsamples and set off.",

'Will you please just let me leave?',

'You can\NSEE", he said to the chief clerk, "that I'\M not stubborn and I\Nlike to do my job; being a commercial traveller is arduous but\NWITHOUT travelling I couldn'\T earn my living.',

'So where are you\NGOING, in to the office?',

'Yes?',

'Will you report everything accurately,\Nthen?'

"It's quite possible for someone to be temporarily unable to\Nwork, but that's just the right time to remember what's been\NACHIEVED in the past and consider that later on, once the difficulty\Nhas been removed, he will certainly work with all the more diligence\NAND concentration.",

"You're well aware that I'm seriously in debt to\Nour employer as well as having to look after my parents and my\Nsister, so that I'm trapped in a difficult situation, but I will\NWORK my way out of it again.",

"Please don't make things any harder\NFOR me than they are already, and don't take sides against me at the\Noffice.",

'I know that nobody likes the travellers.',

'They think we\NEARN an enormous wage as well as having a soft time of it.',

"That's\NJUST prejudice but they have no particular reason to think better of\NIT.",

"But you, sir, you have a better overview than the rest of the\NSTAFF, in fact, if I can say this in confidence, a better overview\NTHAN the boss himself - it's very easy for a businessman like him to\NMAKE mistakes about his employees and judge them more harshly than\NHE should.",

"And you're also well aware that we travellers spend\NALMOST the whole year away from the office, so that we can very\NEASILY fall victim to gossip and chance and groundless complaints,\NAND it's almost impossible to defend yourself from that sort of\NTHING, we don't usually even hear about them, or if at all it's when\NWE arrive back home exhausted from a trip, and that's when we feel\NTHE harmful effects of what's been going on without even knowing\NWHAT caused them.",

'Please, don'\T go away, at least first say\NSOMETHING to show that you grant that I'\M at least partly right!"',

'But the chief clerk had turned away as soon as Gregor had started to\NSPEAK, and, with protruding lips, only stared back at him over his\NTREMBLING shoulders as he left.',

'He did not keep still for a moment\NWHILE Gregor was speaking, but moved steadily towards the door\nwithout taking his eyes off him.',

'He moved very gradually, as if\nthere had been some secret prohibition on leaving the room.',

'It was\nonly when he had reached the entrance hall that he made a sudden\nmovement, drew his foot from the living room, and rushed forward in\npanic.',

'In the hall, he stretched his right hand far out towards\nthe stairway as if out there, there were some supernatural force\nwaiting to save him.',

'Gregor realised that it was out of the question to let the chief\nclerk go away in this mood if his position in the firm was not to be\nput into extreme danger.',

'That was something his parents did not\nunderstand very well; over the years, they had become convinced that\nthis job would provide for Gregor for his entire life, and besides,\nthey had so much to worry about at present that they had lost sight\nof any thought for the future.',

'Gregor, though, did think about the\nfuture.',

'The chief clerk had to be held back, calmed down, convinced\nand finally won over; the future of Gregor and his family depended\non it!',

'If only his sister were here!',

'She was clever; she was already\nin tears while Gregor was still lying peacefully on his back.',

'And\nthe chief clerk was a lover of women, surely she could persuade him;\nshe would close the front door in the entrance hall and talk him out\nof his shocked state.',

'But his sister was not there, Gregor would\nhave to do the job himself.',

'And without considering that he still\nwas not familiar with how well he could move about in his present\nstate, or that his speech still might not - or probably would not -\nbe understood, he let go of the door; pushed himself through the\nopening; tried to reach the chief clerk on the landing who,\nridiculously, was holding on to the banister with both hands; but\nGregor fell immediately over and, with a little scream as he sought\nsomething to hold onto, landed on his numerous little legs.',

'Hardly\nhad that happened than, for the first time that day, he began to\nfeel alright with his body; the little legs had the solid ground\nunder them; to his pleasure, they did exactly as he told them; they\nwere even making the effort to carry him where he wanted to go; and\nhe was soon believing that all his sorrows would soon be finally at\nan end.', 'He held back the urge to move but swayed from side to side\nas he crouched there on the floor.',

'His mother was not far away in\nfront of him and seemed, at first, quite engrossed in herself, but\nthen she suddenly jumped up with her arms outstretched and her\nfingers spread shouting: "Help, for pity\n's sake, Help!"',

'The way she\nheld her head suggested she wanted to see Gregor better, but the\nunthinking way she was hurrying backwards showed that she did not;\nshe had forgotten that the table was behind her with all the\nbreakfast things on it; when she reached the table she sat quickly\ndown on it without knowing what she was doing; without even seeming\nto notice that the coffee pot had been knocked over and a gush of coffee was pouring down onto the carpet.', '"Mother, mother", said Gregor gently, looking up at her.',

'He had completely forgotten the chief clerk for the moment, but could not help himself snapping in the air with his jaws at the sight of the flow of coffee.',
'That set his mother screaming anew, she fled from the table and into the arms of his father as he rushed towards her.',
'Gregor, though, had no time to spare for his parents now; the chief clerk had already reached the stairs; with his chin on the banister, he looked back for the last time.',
'Gregor made a run for him; he wanted to be sure of reaching him; the chief clerk must have expected something, as he leapt down several steps at once and disappeared; his shouts resounding all around the staircase.',
"The flight of the chief clerk seemed, unfortunately, to put Gregor's father into a panic as well.",
"Until then he had been relatively self-controlled, but now, instead of running after the chief clerk himself, or at least not impeding Gregor as he ran after him, Gregor's father seized the chief clerk's stick in his right hand (the chief clerk had left it behind on a chair, along with his hat and overcoat), picked up a large newspaper from the table with his left, and used them to drive Gregor back into his room, stamping his foot at him as he went.",
"Gregor's appeals to his father were of no help, his appeals were simply not understood, however much he humbly turned his head his father merely stamped his foot all the harder.",
"Across the room, despite the chilly weather, Gregor's mother had pulled open a window, leant far out of it and pressed her hands to her face.",
'A strong draught of air flew in from the street towards the stairway, the curtains flew up, the newspapers on the table fluttered and some of them were blown onto the floor.',
"Nothing would stop Gregor's father as he drove him back, making hissing noises at him like a wild man.",
'Gregor had never had any practice in moving backwards and was only able to go very slowly.',
"If Gregor had only been allowed to turn round he would have been back in his room straight away, but he was afraid that if he took the time to do that his father would become impatient, and there was the threat of a lethal blow to his back or head from the stick in his father's hand many moment.",
'Eventually, though, Gregor realised that he had no choice as he saw, to his disgust, that he was quite incapable of going backwards in a straight line; so he began, as quickly as possible and with frequent anxious glances at his father, to turn himself round.',
'It went very slowly, but perhaps his father was able to see his good intentions as he did nothing to hinder him, in fact now and then he used the tip of his stick to give directions from a distance as to which way to turn.',
'If only his father would stop that unbearable hissing!',
'It was making Gregor quite confused.',
'When he had nearly finished turning round, still listening to that hissing, he made a mistake and turned himself back a little the way\ne had just come.',

'He was pleased when he finally had his head in\nfront of the doorway, but then saw that it was too narrow, and his\nbody was too broad to get through it without further difficulty.',

'In\nhis present mood, it obviously did not occur to his father to open\nthe other of the double doors so that Gregor would have enough space\nonto get through.',

'He was merely fixed on the idea that Gregor should\nbe got back into his room as quickly as possible.',

'Nor would he ever\nhave allowed Gregor the time to get himself upright as preparation\nfor getting through the doorway.',

'What he did, making more noise\nthan ever, was to drive Gregor forwards all the harder as if there\nhad been nothing in the way; it sounded to Gregor as if there was\nnow more than one father behind him; it was not a pleasant\nexperience, and Gregor pushed himself into the doorway without\nregard for what might happen.',

'One side of his body lifted itself,\nhe lay at an angle in the doorway, one flank scraped on the white\nDoor and was painfully injured, leaving vile brown flecks on it,\nsoon he was stuck fast and would not have been able to move at all\nby himself, the little legs along one side hung quivering in the air\nwhile those on the other side were pressed painfully against the\nground.',

'Then his father gave him a hefty shove from behind which\nreleased him from where he was held and sent him flying, and heavily\nbleeding, deep into his room.',

'The door was slammed shut with the\nstick, then, finally, all was quiet.',

'II\n\nIt was not until it was getting dark that evening that Gregor awoke\nfrom his deep and coma-like sleep.',

"He would have woken soon\nafterwards anyway even if he hadn't been disturbed, as he had had\nenough sleep and felt fully rested.",

'But he had the impression that\nsome hurried steps and the sound of the door leading into the front\nroom being carefully shut had woken him.',

'The light from the\nelectric street lamps shone palely here and there onto the ceiling\nand tops of the furniture, but down below, where Gregor was, it was\ndark.',

'He pushed himself over to the door, feeling his way clumsily\nwith his antennae - of which he was now beginning to learn the value\nin order to see what had been happening there.',

'The whole of his\nleft side seemed like one, painfully stretched scar, and he limped\nbadly on his two rows of legs.',

'One of the legs had been badly\ninjured in the events of that morning - it was nearly a miracle that\nonly one of them had been - and dragged along lifelessly.',

'It was only when he had reached the door that he realised what it\nactually was that had drawn him over to it; it was the smell of\nsomething to eat.',

'By the door there was a dish filled with\nsweetened milk with little pieces of white bread floating in it.',

'He\nwas so pleased he almost laughed, as he was even hungrier than he\nhad been that morning, and immediately dipped his head into the\milk, nearly covering his eyes with it.',

'But he soon drew his head\back again in disappointment; not only did the pain in his tender\left side make it difficult to eat the food - he was only able to\neat if his whole body worked together as a snuffling whole - but the\milk did not taste at all nice.',

'Milk like this was normally his\sfavourite drink, and his sister had certainly left it there for him\because of that, but he turned, almost against his own will, away\from the dish and crawled back into the centre of the room.',

'Through the crack in the door, Gregor could see that the gas had\been lit in the living room.',

"His father at this time would normally\be sat with his evening paper, reading it out in a loud voice to\nGregor's mother, and sometimes to his sister, but there was now not\na sound to be heard.",

"Gregor's sister would often write and tell him\nabout this reading, but maybe his father had lost the habit in\nrecent times.",

'It was so quiet all around too, even though there\nmust have been somebody in the flat.',

"What a quiet life it is the\nfamily lead", said Gregor to himself, and, gazing into the darkness,\nfelt a great pride that he was able to provide a life like that in\nsuch a nice home for his sister and parents.',

'But what now, if all\nthis peace and wealth and comfort should come to a horrible and\nfrightening end?',

'That was something that Gregor did not want to\nthink about too much, so he started to move about, crawling up and\ndown the room.',

'Once during that long evening, the door on one side of the room was\nopened very slightly and hurriedly closed again; later on the door\non the other side did the same; it seemed that someone needed to\nenter the room but thought better of it.',

'Gregor went and waited\nimmediately by the door, resolved either to bring the timorous\nvisitor into the room in some way or at least to find out who it\nwas; but the door was opened no more than that night and Gregor waited in\nvain.',

'The previous morning while the doors were locked everyone had\nwanted to get in there to him, but now, now that he had opened up\nnone of the doors and the other had clearly been unlocked some time\nduring the day, no-one came, and the keys were in the other sides.',

'It was not until late at night that the gaslight in the living room\nwas put out, and now it was easy to see that his parents and sister had\nstayed awake all that time, as they all could be distinctly heard as\nthey went away together on tip-toe.',

"It was clear that no-one would\ncome into Gregor's room any more until morning; that gave him plenty\nof time to think undisturbed about how he would have to re-arrange\nhis life.",

'For some reason, the tall, empty room where he was forced\nto remain made him feel uneasy as he lay there flat on the floor,\neven though he had been living in it for five years.',

'Hardly aware\nof what he was doing other than a slight feeling of shame, he\nhurried under the couch.',

'It pressed down on his back a little, and\ne was no longer able to lift his head, but he nonetheless felt\nimmediately at ease and his only regret was that his body was too\nbroad to get it all underneath.',

'He spent the whole night there.',

'Some of the time he passed in a\nlight sleep, although he frequently woke from it in alarm because of\nhis hunger, and some of the time was spent in worries and vague\nhopes which, however, always led to the same conclusion: for the\ntime being he must remain calm, he must show patience and the\ngreatest consideration so that his family could bear the\nunpleasantness that he, in his present condition, was forced to\nimpose on them.',

'Gregor soon had the opportunity to test the strength of his\nndecisions, as early the next morning, almost before the night had\nended, his sister, nearly fully dressed, opened the door from the\nfront room and looked anxiously in.',

"She did not see him straight\naway, but when she did notice him under the couch - he had to be\nsomewhere, for God's sake, he couldn't have flown away - she was so\nshocked that she lost control of herself and slammed the door shut\nagain from outside.",

'But she seemed to regret her behaviour, as she\nopened the door again straight away and came in on tip-toe as if\nentering the room of someone seriously ill or even of a stranger.',

'Gregor had pushed his head forward, right to the edge of the couch,\nand watched her.',

'Would she notice that he had left the milk as it\nwas, realise that it was not from any lack of hunger and bring him\nin some other food that was more suitable?',

"If she didn't do it\nherself he would rather go hungry than draw her attention to it,\nalthough he did feel a terrible urge to rush forward from under the\ncouch, throw himself at his sister's feet and beg her for something\ngood to eat.",

'However, his sister noticed the full dish immediately\nand looked at it and the few drops of milk splashed around it with\nsome surprise.',

'She immediately picked it up - using a rag,\nnnot her bare hands - and carried it out.',

'Gregor was extremely\ncurious as to what she would bring in its place, imagining the\nwildest possibilities, but he never could have guessed what his\nsister, in her goodness, actually did bring.',

'In order to test his\nntaste, she brought him a whole selection of things, all spread out\non an old newspaper.',

'There were old, half-rotten vegetables; bones\nfrom the evening meal, covered in white sauce that had gone hard; a\nfew raisins and almonds; some cheese that Gregor had declared\ninedible two days before; a dry roll and some bread spread with\nbutter and salt.',

"As well as all that she had poured some water into\nthe dish, which had probably been permanently set aside for Gregor's\nuse, and placed it beside them.",

"Then, out of consideration for\nGregor's feelings, as she knew that he would not eat in front of\her, she hurried out again and even turned the key in the lock so\nthat Gregor would know he could make things as comfortable for\nhimself as he liked.",

"Gregor's little legs whirred, at last he could\nneat.",

"What's more, his injuries must already have completely healed\nas he found no difficulty in moving.",

'This amazed him, as more than\na month earlier he had cut his finger slightly with a knife, he\nthought of how his finger had still hurt the day before yesterday.',

"Am I less sensitive than I used to be, then?",

", he thought, and was\nalready sucking greedily at the cheese which had immediately, almost\ncompellingly, attracted him much more than the other foods on the\nnewspaper.',

"Quickly one after another, his eyes watering with\npleasure, he consumed the cheese, the vegetables and the sauce; the\nfresh foods, on the other hand, he didn't like at all, and even\ndragged the things he did want to eat a little way away from them\nbecause he couldn't stand the smell.",

'Long after he had finished\neating and lay lethargic in the same place, his sister slowly turned\nthe key in the lock as a sign to him that he should withdraw.',

'He\nwas immediately startled, although he had been half asleep, and he\nhurried back under the couch.',

'But he needed great self-control to\nstay there even for the short time that his sister was in the room,\nas eating so much food had rounded out his body a little and he\ncould hardly breathe in that narrow space.',

'Half suffocating, he\nwatched with bulging eyes as his sister unselfconsciously took a\nbroom and swept up the left-overs, mixing them in with the food he\nhad not even touched at all as if it could not be used any more.',

'She quickly dropped it all into a bin, closed it with its wooden\nlid, and carried everything out.',

'She had hardly turned her back\nbefore Gregor came out again from under the couch and stretched\nhimself.',

"This was how Gregor received his food each day now, once in the\nmorning while his parents and the maid were still asleep, and the\nsecond time after everyone had eaten their meal at midday as his\nparents would sleep for a little while then as well, and Gregor's\nsister would send the maid away on some errand.",

"Gregor's father and\nmother certainly did not want him to starve either, but perhaps it\nwould have been more than they could stand to have any more\nexperience of his feeding than being told about it, and perhaps his\nsister wanted to spare them what distress she could as they were\nindeed suffering enough.",

'It was impossible for Gregor to find out what they had told the\ndoctor and the locksmith that first morning to get them out of the\nflat.',

"As nobody could understand him, nobody, not even his sister,\nthought that he could understand them, so he had to be content to\nhear his sister's sighs and appeals to the saints as she moved about\nhis room.",

'It was only later, when she had become a little more used\nto everything - there was, of course, no question of her ever\nbecoming fully used to the situation - that Gregor would sometimes\ncatch a friendly comment, or at least a comment that could be\nconstrued as friendly.' ,

"He\'s enjoyed his dinner today", she might\nsay when he had diligently cleared away all the food left for him,\nor if he left most of it, which slowly became more and more\ninfrequent, she would often say, sadly, "now everything\'s just been\nleft there again". ,

"Although Gregor wasn't able to hear any news directly he did listen\nmuch of what was said in the next rooms, and whenever he heard\nanyone speaking he would scurry straight to the appropriate door and\npress his whole body against it.",

'There was seldom any conversation,\nespecially at first, that was not about him in some way, even if\nonly in secret.',

'For two whole days, all the talk at every mealtime\nwas about what they should do now; but even between meals they spoke\nabout the same subject as there were always at least two members of\nthe family at home - nobody wanted to be at home by themselves and\nit was out of the question to leave the flat entirely empty.',

"And on\nthe very first day the maid had fallen to her knees and begged\nGregor's mother to let her go without delay.",

"It was not very clear\nhow much she knew of what had happened but she left within a quarter\nof an hour, tearfully thanking Gregor's mother for her dismissal as\nif she had done her an enormous service.",

'She even swore\nemphatically not to tell anyone the slightest about what had\nhappened, even though no-one had asked that of her.',

"Now Gregor's sister also had to help his mother with the cooking;\nalthough that was not so much bother as no-one ate very much.",

'Gregor often heard how one of them would unsuccessfully urge another\nto eat, and receive no more answer than "no thanks, I\'ve had enough"\nor something similar.',

'No-one drank very much either.',

'His sister\nwould sometimes ask his father whether he would like a beer, hoping\nfor the chance to go and fetch it herself.',

'When his father then\nsaid nothing she would add, so that he would not feel selfish, that\nshe could send the housekeeper for it, but then his father would\nclose the matter with a big, loud "No", and no more would be said.',

"Even before the first day had come to an end, his father had\nexplained to Gregor's mother and sister what their finances and\nprospects were.",

'Now and then he stood up from the table and took\nsome receipt or document from the little cash box he had saved from\nhis business when it had collapsed five years earlier.',

'Gregor heard\nhow he opened the complicated lock and then closed it again after he\nhad taken the item he wanted.',

'What he heard his father say was some\nof the first good news that Gregor heard since he had first been\nincarcerated in his room.',

"He had thought that nothing at all\nremained from his father's business, at least he had never told him\nanything different, and Gregor had never asked him about it anyway.",

"Their business misfortune had reduced the family to a state of total\ndespair, and Gregor's only concern at that time had been to arrange\nthings so that they could all forget about it as quickly as\npossible.",

'So then he started working especially hard, with a fiery\nvigour that raised him from a junior salesman to a travelling\nrepresentative almost overnight, bringing with it the chance to earn\nmoney in quite different ways.',

'Gregor converted his success at work\nstraight into cash that he could lay on the table at home for the\nbenefit of his astonished and delighted family.',

'They had been good\netimes and they had never come again, at least not with the same\nsplendour, even though Gregor had later earned so much that he was\nin a position to bear the costs of the whole family, and did bear\nthem.',

'They had even got used to it, both Gregor and the family,\nthey took the money with gratitude and he was glad to provide it,\nalthough there was no longer much warm affection given in return.',

'Gregor only remained close to his sister now.',

'Unlike him, she was\nvery fond of music and a gifted and expressive violinist, it was his\nsecret plan to send her to the conservatory next year even though it\nwould cause great expense that would have to be made up for in some\nother way.',

"During Gregor's short periods in town, conversation with\nhis sister would often turn to the conservatory but it was only ever\nmentioned as a lovely dream that could never be realised.",

'Their\nparents did not like to hear this innocent talk, but Gregor thought\nabout it quite hard and decided he would let them know what he\nplanned with a grand announcement of it on Christmas day.',

'That was the sort of totally pointless thing that went through his\nmind in his present state, pressed upright against the door and\nlistening.',

'There were times when he simply became too tired to\ncontinue listening, when his head would fall wearily against the\ndoors and he would pull it up again with a start, as even the\nslightest noise he caused would be heard next door and they would\nall go silent.',

"What\n's that he\n's doing now", his father would say\nafter a while, clearly having gone over to the door, and only then\nwould the interrupted conversation slowly be taken up again.',

"When explaining things, his father repeated himself several times,\npartly because it was a long time since he had been occupied with\nthese matters himself and partly because Gregor's mother did not\nunderstand everything the first time.",

'From these repeated explanations\nGregor learned, to his pleasure, that despite all their misfortunes\nthere was still some money available from the old days.',

'It was not\na lot, but it had not been touched in the meantime and some interest\nhad accumulated.',

'Besides that, they had not been using up all the\nmoney that Gregor had been bringing home every month, keeping only a\nlittle for himself, so that that, too, had been accumulating.',

'Behind the door, Gregor nodded with enthusiasm in his pleasure at\nthis unexpected thrift and caution.',

"He could actually have used\nthis surplus money to reduce his father's debt to his boss, and the\nday when he could have freed himself from that job would have come\nmuch closer, but now it was certainly better the way his father had\\ndone things.",

'This money, however, was certainly not enough to enable the family\\nto live off the interest; it was enough to maintain them for,\nperhaps, one or two years, no more.',

"That's to say, it was money\\nthat should not really be touched but set aside for emergencies;\nmoney to live on had to be earned.",

'His father was healthy but old,\nand lacking in self confidence.',

'During the five years that he had\\nnot been working - the first holiday in a life that had been full of\\nstrain and no success - he had put on a lot of weight and become\\nvery slow and clumsy.',

"Would Gregor's elderly mother now have to go\\nand earn money?",

'She suffered from asthma and it was a strain for her\\njust to move about the home, every other day would be spent\\nstruggling for breath on the sofa by the open window.',

'Would his\\nsister have to go and earn money?',

'She was still a child of\\nseventeen, her life up till then had been very enviable, consisting\\nof wearing nice clothes, sleeping late, helping out in the business,\\njoining in with a few modest pleasures and most of all playing the\\nviolin.',

'Whenever they began to talk of the need to earn money,\\nGregor would always first let go of the door and then throw himself\\onto the cool, leather sofa next to it, as he became quite hot with\\nshame and regret.',

'He would often lie there the whole night through, not sleeping a\\nwink but scratching at the leather for hours on end.',

'Or he might go\\nto all the effort of pushing a chair to the window, climbing up onto\\nthe sill and, propped up in the chair, leaning on the window to\\nstare out of it.',

'He had used to feel a great sense of freedom from\\ndoing this, but doing it now was obviously something more remembered\\nthan experienced, as what he actually saw in this way was becoming\\nless distinct every day, even things that were quite near; he had\\nused to curse the ever-present view of the hospital across the\\nstreet, but now he could not see it at all, and if he had not known\\nthat he lived in Charlottenstrasse, which was a quiet street despite\\nbeing in the middle of the city, he could have thought that he was\\nlooking out the window at a barren waste where the grey sky and the\\ngrey earth mingled inseparably.',

'His observant sister only needed to\\nnotice the chair twice before she would always push it back to its\\nexact position by the window after she had tidied up the room, and\\nnever left the inner pane of the window open from then on.',

'If Gregor had only been able to speak to his sister and thank her\\nfor all that she had to do for him it would have been easier for him\\nto bear it; but as it was it caused him pain.',

'His sister, \nnaturally, tried as far as possible to pretend there was nothing \nburdensome about it, and the longer it went on, of course, the \nbetter she was able to do so, but as time went by Gregor was also \nable to see through it all so much better.',

'It had even become very \nunpleasant for him, now, whenever she entered the room.',

"No sooner \nhad she come in than she would quickly close the door as a \nprecaution so that no-one would have to suffer the view into \nGregor's room, then she would go straight to the window and pull it \nhurriedly open almost as if she were suffocating.",

'Even if it was \ncold, she would stay at the window breathing deeply for a little \nwhile.',

'She would alarm Gregor twice a day with this running about \nand noise making; he would stay under the couch shivering the whole \nwhile, knowing full well that she would certainly have liked to \nspare him this ordeal, but it was impossible for her to be in the \nsame room with him with the windows closed.',

"One day, about a month after Gregor's transformation when his sister \nno longer had any particular reason to be shocked at his appearance, \nshe came into the room a little earlier than usual and found him \nstill staring out the window, motionless, and just where he would be \nmost horrible.",

"In itself, his sister's not coming into the room \nwould have been no surprise for Gregor as it would have been \ndifficult for her to immediately open the window while he was still \nthere, but not only did she not come in, she went straight back and \nclosed the door behind her, a stranger would have thought he had \nthreatened her and tried to bite her.",

'Gregor went straight to hide \nhimself under the couch, of course, but he had to wait until midday \nbefore his sister came back and she seemed much more uneasy than \nusual.',

'It made him realise that she still found his appearance \nunbearable and would continue to do so, she probably even had to \novercome the urge to flee when she saw the little bit of him that \nprotruded from under the couch.',

'One day, in order to spare her even \nthis sight, he spent four hours carrying the bedsheet over to the \ncouch on his back and arranged it so that he was completely covered \nand his sister would not be able to see him even if she bent down.',

'If she did not think this sheet was necessary then all she had to do \nwas take it off again, as it was clear enough that it was no \npleasure for Gregor to cut himself off so completely.',

'She left the \nsheet where it was.',

'Gregor even thought he glimpsed a look of \ngratitude one time when he carefully looked out from under the sheet \nto see how his sister liked the new arrangement.',

"For the first fourteen days, Gregor's parents could not bring \nthemelves to come into the room to see him.",

'He would often hear \nthem say how they appreciated all the new work his sister was doing \neven though, before, they had seen her as a girl who was somewhat \nuseless and frequently been annoyed with her.',

"But now the two of\nthem, father and mother, would often both wait outside the door of\nGregor's room while his sister tidied up in there, and as soon as\nshe went out again she would have to tell them exactly how\neverthing looked, what Gregor had eaten, how he had behaved this\nntime and whether, perhaps, any slight improvement could be seen.",

'His mother also wanted to go in and visit Gregor relatively soon but\nhis father and sister at first persuaded her against it.',

'Gregor\nlistened very closely to all this, and approved fully.',

'Later,\nthough, she had to be held back by force, which made her call out:\n"Let me go and see Gregor, he is my unfortunate son!",

"Can't you\nunderstand I have to see him?",

", and Gregor would think to himself\nthat maybe it would be better if his mother came in, not every day\nof course, but one day a week, perhaps; she could understand\neverthing much better than his sister who, for all her courage, was\nstill just a child after all, and really might not have had an\nadult's appreciation of the burdensome job she had taken on.',

"Gregor's wish to see his mother was soon realised.",

'Out of\nconsideration for his parents, Gregor wanted to avoid being seen at\nthe window during the day, the few square meters of the floor did\nnot give him much room to crawl about, it was hard to just lie\nquietly through the night, his food soon stopped giving him any\npleasure at all, and so, to entertain himself, he got into the habit\nof crawling up and down the walls and ceiling.',

'He was especially\nfond of hanging from the ceiling; it was quite different from lying\non the floor; he could breathe more freely; his body had a light\nswing to it; and up there, relaxed and almost happy, it might happen\nthat he would surprise even himself by letting go of the ceiling and\nlanding on the floor with a crash.',

'But now, of course, he had far\nbetter control of his body than before and, even with a fall as\ngreat as that, caused himself no damage.',

"Very soon his sister\nnoticed Gregor's new way of entertaining himself - he had, after\nall, left traces of the adhesive from his feet as he crawled about -\nand got it into her head to make it as easy as possible for him by\nremoving the furniture that got in his way, especially the chest of\ndrawers and the desk.",

"Now, this was not something that she would be\nable to do by herself; she did not dare to ask for help from her\nfather; the sixteen year old maid had carried on bravely since the\ncook had left but she certainly would not have helped in this, she\nhad even asked to be allowed to keep the kitchen locked at all times\nand never to have to open the door unless it was especially\nimportant; so his sister had no choice but to choose some time when\nGregor's father was not there and fetch his mother to help her.",

'As\nshe approached the room, Gregor could hear his mother express her\njoy, but once at the door she went silent.',

'First, of course, his\nsister came in and looked round to see that everything in the room\nwas alright; and only then did she let her mother enter.',

'Gregor had\nhurriedly pulled the sheet down lower over the couch and put more\ nfolds into it so that everything really looked as if it had just\nbeen thrown down by chance.',

'Gregor also refrained, this time, from\ nspying out from under the sheet; he gave up the chance to see his\nmother until later and was simply glad that she had come.',

"You can\ncome in, he can't be seen", said his sister, obviously leading her\nin by the hand.',

"The old chest of drawers was too heavy for a pair\nof feeble women to be heaving about, but Gregor listened as they\npushed it from its place, his sister always taking on the heaviest\npart of the work for herself and ignoring her mother's warnings that\nshe would strain herself.",

'This lasted a very long time.',

"After\nlabouring at it for fifteen minutes or more his mother said it would\nbe better to leave the chest where it was, for one thing it was too\nheavy for them to get the job finished before Gregor's father got\nhome and leaving it in the middle of the room it would be in his way\neven more, and for another thing it wasn't even sure that taking the\nfurniture away would really be any help to him.",

"She thought just\nthe opposite; the sight of the bare walls saddened her right to her\nheart; and why wouldn't Gregor feel the same way about it, he'd been\nused to this furniture in his room for a long time and it would make\nhim feel abandoned to be in an empty room like that.",

'Then, quietly,\nalmost whispering as if wanting Gregor (whose whereabouts she did\nnot know) to hear not even the tone of her voice, as she was\nconvinced that he did not understand her words, she added "and by\ntaking the furniture away, won't it seem like we're showing that\nwe've given up all hope of improvement and we're abandoning him to\nscope for himself?",

'I think it'd be best to leave the room exactly the\nway it was before so that when Gregor comes back to us again he'll\nfind everything unchanged and he'll be able to forget the time in\nbetween all the easier'.',

'Hearing these words from his mother made Gregor realise that the\nlack of any direct human communication, along with the monotonous\nlife led by the family during these two months, must have made him\nconfused - he could think of no other way of explaining to himself\nwhy he had seriously wanted his room emptied out.',

'Had he really\nwanted to transform his room into a cave, a warm room fitted out\nwith the nice furniture he had inherited?',

'That would have let him\ncrawl around unimpeded in any direction, but it would also have let\nhim quickly forget his past when he had still been human.',

'He had\ncome very close to forgetting, and it had only been the voice of his\nmother, unheard for so long, that had shaken him out of it.',

'Nothing\nshould be removed; everything had to stay; he could not do without\nthe good influence the furniture had on his condition; and if the\nfurniture made it difficult for him to crawl about mindlessly that\nwas not a loss but a great advantage.',

"His sister, unfortunately, did not agree; she had become used to the\nidea, not without reason, that she was Gregor's spokesman to his\nparents about the things that concerned him.",

"This meant that his\nmother's advice now was sufficient reason for her to insist on\nremoving not only the chest of drawers and the desk, as she had\nthought at first, but all the furniture apart from the all-important\ncouch.",

'It was more than childish perversity, of course, or the\nunexpected confidence she had recently acquired, that made her\ninsist; she had indeed noticed that Gregor needed a lot of room to\ncrawl about in, whereas the furniture, as far as anyone could see,\nwas of no use to him at all.',

'Girls of that age, though, do become\nenthusiastic about things and feel they must get their way whenever\nthey can.',

"Perhaps this was what tempted Grete to make Gregor's\nsituation seem even more shocking than it was so that she could do\nnever more for him.",

'Grete would probably be the only one who would\ndare enter a room dominated by Gregor crawling about the bare walls\nby himself.',

'So she refused to let her mother dissuade her.',

"Gregor's mother\nalready looked uneasy in his room, she soon stopped speaking and\nhelped Gregor's sister to get the chest of drawers out with what\nstrength she had.",

'The chest of drawers was something that Gregor\ncould do without if he had to, but the writing desk had to stay.',

'Hardly had the two women pushed the chest of drawers, groaning, out\nof the room than Gregor poked his head out from under the couch to\nsee what he could do about it.',

'He meant to be as careful and\nconsiderate as he could, but, unfortunately, it was his mother who\ncame back first while Grete in the next room had her arms round the\nchest, pushing and pulling at it from side to side by herself\nwithout, of course, moving it an inch.',

'His mother was not used to\nthe sight of Gregor, he might have made her ill, so Gregor hurried\nbackwards to the far end of the couch.',

'In his startlement, though,\nhe was not able to prevent the sheet at its front from moving a\nlittle.',

"It was enough to attract his mother's attention.", 'She stood\nvery still, remained there a moment, and then went back out to\nGrete.',

'Gregor kept trying to assure himself that nothing unusual was\nhappening, it was just a few pieces of furniture being moved after\nall, but he soon had to admit that the women going to and fro, their\nlittle calls to each other, the scraping of the furniture on the\nfloor, all these things made him feel as if he were being assailed\nfrom all sides.',

'With his head and legs pulled in against him and\nhis body pressed to the floor, he was forced to admit to himself\nthat he could not stand all of this much longer.',

"They were emptying\nhis room out; taking away everything that was dear to him; they had\nalready taken out the chest containing his fretsaw and other tools;\nnow they threatened to remove the writing desk with its place\nworn into the floor, the desk where he had done his homework\nas a business trainee, at high school, even while he had been at\ninfant school--he really could not wait any longer to see whether\nthe two women's intentions were good.",

'He had nearly forgotten they\nwere there anyway, as they were now too tired to say anything while\nthey worked and he could only hear their feet as they stepped\nheavily on the floor.',

'So, while the women were leant against the desk in the other room\n-catching their breath, he sallied out, changed direction four times\n-not knowing what he should save first before his attention was\n-suddenly caught by the picture on the wall - which was already\ndenuded of everything else that had been on it - of the lady dressed\nin copious fur.',

'He hurried up onto the picture and pressed himself\nagainst its glass, it held him firmly and felt good on his hot\nbelly.',

'This picture at least, now totally covered by Gregor, would\ncertainly be taken away by no-one.',

'He turned his head to face the\n-door into the living room so that he could watch the women when they\ncame back.',

'They had not allowed themselves a long rest and came back quite\nsoon; Grete had put her arm around her mother and was nearly\ncarrying her.',

"What shall we take now, then?",

", said Grete and\nlooked around.',

'Her eyes met those of Gregor on the wall.',

'Perhaps\nonly because her mother was there, she remained calm, bent her face\nonto her so that she would not look round and said, albeit hurriedly\nand with a tremor in her voice: "Come on, let's go back in the\nliving room for a while?"',

'Gregor could see what Grete had in mind,\nshe wanted to take her mother somewhere safe and then chase him down\nfrom the wall.',

'Well, she could certainly try it!',

'He sat unyielding\non his picture.',

"He would rather jump at Grete's face.",

'But Grete\n's words had made her mother quite worried, she stepped to\nnone side, saw the enormous brown patch against the flowers of the\nwallpaper, and before she even realised it was Gregor that she saw\nscreamed: "Oh God, oh God!"',

'Arms outstretched, she fell onto the\ncouch as if she had given up everything and stayed there immobile.',

"Gregor!"',

'shouted his sister, glowering at him and shaking her fist.',

'That was the first word she had spoken to him directly since his\ntransformation.',

"She ran into the other room to fetch some kind of\nsmelling salts to bring her mother out of her faint; Gregor wanted\n-to help too - he could save his picture later, although he stuck\nfast to the glass and had to pull himself off by force; then he,\ntoo, ran into the next room as if he could advise his sister like\nin\nthe old days; but he had to just stand behind her doing nothing;\nshe\nwas looking into various bottles, he startled her when she turned\nround; a bottle fell to the ground and broke; a splinter cut\ngregor's face, some kind of caustic medicine splashed all over him;\nnow, without delaying any longer, Grete took hold of all the bottles\nshe could and ran with them in to her mother; she slammed the door\nclosed with her foot.",

'So now Gregor was shut out from his mother,\nwho, because of him, might be near to death; he could not open the\ndoors if he did not want to chase his sister away, and she had to\nstay with his mother; there was nothing for him to do but wait; and,\nnot pressed with anxiety and self-reproach, he began to crawl about,\nhe crawled over everything, walls, furniture, ceiling, and finally\nin his confusion as the whole room began to spin around him he fell\ndown into the middle of the dinner table.',

'He lay there for a while, numb and immobile, all around him it was\nquiet, maybe that was a good sign.',

'Then there was someone at the\ndoors.',

'The maid, of course, had locked herself in her kitchen so\nthat Grete would have to go and answer it.',

'His father had arrived\nhome.',

"What's happened?",

"were his first words; Grete's appearance\nmust have made everything clear to him.",

'She answered him with\nsubdued voice, and openly pressed her face into his chest: "Mother's\nfainted, but she's better now.",

'Gregor got out."',

"Just as I\nexpected", said his father, "just as I always said, but you women\nwouldn't listen, would you."',

'It was clear to Gregor that Grete had\nnot said enough and that his father took it to mean that something\nbad had happened, that he was responsible for some act of violence.',

'That meant Gregor would now have to try to calm his father, as he\ndid not have the time to explain things to him even if that had been\npossible.',

'So he fled to the door of his room and pressed himself\nagainst it so that his father, when he came in from the hall, could\nsee straight away that Gregor had the best intentions and would go\nback into his room without delay, that it would not be necessary to\ndrive him back but that they had only to open the door and he would\ndisappear.',

'His father, though, was not in the mood to notice subtleties like\nthat; "Ah!",

"", he shouted as he came in, sounding as if he were both\nangry and glad at the same time.',

'Gregor drew his head back from the\ndoors and lifted it towards his father.',

'He really had not imagined\nhis father the way he stood there now; of late, with his new habit\nof crawling about, he had neglected to pay attention to what was\ngoing on the rest of the flat the way he had done before.',

'He really\nought to have expected things to have changed, but still, still, was\nthat really his father?',

'The same tired man as used to be laying\nthere entombed in his bed when Gregor came back from his business\ntrips, who would receive him sitting in the armchair in his\ennightgown when he came back in the evenings; who was hardly even\nable to stand up but, as a sign of his pleasure, would just raise\ennhis arms and who, on the couple of times a year when they went for a\enwalk together on a Sunday or public holiday wrapped up tightly in\ennhis overcoat between Gregor and his mother, would always labour his\enway forward a little more slowly than them, who were already walking\enslowly for his sake; who would place his stick down carefully and,\enif he wanted to say something would invariably stop and gather his\encompanions around him.',

'He was standing up straight enough now;\endressed in a smart blue uniform with gold buttons, the sort worn by\enthe employees at the banking institute; above the high, stiff collar\nof the coat his strong double-chin emerged; under the bushy\neyebrows, his piercing, dark eyes looked out fresh and alert; his\ennormally unkempt white hair was combed down painfully close to his\enscalp.',

'He took his cap, with its gold monogram from, probably, some\enbank, and threw it in an arc right across the room onto the sofa,\nput his hands in his trouser pockets, pushing back the bottom of his\enlong uniform coat, and, with look of determination, walked towards\ngregor.',

'He probably did not even know himself what he had in mind,\nbut nonetheless lifted his feet unusually high.',

'Gregor was amazed\nat the enormous size of the soles of his boots, but wasted no time\nwith that - he knew full well, right from the first day of his new\nlife, that his father thought it necessary to always be extremely\nstrict with him.',

'And so he ran up to his father, stopped when his\nfather stopped, scurried forwards again when he moved, even\nslightly.',

'In this way they went round the room several times\nwithout anything decisive happening, without even giving the\nimpression of a chase as everything went so slowly.',

'Gregor remained\nall this time on the floor, largely because he feared his father\nmight see it as especially provoking if he fled onto the wall or\nceiling.',

'Whatever he did, Gregor had to admit that he certainly\nwould not be able to keep up this running about for long, as for\neach step his father took he had to carry out countless movements.',

'He became noticeably short of breath, even in his earlier life his\nlungs had not been very reliable.',

'Now, as he lurched about in his\nefforts to muster all the strength he could for running he could\nhardly keep his eyes open; his thoughts became too slow for him to\nthink of any other way of saving himself than running; he almost\nforgot that the walls were there for him to use although, here, they\nwere concealed behind carefully carved furniture full of notches and\nprotrusions - then, right beside him, lightly tossed, something flew\ndown and rolled in front of him.',

'It was an apple; then another one\nimmediately flew at him; Gregor froze in shock; there was no longer\nany point in running as his father had decided to bombard him.',

'He\nhad filled his pockets with fruit from the bowl on the sideboard and\nnow, without even taking the time for careful aim, threw one apple\nafter another.',

'These little, red apples rolled about on the floor,\nknocking into each other as if they had electric motors.',

"An apple\nthrown without much force glanced against Gregor's back and slid off\nwithout doing any harm.",

'Another one however, immediately following\nit, hit squarely and lodged in his back; Gregor wanted to drag\nhimself away, as if he could remove the surprising, the incredible\npain by changing his position; but he felt as if nailed to the spot\nand spread himself out, all his senses in confusion.',

"The last thing\nhe saw was the door of his room being pulled open, his sister was\nscreaming, his mother ran out in front of her in her blouse (as his\nsister had taken off some of her clothes after she had fainted to\nmake it easier for her to breathe), she ran to his father, her\nskirts unfastened and sliding one after another to the ground,\nstumbling over the skirts she pushed herself to his father, her arms\naround him, uniting herself with him totally - now Gregor lost his\nability to see anything - her hands behind his father's head begging\nhim to spare Gregor's life.",

"III\nNo-one dared to remove the apple lodged in Gregor's flesh, so it\nremained there as a visible reminder of his injury.",

'He had suffered\nit there for more than a month, and his condition seemed serious\nenough to remind even his father that Gregor, despite his current\nsad and revolting form, was a family member who could not be treated\nas an enemy.',

'On the contrary, as a family there was a duty to\nswallow any revulsion for him and to be patient, just to be patient.',

'Because of his injuries, Gregor had lost much of his mobility -\nprobably permanently.',

'He had been reduced to the condition of an\nancient invalid and it took him long, long minutes to crawl across\nhis room - crawling over the ceiling was out of the question - but\nthis deterioration in his condition was fully (in his opinion) made\nup for by the door to the living room being left open every evening.',

"He got into the habit of closely watching it for one or two hours\nbefore it was opened and then, lying in the darkness of his room\nwhere he could not be seen from the living room, he could watch the\nfamily in the light of the dinner table and listen to their\nconversation - with everyone's permission, in a way, and thus quite\ndifferently from before.",

'They no longer held the lively conversations of earlier times, of\ncourse, the ones that Gregor always thought about with longing when\nhe was tired and getting into the damp bed in some small hotel room.',

'All of them were usually very quiet nowadays.',

'Soon after dinner,\nhis father would go to sleep in his chair; his mother and sister\nwould urge each other to be quiet; his mother, bent deeply under the\nlamp, would sew fancy underwear for a fashion shop; his sister, who\nhad taken a sales job, learned shorthand and French in the evenings\nso that she might be able to get a better position later on.',

'Sometimes his father would wake up and say to Gregor's mother\n"you're doing so much sewing again today!',

'", as if he did not know\nthat he had been dozing - and then he would go back to sleep again\nwhile mother and sister would exchange a tired grin.',

"With a kind of stubbornness, Gregor's father refused to take his\nuniform off even at home; while his nightgown hung unused on its peg\nGregor's father would slumber where he was, fully dressed, as if\nalways ready to serve and expecting to hear the voice of his\nsuperior even here.",

"The uniform had not been new to start with, but\nas a result of this it slowly became even shabbier despite the\nefforts of Gregor's mother and sister to look after it.",

'Gregor\\nwould often spend the whole evening looking at all the stains on\\nthis coat, with its gold buttons always kept polished and shiny,\nwhile the old man in it would sleep, highly uncomfortable but\\npeaceful.',

"As soon as it struck ten, Gregor's mother would speak gently to his\\nfather to wake him and try to persuade him to go to bed, as he\\ncouldn't sleep properly where he was and he really had to get his\\nsleep if he was to be up at six to get to work.",

'But since he had\\nbeen in work he had become more obstinate and would always insist on\\nstaying longer at the table, even though he regularly fell asleep\\nand it was then harder than ever to persuade him to exchange the\\nchair for his bed.',

'Then, however much mother and sister would\\nimpartune him with little reproaches and warnings he would keep\\nslowly shaking his head for a quarter of an hour with his eyes\\nclosed and refusing to get up.',

"Gregor's mother would tug at his\\nsleeve, whisper endearments into his ear, Gregor's sister would\\nleave her work to help her mother, but nothing would have any effect\\non him.",

'He would just sink deeper into his chair.',

'Only when the\\ntwo women took him under the arms he would abruptly open his eyes,\nlook at them one after the other and say: "What a life!",

'This is what\\npeace I get in my old age!"',

"And supported by the two women he would\\nlift himself up carefully as if he were carrying the greatest load\\nhimself, let the women take him to the door, send them off and carry\\non by himself while Gregor's mother would throw down her needle and\\nhis sister her pen so that they could run after his father and\\ncontinue being of help to him.",

'Who, in this tired and overworked family, would have had time to\\ngive more attention to Gregor than was absolutely necessary?',

"The\\nhousehold budget became even smaller; so now the maid was dismissed;\\nan enormous, thick-boned charwoman with white hair that flapped\\naround her head came every morning and evening to do the heaviest\\nwork; everything else was looked after by Gregor's mother on top of\\nthe large amount of sewing work she did.",

'Gregor even learned,\\nlistening to the evening conversation about what price they had\\nhoped for, that several items of jewellery belonging to the family\\nhad been sold, even though both mother and sister had been very fond\\nof wearing them at functions and celebrations.',

'But the loudest\ncomplaint was that although the flat was much too big for their\npresent circumstances, they could not move out of it, there was no\nimaginable way of transferring Gregor to the new address.',

'He could\nsee quite well, though, that there were more reasons than\nconsideration for him that made it difficult for them to move, it\\nwould have been quite easy to transport him in any suitable crate\\nwith a few air holes in it; the main thing holding the family back\\nfrom their decision to move was much more to do with their total\\ndespair, and the thought that they had been struck with a misfortune\\nunlike anything experienced by anyone else they knew or were related\\nto.',

"They carried out absolutely everything that the world expects\\nfrom poor people, Gregor's father brought bank employees their\\nbreakfast, his mother sacrificed herself by washing clothes for\\nstrangers, his sister ran back and forth behind her desk at the\\nbehest of the customers, but they just did not have the strength to\\ndo any more.",

"And the injury in Gregor's back began to hurt as much\\nas when it was new.",

'After they had come back from taking his father\\nto bed Gregor\\'s mother and sister would now leave their work where\\nit was and sit close together, cheek to cheek; his mother would\\npoint to Gregor\\'s room and say "Close that door, Grete", and then,\\nwhen he was in the dark again, they would sit in the next room and\\ntheir tears would mingle, or they would simply sit there staring\\ndry-eyed at the table.',

'Gregor hardly slept at all, either night or day.',

"Sometimes he would\\nthink of taking over the family's affairs, just like before, the\\nnext time the door was opened; he had long forgotten about his boss\\nand the chief clerk, but they would appear again in his thoughts,\\nthe salesmen and the apprentices, that stupid teaboy, two or three\\nfriends from other businesses, one of the chambermaids from a\\nprovincial hotel, a tender memory that appeared and disappeared\\nagain, a cashier from a hat shop for whom his attention had been\\nserious but too slow, - all of them appeared to him, mixed together\\nwith strangers and others he had forgotten, but instead of helping\\nhim and his family they were all of them inaccessible, and he was\\nglad when they disappeared.",

'Other times he was not at all in the\\nmood to look after his family, he was filled with simple rage about\\nthe lack of attention he was shown, and although he could think of\\nnothing he would have wanted, he made plans of how he could get into\\nthe pantry where he could take all the things he was entitled to,\\neven if he was not hungry.',

"Gregor's sister no longer thought about\\nhow she could please him but would hurriedly push some food or other\\nto his room with her foot before she rushed out to work in the\\nmorning and at midday, and in the evening she would sweep it away\\nagain with the broom, indifferent as to whether it had been eaten or\\nmore often than not - had been left totally untouched.",

'She still\\ncleared up the room in the evening, but now she could not have been\\nany quicker about it.',

'Smears of dirt were left on the walls, here\\nand there were little balls of dust and filth.',

'At first, Gregor\ncentred into one of the worst of these places when his sister arrived\nas a reproach to her, but he could have stayed there for weeks\nwithout his sister doing anything about it; she could see the dirt\nas well as he could but she had simply decided to leave him to it.',

"At the same time she became touchy in a way that was quite new for\nher and which everyone in the family understood - cleaning up\nGregor's room was for her and her alone.",

"Gregor's mother did once\nthoroughly clean his room, and needed to use several bucketfuls of\nwater to do it - although that much dampness also made Gregor ill\nand he lay flat on the couch, bitter and immobile.",

"But his mother\nwas to be punished still more for what she had done, as hardly had\nhis sister arrived home in the evening than she noticed the change\nin Gregor's room and, highly aggrieved, ran back into the living\nroom where, despite her mother's raised and imploring hands, she\nbroke into convulsive tears.",

"Her father, of course, was startled\nout of his chair and the two parents looked on astonished and\nhelpless; then they, too, became agitated; Gregor's father, standing\nonto the right of his mother, accused her of not leaving the cleaning\nof Gregor's room to his sister; from her left, Gregor's sister\nscreamed at her that she was never to clean Gregor's room again;\nwhile his mother tried to draw his father, who was beside himself\nwith anger, into the bedroom; his sister, quaking with tears,\nthumped on the table with her small fists; and Gregor hissed in\nanger that no-one had even thought of closing the door to save him\nthe sight of this and all its noise.",

"Gregor's sister was exhausted from going out to work, and looking\nafter Gregor as she had done before was even more work for her, but\nnever so his mother ought certainly not to have taken her place.",

'Gregor, on the other hand, ought not to be neglected.',

'Now, though,\nthe charwoman was here.',

"This elderly widow, with a robust bone\nstructure that made her able to withstand the hardest of things in\nher long life, wasn't really repelled by Gregor.",

"Just by chance one\nday, rather than any real curiosity, she opened the door to Gregor's\nroom and found herself face to face with him.",

"He was taken totally\nby surprise, no-one was chasing him but he began to rush to and fro\nwhile she just stood there in amazement with her hands crossed in\nfront of her.",

'From then on she never failed to open the door\nslightly every evening and morning and look briefly in on him.',

"", or "look at the old dung-beetle there!"',

"Gregor never\nresponded to being spoken to in that way, but just remained where he\nwas without moving as if the door had never even been opened.",

"If\nonly they had told this charwoman to clean up his room every day\ninstead of letting her disturb him for no reason whenever she felt\nlike it!",

'One day, early in the morning while a heavy rain struck the\nwindowpanes, perhaps indicating that spring was coming, she began to speak to him in that way once again.',

'Gregor was so resentful of it\nthat he started to move toward her, he was slow and infirm, but it\nwas like a kind of attack.',

"Instead of being afraid, the charwoman\njust lifted up one of the chairs from near the door and stood there\nwith her mouth open, clearly intending not to close her mouth until\nthe chair in her hand had been slammed down into Gregor's back.",

"Aren't you coming any closer, then?",

", she asked when Gregor turned\nround again, and she calmly put the chair back in the corner.',

'Gregor had almost entirely stopped eating.',

'Only if he happened to\nfind himself next to the food that had been prepared for him he\nmight take some of it into his mouth to play with it, leave it there\na few hours and then, more often than not, spit it out again.',

'At\nfirst he thought it was distress at the state of his room that\nstopped him eating, but he had soon got used to the changes made\nthere.',

'They had got into the habit of putting things into this room\nthat they had no room for anywhere else, and there were now many\nsuch things as one of the rooms in the flat had been rented out to\nthree gentlemen.',

"These earnest gentlemen - all three of them had\nfull beards, as Gregor learned peering through the crack in the door\never day - were painfully insistent on things' being tidy.",

'This\nmeant not only in their own room but, since they had taken a room in\nthis establishment, in the entire flat and especially in the\nkitchen.',

'Unnecessary clutter was something they could not tolerate,\nespecially if it was dirty.',

'They had moreover brought most of their\nown furnishings and equipment with them.',

'For this reason, many\nthings had become superfluous which, although they could not be\nsold, the family did not wish to discard.',

"All these things found\ntheir way into Gregor's room.",

'The dustbins from the kitchen found\ntheir way in there too.',

"The charwoman was always in a hurry, and\nanything she couldn't use for the time being she would just chuck in\nthere.",

'He, fortunately, would usually see no more than the object\nand the hand that held it.',

'The woman most likely meant to fetch the\nthings back out again when she had time and the opportunity, or to\nthrow everything out in one go, but what actually happened was that\nthey were left where they landed when they had first been thrown\nunless Gregor made his way through the junk and moved it somewhere\nelse.',

'At first he moved it because, with no other room free where\nhe could crawl about, he was forced to, but later on he came to\nenjoy it although moving about in that way left him sad and tired to\ndeath, and he would remain immobile for hours afterwards.',

'The gentlemen who rented the room would sometimes take their evening\nmeal at home in the living room that was used by everyone, and so\nthe door to this room was often kept closed in the evening.',

'But\nGregor found it easy to give up having the door open, he had, after\nall, often failed to make use of it when it was open and, without\nthe family having noticed it, lain in his room in its darkest\ncorner.',

'One time, though, the charwoman left the door to the living\nroom slightly open, and it remained open when the gentlemen who\nrented the room came in in the evening and the light was put on.',

'They sat up at the table where, formerly, Gregor had taken his meals\nwith his father and mother, they unfolded the serviettes and picked\nup their knives and forks.',

"Gregor's mother immediately appeared in\nthe doorway with a dish of meat and soon behind her came his sister\nwith a dish piled high with potatoes.",

'The food was steaming, and\nfilled the room with its smell.',

'The gentlemen bent over the dishes\nset in front of them as if they wanted to test the food before\neating it, and the gentleman in the middle, who seemed to count as\nan authority for the other two, did indeed cut off a piece of meat\nwhile it was still in its dish, clearly wishing to establish whether\nit was sufficiently cooked or whether it should be sent back to the\nkitchen.',

"It was to his satisfaction, and Gregor's mother and\nsister, who had been looking on anxiously, began to breathe again\nand smiled.",

'The family themselves ate in the kitchen.',

"Nonetheless, Gregor's\nfather came into the living room before he went into the kitchen,\nbowed once with his cap in his hand and did his round of the table.",

'The gentlemen stood as one, and mumbled something into their beards.',

'Then, once they were alone, they ate in near perfect silence.',

'It\nseemed remarkable to Gregor that above all the various noises of\neating their chewing teeth could still be heard, as if they had\nwanted to show Gregor that you need teeth in order to eat and it was\nnot possible to perform anything with jaws that are toothless\nhowever nice they might be.',

"I\\'d like to eat something", said\nGregor anxiously, "but not anything like they\\'re eating.",

'They do\nfeed themselves.',

'And here I am, dying!"',

'Throughout all this time, Gregor could not remember having heard the\nviolin being played, but this evening it began to be heard from the\nkitchen.',

'The three gentlemen had already finished their meal, the\nnone in the middle had produced a newspaper, given a page to each of\nthe others, and now they leant back in their chairs reading them and\nsmoking.',

'When the violin began playing they became attentive, stood\nup and went on tip-toe over to the door of the hallway where they\nstood pressed against each other.',

'Someone must have heard them in\nthe kitchen, as Gregor\\'s father called out:
"Is the playing perhaps\nunpleasant for the gentlemen?",

'We can stop it straight away."',

"On\nthe contrary", said the middle gentleman, "would the young lady not\nlike to come in and play for us here in the room, where it is, after all, much more cosy and comfortable?",

"Oh yes, we'd love to", called back Gregor's father as if he had been the violin player himself.',

'The gentlemen stepped back into the room and waited.',

"Gregor's father soon appeared with the music stand, his mother with the music and his sister with the violin.",

'She calmly prepared everything for her to begin playing; his parents, who had never rented a room out before and therefore showed an exaggerated courtesy towards the three gentlemen, did not even dare to sit on their own chairs; his father leant against the door with his right hand pushed in between two buttons on his uniform coat; his mother, though, was offered a seat by one of the gentlemen and sat - leaving the chair where the gentleman happened to have placed it - out of the way in a corner.',

'His sister began to play; father and mother paid close attention, none on each side, to the movements of her hands.',

'Drawn in by the playing, Gregor had dared to come forward a little and already had his head in the living room.',

'Before, he had taken great pride in how considerate he was but now it hardly occurred to him that he had become so thoughtless about the others.',

"What's more, there was now all the more reason to keep himself hidden as he was covered in the dust that lay everywhere in his room and flew up at the slightest movement; he carried threads, hairs, and remains of food about on his back and sides; he was much too indifferent to everything now to lay on his back and wipe himself on the carpet like he had used to do several times a day.",

'And despite this condition, he was not too shy to move forward a little onto the immaculate floor of the living room.',

'No-one noticed him, though.',

"The family was totally preoccupied with the violin playing; at first, the three gentlemen had put their hands in their pockets and come up far too close behind the music stand to look at all the notes being played, and they must have disturbed Gregor's sister, but soon, in contrast with the family, they withdrew back to the window with their heads sunk and talking into each other at half volume, and they stayed by the window while Gregor's father observed them anxiously.",

'It really now seemed very obvious that they had expected to hear some beautiful or entertaining violin playing but had been disappointed, that they had had enough of the whole performance and it was only now out of politeness that they allowed their peace to be disturbed.',

'It was especially unnerving, the way they all blew the smoke from their cigarettes upwards from their mouth and noses.',

"Yet Gregor's sister was playing so beautifully.",

'Her face was leant to one side, following the lines of music with a careful and melancholy expression.',

'Gregor crawled a little further forward, keeping his head close to the ground so that he could meet her eyes if the chance came.',

'Was he an animal if music could captivate him so?'

'It seemed to him that he was being shown the way to the unknown nourishment he had been yearning for.',

'He was determined to make his way forward to his sister and tug at her skirt to show her she might come into his room with her violin, as no-one appreciated her playing here as much as he would.',

'He never wanted to let her out of his room, not while he lived, anyway; his shocking appearance should, for once, be of some use to him; he wanted to be at every door of his room at once to hiss and spit at the attackers; his sister should not be forced to stay with him, though, but stay of her own free will; she would sit beside him on the couch with her near bent down to him while he told her how he had always intended to send her to the conservatory, how he would have told everyone about it last Christmas - had Christmas really come and gone already?',

"- if this misfortune hadn't got in the way, and refuse to let anyone dissuade him from it.",

'On hearing all this, his sister would break out in tears of emotion, and Gregor would climb up to her shoulder and kiss her neck, which, since she had been going out to work, she had kept free without any necklace or collar.',

'Samsa!',

"", shouted the middle gentleman to Gregor's father, pointing, without wasting any more words, with his forefinger at Gregor as he slowly moved forward.',

'The violin went silent, the middle of the three gentlemen first smiled at his two friends, shaking his head, and then looked back at Gregor.',

'His father seemed to think it more important to calm the three gentlemen before driving Gregor out, even though they were not at all upset and seemed to think Gregor was more entertaining than the violin playing had been.',

'He rushed up to them with his arms spread out and attempted to drive them back into their room at the same time as trying to block their view of Gregor with his body.',

"Now they did become a little annoyed, and it was not clear whether it was his father's behaviour that annoyed them or the dawning realisation that they had had a neighbour like Gregor in the next room without knowing it.",

"They asked Gregor's father for explanations, raised their arms like he had, tugged excitedly at their beards and moved back towards their room only very slowly.",

"Meanwhile Gregor's sister had overcome the despair she had fallen into when her playing was suddenly interrupted.",

"She had let her hands drop and let violin and bow hang limply for a while but continued to look at the music as if still playing, but then she suddenly pulled herself together, lay the instrument on her mother's lap who still sat laboriously struggling for breath where she was, and ran into the next room which, under pressure from her father, the three gentlemen were more quickly moving toward.",

"Under his sister's experienced hand, the pillows and covers on the beds flew up and were put into order and\hshe had already finished making the beds and slipped out again\nbefore the three gentlemen had reached the room.",

"Gregor's father\nseemed so obsessed with what he was doing that he forgot all the\nrespect he owed to his tenants.",

"He urged them and pressed them\nuntil, when he was already at the door of the room, the middle of\nthe three gentlemen shouted like thunder and stamped his foot and\nthereby brought Gregor's father to a halt.",

"I declare here and\nnow", he said, raising his hand and glancing at Gregor\n's mother and\nsister to gain their attention too, "that with regard to the\nrepugnant conditions that prevail in this flat and with this family"\nhere he looked briefly but decisively at the floor - "I give\nimmediate notice on my room.',

'For the days that I have been living\nhere I will, of course, pay nothing at all, on the contrary I will\nconsider whether to proceed with some kind of action for damages\nfrom you, and believe me it would be very easy to set out the\nngounds for such an action.'',

'He was silent and looked straight\nahead as if waiting for something.',

'And indeed, his two friends\njoined in with the words: "And we also give immediate notice."',

'With\nthat, he took hold of the door handle and slammed the door.',

"Gregor's father staggered back to his seat, feeling his way with his\nhands, and fell into it; it looked as if he was stretching himself\nout for his usual evening nap but from the uncontrolled way his head\nkept nodding it could be seen that he was not sleeping at all.",

'Throughout all this, Gregor had lain still where the three gentlemen\nhad first seen him.',

'His disappointment at the failure of his plan,\nand perhaps also because he was weak from hunger, made it impossible\nfor him to move.',

'He was sure that everyone would turn on him any\nmoment, and he waited.',

"He was not even startled out of this state\nwhen the violin on his mother's lap fell from her trembling fingers\nand landed loudly on the floor.",

"Father, Mother", said his sister, hitting the table with her hand\nas introduction, "we can't carry on like this.",

"Maybe you can't see\nit, but I can.",

"I don't want to call this monster my brother, all I\ncan say is: we have to try and get rid of it.",

'We've done all that's\nhumanly possible to look after it and be patient, I don't think\nanyone could accuse us of doing anything wrong.'',

"She\n's absolutely right", said Gregor\n's father to himself.',

"His\nmother, who still had not had time to catch her breath, began to\ncough dully, her hand held out in front of her and a deranged\nexpression in her eyes.',

"Gregor's sister rushed to his mother and put her hand on her\nforehead.",

"Her words seemed to give Gregor's father some more\nindefinite ideas.",

'He sat upright, played with his uniform cap between\nthe plates left by the three gentlemen after their meal, and\noccasionally looked down at Gregor as he lay there immobile.',

"We have to try and get rid of it", said Gregor's sister, now speaking only to her father, as her mother was too occupied with coughing to listen, "it'll be the death of both of you, I can see it coming.",

"We can't all work as hard as we have to and then come home to be tortured like this, we can't endure it.",

'I can't endure it anymore."',

'And she broke out so heavily in tears that they flowed down the face of her mother, and she wiped them away with mechanical hand movements.',

"My child", said her father with sympathy and obvious understanding, "what are we to do?",

"If he could just understand us", said his father almost as a question; his sister shook her hand vigorously through her tears as a sign that of that there was no question.',

'But as it is ..." "It's got to go", shouted his sister, "that's the only way, Father.' ,

"You've got to get rid of the idea that that's Gregor.",

"We've only harmed ourselves by believing it for so long.",

'How can that be Gregor?',

"If it were Gregor he would have seen long ago that it's not impossible for human beings to live with an animal like that and he would have gone of his own free will.",

"We wouldn't have a brother any more, then, but we could carry on with our lives and remember him with respect.",

"As it is this animal is persecuting us, it's driven out our tenants, it obviously wants to take over the whole flat and force us to sleep on the streets.",

'Father, look, just look", she suddenly screamed, "he's starting again!"',

"In her alarm, which was totally beyond Gregor's comprehension, his sister even abandoned his mother as she pushed herself vigorously out of her chair as if more willing to sacrifice her own mother than stay anywhere near Gregor.",

"She rushed over to behind her father, who had become excited merely because she was and stood up half raising his hands in front of Gregor's sister as if to protect her.",

'But Gregor had had no intention of frightening anyone, least of all his sister.',

'All he had done was begin to turn round so that he could go back into his room, although that was in itself quite startling as his pain-wracked condition meant that turning round required a great deal of effort and he was using his head to help himself do it, repeatedly raising it and striking it against the floor.',

'He stopped and looked round.',

'They seemed to have realised his good intention and had only been alarmed briefly.',

'Now they all\nlooked at him in unhappy silence.',
'His mother lay in her chair with\nher legs stretched out and pressed against each other, her eyes\nnearly closed with exhaustion; his sister sat next to his father\nwith her arms around his neck.',
'"Maybe now they'll let me turn round", thought Gregor and went back\nto work.',
'He could not help panting loudly with the effort and had\nsometimes to stop and take a rest.',
'No-one was making him rush any\nmore, everything was left up to him.',
'As soon as he had finally\nfinished turning round he began to move straight ahead.',
'He was\namazed at the great distance that separated him from his room, and\ncould not understand how he had covered that distance in his weak\nstate a little while before and almost without noticing it.',
'He\nconcentrated on crawling as fast as he could and hardly noticed that\nthere was not a word, not any cry, from his family to distract him.',
'He did not turn his head until he had reached the doorway.',
'He did\nnot turn it all the way round as he felt his neck becoming stiff,\nbut it was nonetheless enough to see that nothing behind him had\nchanged, only his sister had stood up.',
'With his last glance he saw\nthat his mother had now fallen completely asleep.', 'He was hardly inside his room before the door was hurriedly shut,\nbolted and locked.',
'The sudden noise behind Gregor so startled him\nthat his little legs collapsed under him.',
'It was his sister who had\nbeen in so much of a rush.',
'She had been standing there waiting and\nsprung forward lightly, Gregor had not heard her coming at all, and\nas she turned the key in the lock she said loudly to her parents "At\nlast!".',
'"What now, then?",
'', Gregor asked himself as he looked round in the\ndarkness.',
'He soon made the discovery that he could no longer move\nat all.',
'This was no surprise to him, it seemed rather that being\nable to actually move around on those spindly little legs until then\nwas unnatural.',
'He also felt relatively comfortable.',
'It is true\nthat his entire body was aching, but the pain seemed to be slowly\ngetting weaker and weaker and would finally disappear altogether.',
'He could already hardly feel the decayed apple in his back or the\ninflamed area around it, which was entirely covered in white dust.',
'He thought back of his family with emotion and love.',
'If it was\npossible, he felt that he must go away even more strongly than his\nsister.',
'He remained in this state of empty and peaceful rumination\nuntil he heard the clock tower strike three in the morning.',
'He\nwatched as it slowly began to get light everywhere outside the\nwindow

too.' ,

'Then, without his willing it, his head sank down\ncompletely, and his last breath flowed weakly from his nostrils.' ,

"When the cleaner came in early in the morning - they'd often asked\nher not to keep slamming the doors but with her strength and in her\nhurry she still did, so that everyone in the flat knew when she'd\narrived and from then on it was impossible to sleep in peace - she\nmade her usual brief look in on Gregor and at first found nothing\nspecial.",

'She thought he was laying there so still on purpose,\nplaying the martyr; she attributed all possible understanding to\nhim.' ,

'She happened to be holding the long broom in her hand, so she\ntried to tickle Gregor with it from the doorway.' ,

'When she had no\nsuccess with that she tried to make a nuisance of herself and poked\nat him a little, and only when she found she could shove him across\nthe floor with no resistance at all did she start to pay attention.' ,

'She soon realised what had really happened, opened her eyes wide,\nwhistled to herself, but did not waste time to yank open the bedroom\ndoors and shout loudly into the darkness of the bedrooms: "Come and\n'ave a look at this, it's dead, just lying there, stone dead!"',

'Mr. and Mrs. Samsa sat upright there in their marriage bed and had\nto make an effort to get over the shock caused by the cleaner before\nthey could grasp what she was saying.' ,

'But then, each from his own\nside, they hurried out of bed.' ,

"Mr. Samsa threw the blanket over his\nshoulders, Mrs. Samsa just came out in her nightdress; and that is\nhow they went into Gregor's room." ,

'On the way they opened the door\nonto the living room where Grete had been sleeping since the three\ngentlemen had moved in; she was fully dressed as if she had never\nbeen asleep, and the paleness of her face seemed to confirm this.' ,

"Dead?' ,

"", asked Mrs. Samsa, looking at the charwoman enquiringly,\neven though she could have checked for herself and could have known\nit even without checking.' ,

"That's what I said", replied the\ncleaner, and to prove it she gave Gregor\n's body another shove with\nthe broom, sending it sideways across the floor.' ,

'Mrs. Samsa made a\nmovement as if she wanted to hold back the broom, but did not\ncomplete it.' ,

"Now then", said Mr. Samsa, "let's give thanks to God\nfor that".',

'He crossed himself, and the three women followed his\nexample.' ,

'Grete, who had not taken her eyes from the corpse, said:\n"Just look how thin he was.' ,

"He didn't eat anything for so long.",

'The food came out again just the same as when it went in".',

"Gregor's\nbody was indeed completely dried up and flat, they had not seen it\nuntil then, but now he was not lifted up on his little legs, nor did\nhe do anything to make them look away.",

"Grete, come with us in here for a little while", said Mrs. Samsa\nwith a pained smile, and Grete followed her parents into the bedroom\nbut not without looking back at the body.',

'The cleaner shut the door\nand opened the window wide.',

'Although it was still early in the\nmorning the fresh air had something of warmth mixed in with it.',

'It\nwas already the end of March, after all.',

'The three gentlemen stepped out of their room and looked round in\namazement for their breakfasts; they had been forgotten about.',

"Where is our breakfast?",

"", the middle gentleman asked the cleaner\nirritably.,

"She just put her finger on her lips and made a quick and\nsilent sign to the men that they might like to come into Gregor's\nroom.",

"They did so, and stood around Gregor's corpse with their\nhands in the pockets of their well-worn coats.",

'It was now quite\nlight in the room.',

'Then the door of the bedroom opened and Mr. Samsa appeared in his\nuniform with his wife on one arm and his daughter on the other.',

"All\nof them had been crying a little; Grete now and then pressed her\nface against her father's arm.",

"Leave my home.",

'Now!',

"", said Mr. Samsa, indicating the door and\nwithout letting the women from him.',

"What do you mean?",

"", asked the\nmiddle of the three gentlemen somewhat disconcerted, and he smiled\nsweetly.',

'The other two held their hands behind their backs and\ncontinually rubbed them together in gleeful anticipation of a loud\nquarrel which could only end in their favour.',

"I mean just what I\nsaid", answered Mr. Samsa, and, with his two companions, went in a\nstraight line towards the man.',

'At first, he stood there still,\nlooking at the ground as if the contents of his head were\nrearranging themselves into new positions.',

"Alright, we'll go\nthen", he said, and looked up at Mr. Samsa as if he had been\nsuddenly overcome with humility and wanted permission again from\nMr. Samsa for his decision.',

'Mr. Samsa merely opened his eyes wide\nand briefly nodded to him several times.',

'At that, and without\ndelay, the man actually did take long strides into the front\nhallway; his two friends had stopped rubbing their hands some time\nbefore and had been listening to what was being said.',

'Now they\njumped off after their friend as if taken with a sudden fear that\nMr. Samsa might go into the hallway in front of them and break the\nconnection with their leader.',

'Once there, all three took their hats\nfrom the stand, took their sticks from the holder, bowed without a\nword and left the premises.',

"Mr. Samsa and the two women followed\nthem out onto the landing; but they had had no reason to mistrust\nthe men's intentions and as they leaned over the landing they saw how\nthe three gentlemen made slow but steady progress down the many\nsteps.",

"As they turned the corner on each floor they disappeared and\nwould reappear a few moments later; the further down they went, the\nmore that the Samsa family lost interest in them; when a butcher's\nboy, proud of posture with his tray on his head, passed them on his\nway up and came nearer than they were, Mr. Samsa and the women came\ncaway from the landing and went, as if relieved, back into the flat.",

'They decided the best way to make use of that day was for relaxation\nand to go for a walk; not only had they earned a break from work but\nthey were in serious need of it.',

'So they sat at the table and wrote\nthree letters of excusal, Mr. Samsa to his employers, Mrs. Samsa\nonto her contractor and Grete to her principal.',

"The cleaner came in\nwhile they were writing to tell them she was going, she'd finished\nher work for that morning.",

'The three of them at first just nodded\nwithout looking up from what they were writing, and it was only when\nthe cleaner still did not seem to want to leave that they looked up\nin irritation.',

'"Well?"',

'", asked Mr. Samsa.',

'The charwoman stood in\nthe doorway with a smile on her face as if she had some tremendous\ngood news to report, but would only do it if she was clearly asked\nonto.',

'The almost vertical little ostrich feather on her hat, which\nhad been a source of irritation to Mr. Samsa all the time she had\nbeen working for them, swayed gently in all directions.',

'"What is it\nyou want then?",

'", asked Mrs. Samsa, whom the cleaner had the most\nrespect for.',

"Yes", she answered, and broke into a friendly laugh\nthat made her unable to speak straight away, "well then, that thing\nin there, you needn't worry about how you're going to get rid of it.",

'That's all been sorted out."',

'Mrs. Samsa and Grete bent down over\ntheir letters as if intent on continuing with what they were\nwriting; Mr. Samsa saw that the cleaner wanted to start describing\neverything in detail but, with outstretched hand, he made it quite\nunclear that she was not to.',

'So, as she was prevented from telling\nthem all about it, she suddenly remembered what a hurry she was in\nand, clearly peeved, called out "Cheerio then, everyone", turned\nround sharply and left, slamming the door terribly as she went.',

"Tonight she gets sacked", said Mr. Samsa, but he received no reply\nfrom either his wife or his daughter as the charwoman seemed to have\ndestroyed the peace they had only just gained.',

'They got up and went\nover to the window where they remained with their arms around each\nother.',

'Mr. Samsa twisted round in his chair to look at them and sat\nthere watching for a while.',

    'Then he called out: "Come here, then.' ,
    "Let's forget about all that old stuff, shall we.",
    'Come and give me a\ncbit of attention".',
    'The two women immediately did as he said,\nhurrying over to him where they kissed him and hugged him and then\nthey quickly finished their letters.', 'After that, the three of them left the flat together, which was\nsomething they had not done for months, and took the tram out to the\nopen country outside the town.',
    'They had the tram, filled with warm\nsunshine, all to themselves.', 'Leant back comfortably on their seats,\nthey discussed their prospects and found that on closer examination\nthey were not at all bad - until then they had never asked each\nother about their work but all three had jobs which were very good\nand held particularly good promise for the future.', 'The greatest\nimprovement for the time being, of course, would be achieved quite\neasily by moving house; what they needed now was a flat that was\nsmaller and cheaper than the current one which had been chosen by\nGregor, one that was in a better location and, most of all, more\npractical.', 'All the time, Grete was becoming livelier.', 'With all the\nworry they had been having of late her cheeks had become pale, but,\nwhile they were talking, Mr. and Mrs. Samsa were struck, almost\nsimultaneously, with the thought of how their daughter was\nblossoming into a well built and beautiful young lady.',
    'They became\nquieter.',
    "Just from each other's glance and almost without knowing\nit they agreed that it would soon be time to find a good man for\nher.", 'And, as if in confirmation of their new dreams and good\nintentions, as soon as they reached their destination Grete was the\nfirst to get up and stretch out her young body.',

themselv
today
he
did
not
have
the slightest

doubt
that
the
chang
in
hi
voic
wa
noth
more
than
first sign
of a seriou
cold
which
wa
an occup
hazard
for travel salesmen
it
wa
simpl
matter
to throw off
cover
he
onli
had
to blow
himself
up
littl
and
they fell

off
by themselv
but
it
becam
difficult
after
that especi
as
he
wa
so except broad
he
would
have
use
hi
arm
and
hi
hand
to push
himself
up
but instead
of
them
he
onli
had
all
those
littl
leg continu
move
in differ direct
and
which
he

wa
moreov
unabl
to control
if
he
want
to bend
one
of
them
then
that
wa
the
first
one
that
would stretch
itself
out
and
if
he
final manag
to
do
what
he
want
with
that
leg
all
the
other
seem
to
be set free
and
would
move

about
pain
thi
is someth
that can
t
be done
bed
gregor
said
to
himself
so
don
t
keep
tri
to
do
it
the
first
thing
he
want
to
do
get
the
lower part
of
hi
bodi
out
of
the
bed
but
he
had never seen

thi
lower
part
and
could
not imagin
what
it
look
like
it
turn
out
to
be
too
hard
to
move
it
went
so slowli
and
final
almost
in
a frenzi
when
he carelessli shove
himself
forward
with
all
the
forc
he
gather
he chose
the wrong direct

hit
hard
against
the
lower bedpost
and learn
from
the
burn
pain
he
felt
that
the
lower
part
of
hi
bodi
might
well
at present
be
the
most sensit
so
then
he
tri
to
get
the
top
part
of
hi
bodi
out
of
the
bed
first
care
turn

hi
head
to
the
side
thi
he
manag
quit easili
and despit
it
breadth
and
it
weight
bulk
of
hi
bodi eventu
follow
slowli
in
direct
of
the
head
but
when
he
had
at
last
got
hi
head
out
of
the
bed
and
into
fresh

air
it
occur
to
him
that
if
he
let
himself
fall
it
would
be
a miracl
if
hi
head
were
not
injur
so
he
becam
afraid
to carri
on push
himself
forward
the
same
way
and
he
could
not knock
himself
out
now
at
ani
price
better

stay
in
bed
than lose conscious
it
took
just
as
much effort
to
get
back
to
where
he
had
been earlier
but
when
he
lay
there
sigh
and
wa
onc
more
watch
hi
leg
as
they struggl
against
each
other
even harder
than
befor
if
that
wa
possibl

he
could
think
of
no
way
of
bring peac
and order
to
thi
chao
he told
himself
onc
more
that
it
wa
not
possibl
for
him
stay
in
bed
and
that
the
most sensibl
thing
to
do
would
be
to
get free
of
it
in whatev
way

he
could
at
whatev
sacrific
at
the
same
time
though
he
did
not forget
to remind
himself
that calm consider
wa
much
better
than rush
to desper conclus
at
time
like
thi
he
would direct
hi
eye
to
the
window
and
look
out
as clearli
as
he
could

but unfortun
even
the
other
side
of
the narrow street
wa
envelop
in
morn fog
and
the
view
had
littl confid
or cheer
to offer
him
seven
o
clock
alreadi
he
said
to
himself
when
the clock
struck
again
o
clock
and
there
s
still
a
fog

like
thi
and
he
lay
there quietli
a
while longer
breath
lightli
as
if
he perhap
expect
the total
still
to bring
thing
back
to
their real
and
natur
state
but
then
he
said
to
himself
befor
it
strike
quarter
past
i ll definit
have
to
have

got properly
out
of
bed
and
by
then somebody
will
have
come
round
from
work
to
ask
what
so
happen
to me
as
well
as
they
open
up
at
work
before
o
clock
and
so
he
set
himself
to
the task
of
swing
entire length
of

hi
bodi

with
the
load
and
then
be patient
and
care
as
he swang
over
onto

the
floor
hope
the
littl
leg
find
a
use
should
he
realli
call
for
help
though
even apart
from
fact
that
all
the
door
were lock
despit
all
the difficulti
he
wa
in
he
could
not suppress
smile
at
thi
thought
after
a
while

he
had already
move
so
far across
that
it
would
have
been
hard
for
him
to
keep
hi
balanc
if
he rock
too
hard
the
time
wa
now
ten
past
seven
and
he
would
have
to
make
a
final
decis
veri
soon
then
there
wa
a
ring
at

the
door
of
the flat
that ll
be
someon
from
work
he
said
to
himself
and
froze
veri
still although
hi
littl
leg
onli
becam
all
the
more
live
as
they danc
around
for
a
moment
everyth
remain
quiet
they re
not
open
the
door
gregor
said
to

himself
caught
in
some nonsense
hope
but
then
of course
the maid
she firm
step
went
to
the
door
as ever
and
open
it
gregor
only need
to hear
the visitor
she
first
word
of greet
and
he knew
who
it
was
chief

hit
it
as
he
fell
annoy
and
in
pain
he
turn
it
and rub
it
against
the carpet
someth
s fallen
down
in
there
said
chief
clerk
in
the

room
on
left
gregor
tri
to imagin
whether
someth
of
the

of
it
again
pleas
t
make
thing
ani
harder
for
me
than
they are already
and don
t
take
side
against
me
at
the offic
i
know
that nobodi
like
the travel
they
think
we earn

an
enorm
wage
as
well
as
have
a
soft
time
of
it
that
s
just prejudic
but
they
have
no
particular reason
to
think
better
of
it
but
you
sir
you
have
a
better overview
than
the
rest
of
the staff
in fact
if
i
can say
thi

in
confid
a
better
overview
than
the boss
himself
it
s
veri
easi
for
a businessman
like
him
to
make mistak
about
hi
employe
and judg
them
more harshli
than
he
should
and
you
re
also
well
awar
that
we travel
spend
almost
the
whole year
away
from

the
offic
so
that
we
can
veri
easili
victim
to gossip
and chanc
and groundless complaint
and
it
s
almost imposs
to defend yourself
from
that sort
of
thing
we
don
t
usual
even
hear
about
them
or
if
at
all
it
s
when
we arriv
back

home
exhaust
from
a
trip
and
that
s
when
we
feel
the harm effect
of
what
s
been
go
on
without
even
know
what caus
them
pleas
t
go
away
at least
first
say
someth
to show
that
you
grant
that
i
m
at least
partli
right

but
the
chief
clerk
had
turn
away
as
soon
as
gregor
had
start
to speak
and
with protrud
lip
onli
stare
back
at
him
over
hi
trembl shoulder
as
he
left
he
did
not
keep
still
for
a
moment
while
gregor
wa
speak
but
move steadili
toward
the

door
without
take
hi
eye
off
him
he
move
veri
gradual
as
if
there
had
been
some secret prohibit
on leav
the
room
it
wa
onli
when
he
had
reach
the entranc
hall
that
he
made
a sudden movement
drew
hi
foot
from
the
live
room
and
rush

forward
in
a
panic
in
the
hall
he
stretch
hi
right
hand
far
out
toward
the stairway
as
if
out
there
there
were
some supernatur
forc
wait
to save
him
gregor
realis
that
it
wa
out
of
the question
to
let
the
chief
clerk
go
away
in
thi

mood
if
hi
posit
in
the
firm
wa
not
to
be
put
into extrem
danger
that
wa

convinc
that
thi job
would provid
for
gregor
for
hi
entir
life
and besid
they
had
so

much
to worri
about
at present
that
they
had lost sight
of
ani
thought
for
the
futur
gregor
though
did
think
about
the
futur
the
chief
clerk
had
to
be held
back
calm
down
convinc
and
final
won
over
the
futur
of
gregor

on

it
if
onli
hi
sister
were here
she
wa
clever
she
wa
alreadi
in tear
while
gregor
wa
still lie
peac
on
hi
back
and
the
chief
clerk
wa
a lover
of
women
sure
she
could persuad
him
she
would
close
the
front
door
in
the entranc
hall

talk
him
out
of
hi
shock
state
but
hi
sister
wa
not
there
gregor
would
have
to
do
the
job
himself
and
without consid
that
he
still
wa
not familiar
with
how
well
he
could
move
about
in
hi
present
state
or
that
hi
speech
still
might

not
or probabl
would
not
be understood
he
let
go
of
the
door
push
himself
through
the
open
tri
to reach
chief
clerk
on
the
land
who ridicul
wa
hold
on
to
the banist
with both
hand
but
gregor
fell immedi
over
and
with
a
littl
scream

as
he sought
someth
to
hold
onto
land
on
hi
numer
littl
leg
hardli
had
that
happen
than
for
the
first
time
that
day
he began
to
feel alright
with
hi
bodi
the
littl
leg
had
the solid ground
under
them
to
hi
pleasur
they
did exactli
as

he
told
them
they
were
even
make
the
effort
to carri
him
where
he
want
to
go
and
he
wa
soon
believ
that
all
hi
sorrow
would
soon
be
final
at
an end
he
held
back
the urg
to
move
but sway
from
side
to
side
as
as
he

crouch
there
on
the
floor
hi
mother
wa
not
far
away
in
front
of
him
and
seem
at
first
quit
engross
in
herself
but
then
she suddenli
jump
up
with
her
arm outstretch
and
her finger spread shout
help
for piti
s
sake
help
the
way
she
held

her
head
suggest
she
want
to
see
gregor
better
but
the unthink
way
she
wa

behind
her
with
all
the breakfast
thing
on
it
when
she
reach
the
tabl
she sat
quickli
down
on

without
know
what
she

without
even
seem
to notic
that
the coffe
pot
had
been
knock
over
and
a
gush
of
coffe
wa
pour
down
onto
the carpet
mother
mother
said
gregor
gentli
look
up
at
her
he
had complet
forgotten
the
chief
clerk
for

the
moment
but
could
not
help
himself
snap
in
the
air
with
hi
jaw
at
the
sight
of
the flow
of
coffe
that
set
hi
mother
scream
anew
she fled
from
the
tabl
and
into
the
arm
of
hi
father
as
he
rush
toward
her
gregor
though
had

no
time
to spare
for
hi
parent
now
the
chief
clerk
had already
reach
the
stair
with
hi
chin
on
the
banist
he
look
back
for
the
last
time
gregor
made
a
run
for
him
he
want
to
be sure
of
reach
him
chief
clerk
must
have

expect
someth
as
he leapt
down
sever
step
at
onc
and disappear
hi
shout
resound
all
around
the staircas
the flight
of
the
chief
clerk
seem unfortun
to
put
gregor
s
father
into
a
panic
as
well
until
then
he
had
been
rel
self
control
but
now
instead

of
run
after
the
chief
clerk
himself
or
at least
not imped
gregor
as
he ran
after
him
gregor
s
father
seiz
the
chief
clerk
s
stick
in
hi
right
hand
the
chief
clerk
had
left
it
behind
on
a
chair
along
with
hi
hat
and overcoat pick

up
a larg newspap
from
the
tabl
with
hi
left
and
use
them
to drive
gregor
back
into
hi
room
stamp
hi
foot
at
him
as
he
went
gregor
s appeal
to
hi
father
were
of
no
help
hi
appeal
were simpli
not understood
howev
much
he
humbl

turn
hi
head
hi
father
mere stamp
hi
foot
all
the
harder
across
the
room
despit
the chilli weather
gregor
s
mother
had pull
open
a
window
leant
far
out
of
it
and
press
her
hand
to
her face
a
strong draught
of
air
flew
in
from
the

street
toward
the
stairway
the curtain
flew
up
the newspap
on
the
tabl
flutter
and
some
of
them
were blown
onto
the
floor
noth
would stop
gregor
s
father
as
he drove
him
back
make hiss
nois
at
him
like
a
wild
man
gregor
had
never
had
ani

practic
in
move
backward
and
wa
onli
abl
to
go
veri
slowli
if
gregor
had
onli
been
allow
to
turn
round
he
would
have
been
back
in
hi
room
straight
away
but
he
wa
afraid
that
if
he
took
the
time
to
do
that
hi
father
would becom

impati
and
there
wa
the threat
of
a
lethal
blow
to
hi
back
or
head
from
the
stick
in
hi
father
s
hand
ani
moment
eventu
though
gregor
realis
that
he
had
no
choic
as
he saw
to
hi disgust
that
he
wa
quit
incap
of
go backward

a
straight
line
so
he
began
as
quickli
as possibl
and
with frequent anxiou glanc
at
hi
father
to
turn
himself
round
it
went
veri
slowli
but perhap
hi
father
wa
abl
to
see
hi
good intent
as
he
did
noth
to hinder
him
in
fact
now

and
then
he
use
the tip
of
hi
stick
to give direct
from
a
distanc
as
to
which
way
to
turn
if
onli
hi
father
would stop
that unbear
hiss
it
wa
make
gregor
quit confus
when
he
had
nearli
finish
turn
round
still listen
to
that
hiss

he
made
a
mistak
and
turn
himself
back
a
littl
the
way
he
just
come
he
wa
pleas
when
he
final
had
hi
head
in
front
of
the doorway
but
then
saw
that
it
wa
too
narrow
and
hi
bodi
wa
too
broad
to
get through
it

without further
difficulti
in
hi
present
mood
it obvious
did
not occur
to
hi
father
to
open
the
other
of
the doubl
door
so
that
gregor
would
have enough space
to
get through
he
wa
mere fix
on
the idea
that
gregor
should
be
got
back
into
hi

room
as
quickli
as possibl
nor
would
he
ever
have
allow
gregor
the
time
to
get
himself
upright
as prepar
for
get through
the
doorway
what
he
did
make
more
nois
than ever
wa
to drive
gregor
forward
all
the
harder
as
if
there
had
been
noth
in

the
way
it
sound
to
gregor
as
if
there
wa
now
more
than
one
father
behind
him
it
wa
not
a pleasant experi
and
gregor
push
himself
into
the doorway
without regard
for
what
might
happen
one
side
of
hi
bodi
lift
itself
he
lay
at
an
angl

in
the
doorway
one
flank scrape
on
the white
door
and
wa
pain
injur
leav
vile
brown
fleck
on
it
soon
he
wa
stuck fast
and
would
not
have
been
abl
to
move
at
all
by
himself
the
littl
leg
along
one
side
hung quiver
in
the
air

while
those
on
the
other
side
were
press
pain
against
the
ground
then
hi
father
gave
him
a
hefti
shove
from behind
which releas
him
from
where
he
wa
held
and
sent
him
fli
and heavili
bleed deep
into
hi
room
the
door
wa
slam shut
with
the

stick
then
final
all
wa
quiet
ii
it
wa
not
until
it
wa
get dark
that
even
that
gregor
awok
from
hi
deep
and coma
like
sleep
he
would
have woken
soon afterward
anyway
even
if
he hadn
t
been disturb
as
he
had
had enough
sleep
and

felt
    full
    rest
    but
    he
    had
    the
    impress
    that
    some hurri
    step
    and
    the
    sound
    of
    the
    door
    lead
    into
    the
    front
    room
    be
    care
    shut
    had woken
    him
    the
    light
    from
    the electr
    street
    lamp
    shone pale
    here
    and
    there
    onto
    the ceil
    and
    top
    of
    the

furnitur
but
down
below
where
gregor
wa
it
wa
dark
he
push
himself
over
to
the
door
feel
hi
way
clumsili
with
hi
antenna
which
he
wa
now
begin
to learn
the
valu
in
order
to
see
what
had
been
happen
there
the
whole
of
hi
left

side
seem
like
one
pain
stretch
scar
and
he limp badli
on
hi
two row
of
leg
one
of
the
leg
had
been
badli
injur
in
the event
of
that
morn
it
wa
nearli
miracl
that
onli
one
of
them
had
been
and drag
along lifelessli
it

wa
onli
when
he
had
reach
the
door
that
he
realis
what
it
actual
wa
that
had drawn
him
over
to
it
it
wa
the smell
of
someth
to
eat
by
the
door
there
wa
a
dish
fill
with sweeten
milk
with
littl
piec
of
white
bread
float

in
it
he
wa
so
pleas
he
almost laugh
as
he
wa
even hungrier
than
he
had
been
that
morn
and
immedi
dip
hi
head
into
the
milk
nearli
cover
hi
eye
with
it
but
he
soon
drew
hi
head
back
again
in disappoint
not
onli
did
the

pain
in
hi tender
left
side
make
it
difficult
to
eat
the
food
he
wa
onli
abl
to
eat
if
hi
whole
bodi
work togeth
as
a
snuffl
whole
but
the
milk
did
not tast
at
all
nice
milk
like
thi
wa
normal
hi
favourit
drink
and
hi

sister
had certainli
left
it
there
for
him
becaus
of
that
but
he
turn
almost
against
hi
own
will
away
from
the
dish
and
crawl
back
into
the centr
of
the
room
through
the crack
in
the
door
gregor
could
see
that
the
ga
had
been lit
in

the
live
room
hi
father
at
thi
time
would normal
be
sat
with
hi
even paper
read
it
out
in
a loud
voic
to
gregor
s
mother
and sometim
to
hi
sister
but
there
wa
now
not
a
sound
to
be heard
gregor
s
sister
would often write

and tell
him
about
thi
read
but mayb
hi
father
had
lost
the habit
in recent
time
it
wa
so
quiet
all
around
too
even
though
there
must
have
been
somebodi
in
the
flat
what
a
quiet
life
it
is
the famili
lead
said
gregor
to
himself
and

gaze
into
the
dark
felt
a
great pride
that
he
wa
abl
to provid
a
life
like
that
in
such
a
nice
home
for
hi
sister
and
parent
but
what
now
if
all
thi
peac
and wealth
and comfort
should
come
to
a horribl
and frighten
end
that

wa
someth
that
gregor
did
not
want
to
think
about
too
much
so
he
start
to
move
about
crawl
up
and
down
the
room
onc
dure
that long
even
the
door
on
one
side
of
the
room
wa
open
veri
slightli
and hurriedli
close
again
later
on
the

door
on
the
other
side
did
the
same
it
seem
that someon
need
to enter
the
room
but
thought
better
of
it
gregor
went
and
wait
immedi
by
the
door
resolv
either
to
bring
the timor
visitor
into
the
room
in
some
way
or
at least
find

out
who
it
wa
but
the
door
wa
open
no
more
that night
and
gregor
wait
in vain
the previou
morn
while
the
door
were lock everyon
had
want
to
get
in
there
to
him
but
now
now
that
he
had
open
up
one
of
the
door
and

the
other
had clearli
been unlock
some
time
dure
the
day
no
one
came
and
the
key
were
in
the
other
side
it
wa
not
until late
at
night
that
the gaslight
in
the
live
room
wa
put
out
and
now
it
wa
easi
to
see
that
hi

parent
and
sister
had
stay
awak
all
that
time
as
they
all
could
be distinctli
heard
as
they
went
away
togeth
on tip
toe
it
wa
clear
that
no
one
would
come
into
gregor
s
room
ani
more
until
morn
that
gave
him
plenti
of
time
to
think

undisturb
about
how
he
would
have
to re
arrang
hi
life
for
some reason
the tall empti
room
where
he
wa
forc
to remain
made
him
feel
uneasi
as
he
lay
there
flat
on
the
floor
even
though
he
had
been
live
in
it
for five
year
hardli

awar
of
what
he
wa
do
other
than
a slight
feel
of shame
he
hurri
under
the
couch
it
press
down
on
hi
back
a
littl
and
he
wa
no
longer
abl
to lift
hi
head
but
he nonetheless
felt
immedi
at eas
and
hi
onli
regret
wa

that
hi
bodi
wa
too
broad
to
get
it
all underneath
he spent
the
whole
night
there
some
of
the
time
he pass
in
a
light
sleep
although
he
frequent
woke
from
it
in alarm
becaus
of
hi
hunger
and
some
of
the
time
wa
spent
in
worri

and
vagu
hope
which
howev
alway
led
to
the
same
conclus
for
the
time
be
he
must remain
calm
he
must show
patienc
and
the greatest consider
so
that
hi
famili
could bear
the unpleas
that
he
in
hi
present
condit
wa
forc
to impos
on
them
gregor

soon
had
the opportun
to test
the strength
of
hi
decis
as earli
the next
morn
almost
befor
the
night
had
end
hi
sister
nearli
fulli
dress
open
the
door
from
the
front
room
and
look anxious
in
she
did
not
see
him
straight
away
but
when
she

did
notic
him
under
the
couch
he
had
to
be somewher
for god
s
sake
he couldn
t
have flown
away
she
wa
so
shock
that
she
lost
control
of
herself
and slam
the
door
shut
again
from outsid
but
she
seem
to regret
her behaviour
as
she

open
the
door
again
straight
away
and
came
in
on tip
toe
as
if
enter
the
room
of
someon
serious
ill
or
even
of
a stranger
gregor
had
push
hi
head
forward
right
to
the edg
of
the
couch
and
watch
her
would
she
notic
that
he
had

left
the
milk
as
it
wa
realis
that
it
wa
not
from
ani
lack
of hunger
and
bring
him
in
some
other
food
that
wa
more suitabl
if
she didn
t
do
it
herself
he
would rather
go
hungri
than draw
her attent
to
it
although
he
did

feel
a
terribl
urg
to
rush
forward
from
under
the
couch
throw
himself
at
hi
sister
s
feet
and
beg
her
for
someth
good
to
eat
howev
hi
sister
notic
the
full
dish
immedi
and
look
at
it
and
the
few drop
of
milk
splash
around
it
with

some surpris
she
immedi
pick
it
up
use
a
rag
not
her bare
hand
and
carri
it
out
gregor
wa
extrem
curiou
as
to
what
she
would bring
in
it
place
imagin
the wildest
possibl
but
he
never
could
have
guess
what
hi
sister
in
her
good
actual

did
bring
in
order
to test
hi
tast
she brought
him
a
whole select
of
thing
all
spread
out
on
an old
newspap
there
were
old
half rotten veget
bone
from
the
even meal
cover
in white sauc
that
had gone
hard
a
few raisin
and almond
some

chees
that
gregor
had declar
ined
two
day
befor
a dri
roll
and
some bread
spread
with butter
and salt
as
well
as
all
that
she
had pour
some water
into
the dish
which
had probabl
been perman
set asid
for
gregor
s
use
and
place
it
besid

them
then
out
of consider
for
gregor
s
feel
as
she knew
that
he
would
not
eat
in
front
of
her
she
hurri
out
again
and
even
turn
the
key
in
the
lock
so
that
gregor
would know
he
could
make
thing
as comfort
for
himself
as
he

like
gregor
s
littl
leg
whir
at
last
he
could
eat
what
s
more
hi injuri
must
already
have complet
heal
as
he found
no
difficulti
in
move
thi
amaz
him
as
more
than
a
month
earlier
he
had cut
hi
finger
slightli
with
a knife
he
thought

of
how
hi
finger
had
still hurt
the
day
befor
yesterday
am
i
less sensit
than
i
use
to
be
then
he
thought
and
wa
alreadi
suck
greedili
at
the
chees
which
had immedi
almost compellingli attract
him
much
more
than
the
other
food
on
the newspap
quickli

one
after anoth
hi
eye
water
with pleasur
he consum
the
chees
the
veget
and
the
sauc
the
fresh
food
on
the
other
hand
he
didn
t
like
at
all
and
even drag
the
thing
he
did
want
to
eat
a
littl
way
away
from
them
becaus

couldn't stand the smell long after he had finished eating and laying lethargic in the same place his sister slowly turned the key in the lock as a sign to him that he should withdraw himself immediately although he had been half asleep and he

under
the
couch
but
he
need
great
self
control
to
stay
there
even
for
the
short
time
that
hi
sister
wa
in
the
room
as
eat
so
much
food
had
round
out
hi
bodi
a
littl
and
he
could hardli
breath
in
that narrow
space
half

suffoc
he
watch
with bulg
eye
as
hi
sister
unselfconsci
took
a broom
and swept
up
the
left
over mix
them
in
with
the
food
he
had
not
even
touch
at
all
as
if
it
could
not
be
use
ani
more
she
quickli
drop
it
all
into
a

bin
close
it
with
it
wooden lid
and
carri
everyth
out
she
had hardli
turn
her
back
befor
gregor
came
out
again
from
under
the
couch
and stretch
himself
thi
wa
how
gregor
receiv
hi
food
each
day
now
onc
in
the
morn
while
hi
parent
and
the

maid
were
still asleep
and
the second
time
after everyon
had eaten
their
meal
at midday
as
hi
parent
would
sleep
for
a
littl
while
then
as
well
and
gregor
s
sister
would send
the maid
away
on
some errand
gregor
s
father
and
mother
certainli
did
not

want
him
to starv
either
but perhap
it
would
have
been
more
than
they
could stand
to
have
ani
more
experi
of
hi
feed
than
be
told
about
it
and perhap
hi
sister
want
to spare
them
what distress
she
could
as
they
were inde suffer
enough
it

wa
imposs
for
gregor
to
find
out
what
they
had told
the doctor
and
the locksmith
that
first
morn
to
get
them
out
of
the
flat
as
nobodi
could understand
him
nobodi
not
even
hi
sister
thought
that
he
could understand
them
so
he
had
to
be content

to
hear
hi
sister
s sigh
and
appeal
to
the saint
as
she
move
about
hi
room
it
wa
onli
later
when
she
had
becom
a

hi
dinner
today
she
might say
when
he
had
dilig
clear
away
all
the
food
left
for
him
or
if
he
left
most
of
it
which slowli

about
what
had
happen
even
though
no
one
had
ask
that
of
her
now
gregor
s
sister
also
had
to
help
hi
mother
with

the cook
although
that
wa
not
so
much bother
as
no
one
ate
veri
much
gregor
often
heard
how
one
of
them
would

i ve
had enough
or
someth
similar
no
one
drank
veri
much

either
hi
sister
would sometim
ask
hi
father
whether
he
would
like
a
beer
hope
for
the
chanc
to
go
and fetch
it
herself
when
hi
father
then
said
noth
she
would add
so
that
he
would
not
feel selfish
that
she
could send
the housekeep
for
it

but
then
hi
father
would
close
the matter
with
a
big loud
no
and
no
more
would
be
said
even
befor
the
first
day
had
come
to
an
end
hi
father
had explain
to
gregor
s
mother
and
sister
what
their financ
and prospect
were
now
and
then

he stood
up
from
the
tabl
and
took
some receipt
or
document
from
the
littl
cash
box
he
had save
from
hi
busi
when
it
had collaps
five
year
earlier
gregor
heard
how
he
open
the complic
lock
and
then
close
it
again
after
he
had taken
the item

he
want
what
he
heard
hi
father
say
wa
some
of
the
first
good news
that
gregor
heard
sinc
he
had
first

him
about
it
anyway
their
busi
misfortun
had reduc
the
famili
to
a
state
of
total
despair
and
gregor
s
onli concern
at
that
time
had
been
to arrang
thing
so
that
they
could
all
forget
about
it
as

even
though
gregor
had
later
earn
so
much
that
he
wa
in
a
posit

to bear
the cost
of
the
whole
famili
and
did
bear
them
they
had
even
got
use
to
it
both
gregor
and
the
famili
they
took
the money
with gratitud
and
he
wa
glad
to provid
it
although
there
wa
no
longer
much

seventeen
her
life
up
till
then

had
been
veri
enviabl
consist
of
wear
nice cloth
sleep
late
help
out
in
the
busi
join
in
with
a
few modest
pleasur
and
most
of
all
play
the violin
whenev
they
began
to
talk
of
the
need
to earn
money
gregor
would
alway
first
let
go
of

the
door
and
then
throw
himself
onto
the cool leather
sofa
next
to
it
as
he
becam
quit
hot
with shame
and
regret
he
would often
lie
there
the
whole
night
through
not sleep
a
wink
but scratch
at
the leather
for hour
on
end
or
he
might

go
to
all
the effort
of
push
a
chair
to
the
window
climb
up
onto
the sill
and prop
up
in
the
chair
lean
on
the
window
to stare
out
of
it
he
had
use
to
feel
a
great
sens
of freedom
from
do
thi
but
do
it

now
wa
obvious
someth
more rememb
than experienc
as
what
he
actual
saw
in
thi
way
wa
becom
less
distinct everi
day
even
thing
that
were
quit
near
he
had
use
to curs
the
ever
present
view
of
the hospit
across
the
street
but
now
he
could
not

see
it
at
all
and
if
he
had
not known
that
he
live
in charlottenstrass
which
wa
a
quiet
street
despit
be
in
the
middl
of
the
citi
he
could
have
thought
that
he
wa
look
out
the
window
at
a barren wast
where
the grey sky
and

grey
earth mingl insepar
hi observ
sister
onli
need
to
notic
the
chair
twice
befor
she
would
alway
push
it
back
to
it
exact posit
by
the
window
after
she
had tidi
up
the
room
and
even
left
the inner pane
of
the
window
open
from
then

on
if
gregor
had
onli
been
abl
to speak
to
hi
sister
and thank
her
for
all
that
she
had
to
do
for
him
it
would
have
been easier
for
him
to bear
it
but
as
it
wa
it
caus
him
pain
hi
sister
natur
tri
as
far

as
possibl
to pretend
there
wa
noth
burdensom
about
it
and
the
longer
it
went
on
of cours
the
better
she
wa
abl
to
do
so
but
as
time
went
by
gregor
wa
also
abl
to
see
through
it
all
so
much
better
it
had
even
becom
veri

unpleas
for
him
now
whenev
she
enter
the
room
no
sooner
had
she
come
in
than
she
would
quickli
close
the
door
as
a
precaut
so
that
no
one
would
have
to suffer
the
view
into
gregor
s
room
then
she
would
go
straight
to
the
window
and

pull
it hurriedly
open
almost
as
if
she
were suffoc
even
if
it
was cold
she
would
stay
at
the
window
breath
deeply
for
a little
while
she
would alarm
gregor
twice
a
day
with this
run
about
and noise
make
he
would
stay
under
the
couch
shiver

the
whole
while
know
full
well
that
she
would
certainli
have
like
to spare
him
thi ordeal
but
it
wa
imposs
for
her
to
be
in
the
same
room
with
him
with
the
window
close
one
day
about
a
month
after
gregor
s transform
when
hi
sister
no

longer
had
ani
particular
reason
to
be shock
at
hi
appear
she
came
into
the
room
a
littl
earlier
than usual
and
found
him
still stare
out
the
window
motionless
and
just
where
he
would
be
most horribl
in itself
hi
sister
s
not
come
into
the
room

would
have
been
no
surpris
for
gregor
as
it
would
have
been difficult
for
her
to
immedi
open
the
window
while
he
wa
still
there
but
not
onli
did
she
not
come
in
she
went straight
back
and
close
the
door
behind
her
a
stranger
would
have
thought

he
had threaten
her
and
tri
to bite
her
gregor
went straight
to hide
himself
under
the
couch
of
cours
but
he
had
to wait
until midday
befor
hi
sister
came
back
and
she
seem
much
more
uneasi
than usual
it
made
him
realis
that
she
still
found

hi
appear
unbear
and
would continu
to
do
so
she probabl
even
had
to overcom
the
urg
to flee
when
she
saw
the
littl
bit
of
him
that protrud
from
under
the
couch
one
day
in
order
to spare
her
even
thi
sight
he
spent four hour
carri

the bedsheet
over
to
the
couch
on
hi
back
and arrang
it
so
that
he
wa
complet
cover
and
hi
sister
would
not
be
abl
to
see
him
even
if
she bent
down
if
she
did
not
think
thi
sheet
wa
necessari
then
all
she
had
to
do

wa
take
it
off
again
as
it
wa
clear
enough
that
it
wa
no
pleasur
for
gregor
to
cut
himself
off
so
complet
she
left
the
sheet
where
it
wa
gregor
even
thought
he glimps
a
look
of
gratitud
one
time
when
he
care
look
out
from
under

the
sheet
to
see
how
hi
sister
like
the
new arrang
for
the
first fourteen
day
gregor
s
parent
could
not
bring themselv
to
come
into
the
room
to
see
him
he
would often
hear
them
say
how
they appreci
all
the
new
work
hi
sister
wa
do

even
though
befor
they
had seen
her
as
a girl
who
wa
somewhat
useless
and frequent
been
annoy
with
her
but
now
the
two
of
them
father
and
mother
would
often
both
wait
outsid
the
door
of
gregor
s
room
while
hi
sister
tidi
up
in
there
and

as
soon
as
she
went
out
again
she
would
have
to tell
them
exactli
how
everyth
look
what
gregor
had eaten
how
he
had behav
thi
time
and whether
perhap
ani
slight improv
could
be
seen
hi
mother
also
want
to
go
in
and
visit
gregor
rel
soon

but
hi
father
and
sister
at
first
persuad
her
against
it
gregor
listen
veri
close
to
all
thi
and approv
fulli
later
though
she
had
to
be
held
back
by
forc
which
made
her
call
out
let
me
go
and
see
gregor
he
is my
unfortun
son
can

t
you
understand
i
have
to
see
him
and
gregor
would
think
to
himself
that mayb
it
would
be
better
if
hi
mother
came
in
not
everi
day
of
cours
but
one
day
a
week
perhap
she
could understand
everyth
much
better
than
hi
sister
who
for
all

her courag
wa
still
just
a child
after
all
and
realli
might
not
have
had
an adult
s appreci
of
the burdensom
job
she
had taken
on
gregor
s wish
to
see
hi
mother
wa
soon
realis
out
of consider
for
hi
parent
gregor
want
to avoid
be

seen
at
the
window
dure
the
day
the
few squar
meter
of
the
floor
did
not
give
him
much
room
to
crawl
about
it
wa
hard
just
lie
quietli
through
the
night
hi
food
soon
stop
give
him
ani
pleasur
at
all
and
so
to entertain
himself

he
got
into
the habit
of
crawl
up
and
down
the wall
and
ceil
he
wa
especi
fond
of hang
from
the
ceil
it
wa
quit
differ
from
lie
on
the
floor
he
could breath
more freeli
hi
bodi
had
a
light
swing
to
it
and
up
there

relax
and
almost
happi
it
might
happen
that
he
would surpris
even
himself
by
let
go
of
the
ceil
and
land
on
the
floor
with
a
crash
but
now
of
cours
he
had
far
better
control
of
hi
bodi
than
befor
and
even
with
a
fall
great

as
that caus
himself
no
damag
veri
soon
hi
sister
notic
gregor
s
new
way
of entertain
himself
he
had
after
all
left trace
of
the adhes
from
hi
feet
as
he
crawl
about
and
got
it
into
her
head
to
make
it
as
easi
as possibl
for

him
by
remov
the
furnitur
that
got
in
hi
way
especi
the chest
of drawer
and
the desk
now
thi
wa
not
someth
that
she
would
be
abl
to
do
by
herself
she
did
not dare
to
ask
for
help
from
her
father
the sixteen
year
old
maid

had
carri
on
brave
sinc
the
cook
had
left
but
she
certainli
would
not
have
help
in
thi
she
had
even
ask
to
be
allow
to
keep
the kitchen
lock
at
all
time
and
never
to
have
to
open
the
door unless
it
wa
especi
import
so
hi

sister
had
no
choic
but
to choos
some
time
when
gregor
s
father
wa
not
there
and
fetch
hi
mother
to
help
her
as
she approach
the
room
gregor
could
hear
hi
mother
express
her
joy
but
onc
at
the
door
she
went silent
first
of
cours
hi

sister
came
in
and
look
round
to
see
that
everyth
in
the
room
wa
alright
and
onli
then
did
she
let
her
mother
enter
gregor
had hurriedli
pull
the
sheet
down
lower
over
the
couch
and
put
more fold
into
it
so
that
everyth
realli
look
as
if

it
had
just
been thrown
down
by
chanc
gregor
also refrain
thi
time
from spi
out
from
under
the
sheet
he
gave
up
the
chanc
to
see
hi
mother
until
later
and
wa
simpli
glad
that
she
had
come
you
can
come
in
he
can
t
be
seen

said
hi
sister
obvious
lead
her
in
by
the
hand
the
old
chest
of
drawer
wa
too
heavi
for
a pair
of
feeb
women
to
be
heav
about
but
gregor
listen
as
they
push
it
from
it
place
hi
sister
alway
take
on
the heaviest
part
of
the

work
for
herself
and ignor
her
mother
s warn
that
she
would strain
herself
thi
last
a
veri
long
time
after labour
at
it
for fifteen
minut
or
more
hi

be
better
to leav
the
chest
where
it
wa
for
one
thing
it
wa

too
heavi
for
them
to
get
the
job
finish
befor
gregor
s
father
got
home
and leav
it
in
the
middl
of
the
room
it
would
be
in
hi
way
even
more
and
for anoth
thing
it
wasn
t
even
sure
that
take
the
furnitur
away
would
realli

be
ani
help
to
him
she
thought
just
the opposit
the
sight
of
the bare
wall
sadden
her
right
to
her heart
and whi wouldn
t
gregor
feel
the
same
way
about
it
he d
been
use
to
thi
furnitur
in
hi
room
for
a long
time
and

it
would
make
him
feel abandon
to
be
in
an
empti
room
like
that
then
quietli
almost whisper
as
if
want
gregor
whose whereabout
she
did
not
know
to
hear
not
even
the tone
of
her
voic
as
she
wa
convinc
that
he
did
not understand
her
word

she
ad
and
take
the
furnitur
away
won
t
it
seem
like
we re
show
that
we
ve
given
up
all
hope
of improv
and
we re
abandon
him
to cope
for
himself
i
think
it
d
be best
to leav
the
room
exactli
the
way
it

wa
befor
so
that
when
gregor
come
back
to us
again
he ll
find
everyth
unchang
and
he ll
be
abl
to forget
the
time
in between
all
the easier
hear
these
word
from
hi
mother
made
gregor
realis
that
the
lack
of
ani
direct
human commun
along

with
the monoton
life
led
by
the
famili
dure
these
two month
must
have
made
him
confus
he
could
think
of
no
other
way
of explain
to
himself
whi
he
had serious
want
hi
room
empti
out
had
he
realli
want
to transform
hi
room
into
a
cave

warm
room
fit
out
with
the
nice
furnitur
he
had inherit
that
would
have
let
him
crawl
around
unimped
in
ani
direct
but
it
would
also
have
let
him
quickli
forget
hi
past
when
he
had
still
been
human
he
had
come
veri
close
to forget
and

it
had only
been
the
voic
of
hi
mother
unheard
for
so
long
that
had shaken
him
out
of
it
noth
should
be
remov
everyth
had
to
stay
he
could
not
do
without
the
good influenc
the
furnitur
had
on
hi
condit
and
if
the
furnitur
made
it

difficult
for
him
to
crawl
about mindlessli
that
wa
not
a loss
but
a
great
advantag
hi
sister
unfortun
did
not agre
she
had
becom
use
to
the
idea
not
without
reason
that
she
wa
gregor
s spokesman
to
hi
parent
about
the
thing
that concern
him
thi

meant
that
hi
mother
s advic
now
wa
suffici
reason
for
her
to insist
on remov
not
onli
the
chest
of
drawer
and
the
desk
as
she
had
thought
at
first
but
all
the
furnitur
apart
from
the
all
import
couch
it
wa
more
than childish pervers
of

cours
or
the unexpect
confid
she
had
recent acquir
that
made
her
insist
she
had inde
notic
that
gregor
need
a lot
of
room
to
crawl
about
in wherea
the
furnitur
as
far
as anyon
could
see
wa
of
no
use
to
him
at
all
girl
of
that age

though
do
becom
enthusiast
about
thing
and
feel
they
must
get
their
way
whenev
they
can perhap
thi
wa
what tempt
grete
to
make
gregor
s situat
seem
even
more
shock
than
it
wa
so
that
she
could
do
even
more
for
him
grete
would probabl
be

the
onli
one
who
would dare
enter
a
room
domin
by
gregor
crawl
about
the
bare
wall
by
himself
so
she refus
to
let
her
mother
dissuad
her
gregor
s
mother
alreadi
look
uneasi
in
hi
room
she
soon
stop
speak
and
help
gregor
s
sister
to
get

the
chest
of
drawer
out
with
what strength
she
had
the
chest
of
drawer
wa
someth
that
gregor
could
do
without
if
he
had
to
but
the
write
desk
had
to
stay
hardli
had
the
two
women
push
the
chest
of
drawer
groan
out
of
the
room
than

gregor
poke
hi
head
out
from
under
the
couch
to
see
what
he
could
do
about
it
he meant
to
be
as
care
and
consider
as
he
could
but
unfortun
it
wa
hi
mother
who
came
back
first
while
grete
in
the
next
room
had
her
arm
round

the
chest
push
and pull
at
it
from
side
to
side
by
herself
without
of
cours
move
it
an inch
hi
mother
wa
not
use
to
the sight
of
gregor
he
might
have
made
her
ill
so
gregor
hurri
backward
to
the
far
end
of
the
couch
in

hi startlement
though
he
wa
not
abl
to prevent
the
sheet
at
it
front
from
move
a
littl
it
wa
enough
to attract
hi
mother
s attent
she
stood
veri
still remain
there
a
moment
and
then
went
back
out
to
grete
gregor
kept
tri
to assur
himself

that
noth
unusu
wa
happen
it
wa
just
a
few
piec
of
furnitur
be
move
after
all
but
he
soon
had
to admit
that
the
women
go
to
and fro
their
littl
call
to
each
other
the scrape
of
the
furnitur
on
the
floor
all
these
thing
made

him
feel
as
if
he
were
be assail
from
all
side
with
hi
head
and
leg
pull
in
against
him
and
hi
bodi
press
to
the
floor
he
wa
forc
to admit
to
himself
that
he
could
not
stand
all
of
thi
much longer
they
were empti
hi

room
out
take
away
everyth
that
wa
dear
to
him
they
had already taken
out
the
chest
contain
hi
fretsaw
and
other
tool
now
they threaten
to remov
the
write
desk
with
it
place
clearli
worn
into
the
floor
the
desk
where
he
had
done
hi
homework
as

a
busi
traine
at high school
even
while
he
had
been
at infant
school
he
realli
could
not wait
ani
longer
to
see
whether
the
two
women
s
intent
were
good
he
had
nearli
forgotten
they
were
there
anyway
as
they
were
now
too
tire
to
say
anyth

while
they
work
and
he
could only
hear
their feet
as
they
step
heavily
on
the
floor
so
while
the
women
were leant
against
the
desk
in
the
other
room
catch
their breath
he sallied
out
changing
direct
four
time
not
know
what
he
should save
first
before

hi
attent
wa
suddenli
caught
by
the pictur
on
the
wall
which
wa
alreadi
denud
of
everyth
els
that
had
been
on
it
of
the ladi
dress
in copiou
fur
he
hurri
up
onto
the pictur
and
press
himself
against
it
glass
it
held
him
firmli
and
felt

good
on
hi
hot
belli
thi
pictur
at least
now
total
cover
by
gregor
would
certainli
be
taken
away
by
no
one
he
turn
hi
head
to face
the
door
into
the
live
room
so
that
he
could watch
the
women
when
they
came
back
they
had
not

allow
themselv
a
long
rest
and
came
back
quit
soon
grete
had
put
her
arm
around
her
mother
and
wa
nearli
carri
her
what shall
we
take
now
then
said
grete
and
look
around
her
eye
met
those
of
gregor
on
the
wall
perhap
onli
becaus
her
mother

wa
there
she
remain
calm
bent
her
face
to
her
so
that
she
would
not
look
round
and
said
albeit hurriedly
and
with
a
tremor
in
her voice
come
on
let
s
go
back
in
the
live
room
for
a
while
gregor
could
see
what
grete
had
in mind

she
want
to
take
her
mother
somewher
safe
and
then chase
him
down
from
the
wall
well
she
could certainli
tri
it
he
sat
unyield
on
hi
pictur
he
would rather
jump
at
grete
s
face
but
grete
s
word
had
made
her
mother
quit
worri
she

step
to
one
side
saw
the
enorm
brown
patch
against
the flower
of
the wallpap
and
befor
she
even
realis
it
wa
gregor
that
she
saw
scream
oh
god
oh
god
arm
outstretch
she
fell
onto
the
couch
as
if
she
had given
up
everyth
and
stay
there

immobil
gregor
shout
hi
sister
glower
at
him
and shake
her fist
that
wa
the
first
word
she
had spoken
to
him
directli
sinc
hi
transform
she
ran
into
the
other
room
to fetch
some kind
of
smell
salt
to
bring
her
mother
out
of
her faint
gregor

want
to
help
too
he
could save
hi
pictur
later
although
he stuck
fast
to
the glass
and
had
to pull
himself
off
by
forc
then
he
too
ran
into
the
next
room
as
if
he
could advis
hi
sister
like
in
the
old
day
but
he
had

just
stand
behind
her
do
noth
she
wa
look
into variou
bottl
he startl
her
when
she
turn
round
a
bottl
fell
to
the
ground
and broke
a
splinter
cut
gregor
s
face
some kind
of caustic
medicin
splash
all
over
him
now
without delay
ani
longer

grete
took hold
of
all
the
bottl
she
could
and
ran
with
them
in
to
her
mother
she slam
the
door
shut
with
her
foot
so
now
gregor
wa
shut
out
from
hi
mother
who
becaus
of
him
mighgt
be
near
to death
he
could
not
open
the

door
if
he
did
not
want
to chase
hi
sister
away
and
she
had
to
stay
with
hi
mother
there
wa
noth
for
him
to
do
but
wait
and oppress
with anxieti
and
self reproach
he
began
to
crawl
about
he
crawl
over
everyth
wall
furnitur
ceil
and

final
in
hi
confus
as
the
whole
room
began
to spin
around
him
he
fell
down
into
the
middl
of
the dinner
tabl
he
lay
there
for
a
while numb
and
immobil
all
around
him
it
wa
quiet
mayb
that
wa
a
good
sign
then
there
wa
someon

at
the
door
the maid
of
cours
had lock
herself
in
her
kitchen
so
that
grete
would
have
to
go
and answer
it
hi
father
had
arriv
home
what
s
happen
were
hi
first
word
grete
s
appear
must
have
made
everyth
clear
to
him
she answer
him

with subdu
voic
and openli
press
her
face
into
hi
chest
mother
s faint
but
she
s
better
now
gregor
got
out
just
as
i
expect
said
hi
father
just
as
i
alway
said
but
you
women
wouldn
t
listen
would
you
it
wa
clear
to
gregor
that

grete
had
not
said
enough
and
that
hi
father
took
it
to mean
that
someth
bad
had
happen
that
he
wa
respons
for
some act
of
violenc
that
meant
gregor
would
now
have
to
tri
to
calm
hi
father
as
he
did
not
have
the
time
to explain

thing
to
him
even
if
that
had
been
possibl
so
he fled
to
the
door
of
hi
room
and
press
himself
against
it
so
that
hi
father
when
he
came
in
from
the
hall
could
see
straight
away
that
gregor
had
the
best
intent
and
would
go
back

into
hi
room
without delay
that
it
would
not
be necessari
to drive
him
back
but
that
they
had
onli
to
open
the
door
and
he
would disappear
hi
father
though
wa
not
in
the mood
to
notic
subtleti
like
that ah
he
shout
as
he
came
in

sound
as
if
he
were both
angri
and
glad
at
the
same
time
gregor
drew
hi
head
back
from
the
door
and
lift
it
toward
hi
father
he
realli
had
not imagin
hi
father
the
way
he
stood
there
now
of
late
with
hi
new
habit
of
crawl

about
he
had
neglect
to pay
attent
to
what
wa
go
on
the
rest
of
the
flat
the
way
he
had
done
befor
he
realli
ought
to
have expect
thing
to
have
chang
but
still
still
wa
that
realli
hi
father
the
same
tire
man
as
use
to

be
lay
there entomb
in
hi
bed
when
gregor
came
back
from
hi
busi
trip
who
would receiv
him
sit
in
the

look
at
all
the
stain
on
thi
coat
with
it
gold
button
alway
kept
polish
and shini
while
the
old
man
in
it
would sleep
highli
uncomfort
but
peac
as
soon
as
it
struck
ten
gregor
s
mother
would speak
gentli
to

hi
father
to wake
him
and
tri
to persuad
him
to
go
to
bed
as
he
couldn
t
sleep
properli
where
he
wa
and
he
realli
had
to
get
hi
sleep
if
he
wa
to
be
up
at six
to
get
to
work
but
sinc
he
had
been

in
work
he
had
becom
more obstin
and
would
alway
insist
on
stay
longer
at
the
tabl
even
though
he regularli
fell asleep
and
it
wa
then
harder
than ever
to
persuad
him
to exchang
the
chair
for
hi
bed
then
howev
much
mother
and
sister
would importun

him
with
littl
reproach
and
warn
he
would keep slowli
shake
hi
head
for
a quarter
of
an hour
with
hi
eye
close
and
refus
to
get
up
gregor
s
mother
would tug
at
hi
sleev
whisper
endear
into
hi
ear
gregor
s
sister
would leav
her
work

to
help
her
mother
but
noth
would
have
ani
effect
on
him
he
would
just
sink deeper
into
hi
chair
onli
when
the
two
women
took
him
under
the
arm
he
would abruptli
open
hi
eye
look
at
them
one
after
the
other
and
say
what
a
life

thi
is
what
peac
i
get
in
my old
age
and support
by
the
two
women
he
would lift
himself
up
care
as
if
he
were
carri
the
greatest
load
himself
let
the
women
take
him
to
the
door
send
them
off
and
carri
on
by
himself
while

gregor
s
mother
would throw
down
her needl
and
hi
sister
her pen
so
that
they
could
run
after
hi
father
and
continu
be
of
help
to
him
who
in
thi
tire
and overwork
famili
would
have
had
time
to
give
more
attent
to
gregor
than
wa absolut

necessari
the household
budget
becam
even smaller
so
now
the
maid
wa
dismiss
an
enorm
thick
bone charwoman
with white hair
that flap
around
her
head
came
everi
morn
and
even
to
do
the heaviest
work
everyth
els
wa
look
after
by
gregor
s
mother
on
top
of

the
larg
amount
of
sew
work
she
did
gregor
even
learn
listen
to
the
even convers
about
what price
they
had
hope
for
that
sever
item
of
jewelleri
belong
to
the
famili
had
been sold
even
though
both
mother
and
sister
had
been
veri
fond
of
wear
them

at function
and celebr
but
the loudest
complaint
wa
that
although
the
flat
wa
much
too
big
for
their present
circumst
they
could
not
move
out
of
it
there
wa
no
imagin
way
of transfer
gregor
to
the
new address
he
could
see
quit
well
though
that
there

were
more
reason
than consider
for
him
that
made
it
difficult
for
them
to
move
it
would
have
been
quit
easi
to transport
him
in
ani
suitabl
crate
with
a
few
air
hole
in
it
the main
thing
hold
the
famili
back
from
their
decis
to
move
wa

much
more
to
do
with
their
total
despair
and
the
thought
that
they
had
been struck
with
a
misfortun
unlik
anyth
experienc
by
anyon
els
they knew
or
were relat
to
they
carri
out
absolut
everyth
that
the world
expect
from poor
peopl
gregor
s
father
brought
bank

employe
their breakfast
hi
mother
sacrif
herself
by
wash
cloth
for stranger
hi
sister
ran
back
and forth
behind
her
desk
at
the behest
of
the custom
but
they
just
did
not
have
the strength
to
do
ani
more
and
the injuri
in
gregor
s
back
began
to

hurt
as
much
as
when
it
wa
new
after
they
had
come
back
from
take
hi
father
to
bed
gregor
s
mother
and
sister
would
now
leav
their
work
where
it
wa
and
sit
close
togeth
cheek
to cheek
hi
mother
would point
to
gregor
s
room
and

say
close
that
door
grete
and
then
when
he
wa
in
the
dark
again
they
would sit
in
the
next
room
and
their tear
would mingl
or
they
would simpli
sit
there
stare
dri
eye
at
the
tabl
gregor
hardli
slept
at
all
either
night
or
day
sometim

he
would
think
of
take
over
the
famili
s
affair
just
like
befor
the
next
time
the
door
wa
open
he
had long
forgotten
about
hi
boss
and
the
chief
clerk
but
they
would appear
again
in
hi
thought
the salesmen
and
the apprentic
that stupid teaboy
two

or
three friend
from
other
busi
one
of
the chambermaid
from
a
provinci
hotel
a
tender
memori
that appear
and disappear
again
a cashier
from
a
hat
shop
for whom
hi
attent
had
been
seriou
but
too
slow
all
of
them
appear
to
him
mix
togeth
with stranger

and
other
he
had forgotten
but instead
of
help
him
and
hi
famili
they
were
all
of
them
inaccess
and
he
wa
glad
when
they
disappear
other
time
he
wa
not
at
all
in
the mood
to
look
after
hi
famili
he
wa
fill
with simpl
rage
about

the
lack
of
attent
he
wa
shown
and
although
he
could
think
of
noth
he
would
have
want
he
made
plan
of
how
he
could
get
into
the pantri
where
he
could
take
all
the
thing
he
wa
entitl
to
even
if
he
wa
not hungri
gregor
s

sister
no
longer
thought
about
how
she
could
pleas
him
but
would
hurriedli
push
some
food
or
other
into
hi
room
with
her
foot
befor
she
rush
out
to
work
in
the
morn
and
at midday
and
in
the
even
she
would sweep
it
away
again
with
the

broom
indiffer
as
to
whether
it
had
been eaten
or
more
often
than
not
had
been
left
total untouch
she
still
clear
up
the
room
in
the
even
but
now
she
could
not
have
been
ani
quicker
about
it
smear
of dirt
were
left
on
the
wall
here

and
there
were
littl
ball
of dust
and filth
at
first
gregor
went
into
one
of
the worst
of
these
place
when
hi
sister
arriv
as
a reproach
to
her
but
he
could
have
stay
there
for week
without
hi
sister
do
anyth
about
it
she
could
see

the dirt
as
well
as
he
could
but
she
had simpli
decid
to
leav
him
to
it
at
the
same
time
she
becam touchi
in
a
way
that
wa
quit
new
for
her
and
which
everyon
in
the
famili
understood clean
up
gregor
s
room
wa
for
her

and
her alon
gregor
s
mother
did
onc
thoroughli
clean
hi
room
and
need
to
use
sever
bucket
of
water
to
do
it
although
that
much damp
also
made
gregor
ill
and
he
lay
flat
on
the
couch
bitter
and
immobil
but
hi
mother
wa
to
be punish

still
more
for
what
she
had done
as
hardli
had
hi
sister
arriv
home
in
the
even
than
she
notic
the
chang
in
gregor
s
room
and highli
aggriev
ran
back
into
the
live
room
where despit
her
mother
rais
and implor
hand
she broke
into convuls tear

her
father
of
cours
wa
startl
out
of
hi
chair
and
the
two parent
look
on astonish
and helpless
then
they
too
becam

quak
with tear
thump
on
the
tabl
with
her small

fist
and
gregor
hiss
in anger
that
no
one
had
even
thought
of
close
the
door
to

it
wa
like
a
kind
of attack

instead
of
be afraid
the
charwoman
just
lift
up
one
of
the
chair
from near
the
door
and
stood
there
with
her mouth
open
clearli
intend
not
to
close
her
mouth
until
the
chair
in
her
hand
had
been
slam
down
into
gregor
s
back
aren
t
you

come
ani
closer
then
she
ask
when
gregor
turn
round
again
and
she calmli
put
the
chair
back
in
the corner
gregor
had almost
entir
stop
eat
onli
if
he
happen
to
find
himself
next
to
the
food
that
had
been prepar
for
him
he
might
take
some

of
it
into
hi
mouth
to
play
with
it
leav
it
there
a
few
hour
and
then
more
often
than
not spit
it
out
again
at
first
he
thought
it
wa
distress
at
the
state
of
hi
room
that
stop
him
eat
but
he
had
soon
got
use

to
the
chang
made
there
they
had
got
into
the habit
of
put
thing
into
thi
room
that
they
had
no
room
for anywher
els
and
there
were
now
mani
such
thing
as
one
of
the
room
in
the
flat
had
been rent
out
to
three
gentlemen
these

earnest
gentlemen
all
three
of
them
had
full beard
as
gregor
learn peer
through
the
crack
in
the
door
one
day
were pain
insist
on
thing
be
tidi
thi
meant
not
onli
in
their
own
room
but
sinc
they
had
taken
a
room
in
thi establish
in
the

entir
flat
and especi
in
the
kitchen
unnecessari
clutter
wa
someth
they
could
not
toler
especi
if
it
wa
dirti
they
had moreov
brought
most
of
their
own
furnish
and equip
with
them
for
thi
reason
mani
thing
had
becom
superflu
which
although
they
could
not
be sold

the
famili
did
not wish
to discard
all
these
thing
found
their
way
into
gregor
s
room
the dustbin
from
the kitchen
found
their
way
in
in
there
too
the
charwoman
wa
alway
in
a
a
hurri
and
anyth
she
couldn
t
use
for
the
time
be
she
would
just

chuck
in
there
he fortun
would
usual
see
no
more
than
the object
and
the
hand
that
held
it
the woman
most
like
meant
to fetch
the
thing
back
out
again
when
she
had
time
and
the opportun
or
to throw
everyth
out
in
one
go
but
what

actual
happen
wa
that
they
were
left
where
they
land
when
they
had
first
been thrown unless
gregor
made
hi
way
through
the junk
and
move
it
somewher
els
at
first
he
move
it
becaus
with
no
other
room
free
where
he
could
crawl
about
he
wa
forc

to
but
later
on
he
came
to enjoy
it
although
move
about
in
that
way
left
him
sad
and
tire
to death
and
he
would remain
immobil
for
hour
afterward
the
gentlemen
who
rent
the
room
would sometim
take
their
even
meal
at
home
in
the
live
room

that
wa
use
by
everyon
and
so
the
door
to
thi
room
wa
often
kept
close
in
the
even
but
gregor
found
it
easi
to
give
up
have
the
door
open
he
had
after
all
often
fail
to
make
use
of
it
when
it
wa
open
and
without

the
famili
have
notic
it
lain
in
hi
room
in
it
darkest
corner
one
time
though
the
charwoman
left
the
door
to
the
live
room
slightli
open
and
it
remain
open
when
the
gentlemen
who
rent
the
room
came
in
in
the
even
and
the
light
wa
put

on
they
sat
up
at
the
tabl
where formerli
gregor
had
taken
hi
meal
with
hi
father
and
mother
they unfold
the serviett
and
pick
up
their knife
and fork
gregor
s
mother
immedi
appear
in
the
doorway
with
a
dish
of meat
and
soon
behind
her
came

hi
sister
with
a
dish
pile
high
with potato
the
food
wa
steam
and
fill
the
room
with
it
smell
the
gentlemen
bent
over
the
dish
set
in
front
of
them
as
if
they
want
to test
the
food
befor
eat
it
and
the gentleman
in
the
middl

who
seem
to count
as
an author
for
the
other
two
did
inde
cut
off
a
piec
of meat
while
it
wa
still
in
it
dish
clearli
wish
to establish
whether
it
wa
suffici
cook
or whether
it
should
be sent
back
to
the kitchen
it
wa
to

hi
satisfact
and
gregor
s
mother
and
sister
who
had
been
look
on anxious
began
to breath
again
and
smile
the
famili
themselv
ate
in
the
kitchen
nonetheless
gregor
s
father
came
into
the
live
room
befor
he
went
into
the kitchen
bow
onc
with
hi
cap
in

hi
hand
and
did
hi
round
of
the
tabl
the
gentlemen
stood
as
one
and mumbl
someth
into
their
beard
then
onc
they
were alon
they
ate
in near perfect
silenc
it
seem remark
to
gregor
that abov
all
the variou
nois
of
eat
their chew teeth
could

still
be
heard
as
if
they
had
want
to show
gregor
that
you
need
teeth
in
order
to
eat
and
it
wa
not possibl
to perform
anyth
with jaw
that
are toothless
howev
nice
they
might
be
i
d
like
to
eat
someth
said
gregor
anxious
but
not

anyth
like
they
re
eat
they
do
feed
themselv
and
here
i
am
die throughout
all
thi
time
gregor
could
not
rememb
have
heard
the violin
be
play
but
thi
even
it
began
to
be
heard
from
the kitchen
the
three
gentlemen
had alreadi
finish
their
meal
the

one
in
the
middl
had produc
a
newspap
given
a
page
to
each
of
the
other
and
now
they leant
back
in
their
chair
read
them
and smoke
when
the violin
began
play
they
becam
attent
stood
up
and
went
on tip
toe
over
to
the
door
of

the hallway
where
they
stood
press
against
each
other
someon
must
have
heard
them
in
the kitchen
as
gregor
s
father
call
out
is
the
play
perhap
unpleas
for
the
gentlemen
we
can stop
it
straight
away
on
the
contrari
said
the
middl
gentleman
would
the
young ladi

not
like
to
come
in
and
play
for us
here
in
the
room
where
it
is
after
all
much
more
cosi
and comfort
oh
ye
we
d
love
to
call
back
gregor
s
father
as
if
he
had
been
the violin
player
himself
the
gentlemen
step
back
into

the
room
and
wait
gregor
s
father
soon
appear
with
the

coat
hi
mother
though
wa
offer
a seat
by
one
of
the
gentlemen
and sat

leav
the
chair
where
the gentleman
happen
to
have
place
it
out
of
the
way
in
a corner
hi
sister
began
to
play
father
and
mother
paid
close
attent
one
on
each
side
to
the movement
of
her
hand
drawn
in
by
the
play
gregor
had dare
to

come
forward
a
littl
and
already
had
hi
head
in
the
live
room
befor
he
had
taken
great pride
in
how consider
he
wa
but
now
it
hardli
occur
to
him
that
he
had
becom
so thoughtless
about
the
other
what
s
more
there
wa
now
all
the

more
reason
to
keep
himself
hidden
as
he
wa
cover
in
the
dust
that
lay
everywher
in
hi
room
and
flew
up
at
the
slightest
movement
he
carri
thread
hair
and
remain
of
food
about
on
hi
back
and
side
he
wa
much
too
indiffer
to
everyth
now

to
lay
on
hi
back
and wipe
himself
on
the carpet
like
he
had
use
to
do
sever
time
a
day
and
despit
thi
condit
he
wa
not
too
shi
to
move
forward
a
littl
onto
the immacul
floor
of
the
live
room
no
one
notic
him
though

the
famili
wa
total preoccupi
with
the
violin
play
at
first
three
gentlemen
had
put
their
hand
in
their pocket
and
come
up
far
too
close
behind
the music
stand
to
look
at
all
the note
be
play
and
they
must
have disturb
gregor
s
sister
but

soon
in contrast
with
the
famili
they withdrew
back
to
the
window
with
their
head
sunk
and
talk
to
each
other
at
half
volum
and
they
stay
by
the
window
while
gregor
s
father
observ
them
anxious
it
realli
now
seem
veri
obviou
that
they

the
way
they
all
blew
the
smoke
from

their cigarette upward
from
their mouth
and nose
yet
gregor
s

besid
him
on
the
couch
with
her
ear
bent
down
to
him
while
he told
her
how
he
had
alway
intend
to
send
her
to
the conservatori
how
he
would
have told
everyon
about
it
last christma
had christma
realli
come
and
gone
already

to
let
anyon
dissuad
him
from
it
on
hear
all
thi
hi
sister
would break
out
in
tear
of
emot
and
gregor
would climb
up
to
her shoulder
and kiss
her neck
which
sinc
she
had
been
go

out
to
work
she
had kept
without

ani
more
word
with
hi
forefing
at
gregor
as
he
slowli
move
forward
the
violin
went silent
the
middl
of
the
three
gentlemen

first
smile
at
hi
two friend
shake
hi
head
and
then
look
back
at
gregor
hi
father
seem
to
think
it
more
import
to
calm
the
three
gentlemen
befor
drive
gregor
out
even
though
they
were
not
at
all upset
and
seem
to
think
gregor
wa
more
entertain

than
the
violin
play
had
been
he
rush
up
to
them
with
hi
arm
spread
out
and
attempt
to drive
them
back
into
their
room
at
the
same
time
as
tri
to block
their
view
of
gregor
with
hi
bodi
now
they
did
becom
a
littl
annoy
and

it
wa
not clear
whether
it
wa
hi
father
s behaviour
that
annoy
them
or
the dawn
realis
that
they
had
had
a neighbour
like
gregor
in
the
next
room
without
know
it
they
ask
gregor
s
father
for explan
rais
their arm
like
he
had tug
excitedli

at
their
beard
and
move
back
toward
their
room
only verily slowly
meanwhile
gregor
she
sister
had overcome
the
despair
she
had fallen
into
when
her
play
when suddenly
interrupt
she
had
let
her
hand
drop
and
let
violin
and
bow
hang limply
for
a
while
but continually

to
look
at
the
music
as
if
still
play
but
then
she suddenli
pull
herself
togeth
lay
the instrument
on
her
mother
s lap
who
still
sat
labori
struggl
for breath
where
she
wa
and
ran
into
the
next
room
which
under pressur
from
her
father
the
three

gentlemen
were
more
quickli
move
toward
under
hi
sister
s experienc
hand
the pillow
and
cover
on
the
bed
flew
up
and
were
put
into
order
and
she
had alreadi
finish
make
the
bed
and slip
out
again
befor
the
three
gentlemen
had
reach
the
room
gregor
s

father
seem
so obsess
with
what
he
wa
do
that
he forgot
all
the respect
he owe
to
hi
tenant
he
urg
them
and
press
them
until
when
he
wa
alreadi
at
the
door
of
the
room
the
middl
of
the
three
gentlemen
shout
like thunder
and
stamp

hi
foot
and therebi
brought
gregor
s
father
to
a halt
i
declar
here
and
now
he
said
rais
hi
hand
and
glanc
at
gregor
s
mother
and
sister
to

he
did
not
turn
it
all
the
way
round
as
he
felt
hi
neck
becom
stiff
but
it
wa
nonetheless
enough
to
see
that
noth
behind
him
had
chang
onli

hi
sister
had stood
up
with
hi
last
glanc
he
saw
that
hi
mother
had
now
fallen
complet
asleep
he
wa
hardli
insid
hi
room
befor
the
door
wa
hurriedli
shut
bolt
and
lock
the sudden
nois
behind
gregor
so startl
him
that
hi
littl
leg
collaps
under

him
it
wa
hi
sister
who
had
been
in
so
much
of
a
rush
she
had
been
stand
there
wait
and sprung
forward
lightli
gregor
had
not
heard
her
come
at
all
and
as
she
turn
the
key
in
the
lock
she
said loudli
to
her
parent
at

last
what
now
then
gregor
ask
himself
as
he
look
round
in
the
dark
he
soon
made
the discoveri
that
he
could
no
longer
move
at
all
thi
wa
no
surpris
to
him
it
seem rather
that
be
abl
to actual
move
around
on
those spindli
littl
leg

until
then
wa
unnatur
he
also felt
rel
comfort
it
is true
that
hi
entir
bodi
wa
ach
but
the
pain
seem
to
be
slowli
get weaker
and weaker
and
would final
disappear
altogeth
he
could
already
hardli
feel
the decay
appl
in
hi
back
or
the inflam

area
around
it
which
wa
entir
cover
in white
dust
he
thought
back
of
hi
famili
with emot
and
love
if
it
wa
possibl
he
felt
that
he
must
go
away
even
more strongli
than
hi
sister
he
remain
in
thi
state
of
empti
and
peac
rumin
until

he
heard
the
clock
tower
strike
three
in
the
morn
he
watch
as
it
slowli
began
to
get
light
everywher
outsid
the
window
too
then
without
hi
will
it
hi
head
sank
down
complet
and
hi
last
breath
flow weakli
from
hi
nostril
when
the cleaner
came
in

earli
in
the
morn
they
d
often
ask
her
not
to
keep slam
the
door
but
with
her
strength
and
in
her
hurri
she
still
did
so
that everyon
in
the
flat
knew
when
she d
arriv
and
from
then
on
it
wa
imposs
to sleep
in
peac

she
made
her usual
brief
look
in
on
gregor
and
at
first
found
noth
special
she
thought
he
wa
lay
there
so
still
on purpos
play
the martyr
she attribut
all
possibl
understand
to
him
she
happen
to
be
hold
the
long
broom
in
her
hand
so
she

tri
to tickl
gregor
with
it
from
the doorway
when
she
had
no
success
with
that
she
tri
to
make
a
nuisanc
of
herself
and poke
at
him
a
littl
and
onli
when
she
found
she
could shove
him
across
the
floor
with
no
resist
at
all
did

she
start
to
pay
attent
she
soon
realis
what
had
realli
happen
open
her
eye
wide whistl
to
herself
but
did
not wast
time
to yank
open
the bedroom
door
and
shout
loudli
into
the
dark
of
the
bedroom
come
and
ave
a
look
at
thi
it
s

just
lie
there
stone
dead
mr
and
mr
samsa
sat
upright
there
in
their marriag
bed
and
had
to
make
an effort
to
get
over
the shock
caus
by
the
cleaner
befor
they
could grasp
what
she
wa
say
but
then
each
from
hi
own
side
they

hurri
out
of
bed
mr
samsa
threw
the blanket
over
hi
shoulder
mr
samsa
just
came
out
in
her nightdress
and
that
is
how
they
went
into
gregor
s
room
on
the
way
they
open
the
door
to
the
live
room
where
grete
had
been
sleep
sinc
the

three
gentlemen
had
move
in
she
wa
fulli
dress
as
if
she
had never
been
asleep
and
the pale
of
her
face
seem
to confirm
thi
dead
ask
mr
samsa
look
at
the
charwoman
enquiringli
even
though
she
could
have check
for
herself
and
could
have known
it

without
check
that
s
what
i
said
repli
the
cleaner
and
to prove
it
she
gave
gregor
s
bodi
anoth
shove
with
the
broom
send
it
sideway
across
the
floor
mr
samsa
made
a movement
as
if
she
want
to
hold
back
the
broom
but
did
not

complet
it
now
then
said
mr
samsa
let
s
give thank
to
god
for
that
he
cross
himself
and
the
three
women
follow
hi
exampl
grete
who
had
not
taken
her

just
look
how thin
he
wa
he
didn
t
eat
anyth
for

so
long
the
food
came
out
again
just
the
same
as
when
it
went
in
gregor
s
bodi
wa
inde

dri
up
and
flat
they
had
not
seen
it
until
then
but
now
he
wa
not
lift
up
on
hi
littl
leg
nor
did
he
do
anyth

to
make
them
look
away
greet
come
with
us
in
here
for
a
little
while
said
Mr
Samsa
with
a
pain
smile
and greet
follow
her
parent
into
the
bedroom
but
not
without
look
back
at
the body
the
cleaner
shut
the
door
and
open
the
window
wide

although
it
wa
still earli
in
the
morn
the
fresh
air
had
someth
of warmth
mix
in
with
it
it
wa
alreadi
the
end
of
march
after
all
the
three
gentlemen
step
out
of
their
room
and
look
round
in amaz
for
their breakfast
they
had
been forgotten

about
where
is our breakfast
the
middl
gentleman
ask
the
cleaner
irrit
she
just
put
her
finger
on
her lip
and
made
a quick
and silent
sign
to
the men
that
they
might
like
to
come
into
gregor
s
room
they
did
so
and
stood
around
gregor
s

corps
with
their
hand
in
the pocket
of
their
well
worn
coat
it
wa
now
quit
light
in
the
room
then
the
door
of
the bedroom
open
and
mr
samsa
appear
in
hi
uniform
with
hi
wife
on
one
arm
and
hi
daughter
on
the
other
all
of

them
had
been
cri
a
littl
grete
now
and
then
press
her
face
against
her
father
s
arm
leav
my home
now
said
mr
samsa indic
the
door
and
without
let
the
women
from
him
what
do
you
mean
ask
the
middl
of
the
three
gentlemen
somewhat
disconcert

and
he
smile
sweetli
the
other
two
held
their
hand
behind
their
back
and continu
rub
them
togeth
in gleeful anticip
of
a loud
quarrel
which
could
onli
end
in
their favour
i
mean
just
what
i
said
answer
mr
samsa
and
with
hi
two companion
went
in

a
straight
line
toward
the
man
at
first
he
stood
there
still
look
at
the
ground
as
if
the content
of
hi
head
were rearrang
themselv
into
new posit
alright
we ll
go
then
he
said
and
look
up
at
mr
samsa
as
if
he
had
been
suddenli

overcom
with humil
and
want permiss
again
from
mr
samsa
for
hi
decis
mr
samsa
mere
open
hi
eye
wide
and brieffli nod
to
him
sever
time
at
that
and
without delay
the
man
actual
did
take long
stride
into
the
front
hallway
hi
two friend
had
stop

rub
their
hand
some
time
befor
and
had
been listen
to
what
wa
be
said
now
they
jump
off
after
their friend
as
if
taken
with
sudden
fear
that
mr
samsa
might
go
into
the
hallway
in
front
of
them
and
break
the connect
with
their leader

one
there
all
took
their
hat
from
the
stand
took
their
stick
from
the holder
bow
without
a
word
and
left
the premis
mr
samsa
and
the
two
women
follow
them
out
onto
the
land
but
they
had
had
no
reason
to mistrust
the
men
s
intent

and
as
they lean
over
the
land
saw
how
the
three
gentlemen
made
slow
but steadi
progress
down
the
mani
step
as
they
turn
the corner
each
floor
they
disappear
and
would reappear
a
few
moment
later
further
down
they
went
the
more
that
the

samsa
famili
lost interest
in
them
when
a butcher
s
boy
proud
of
postur
with
hi
tray
on
hi
head
pass
them
on
hi
way
up
and
came nearer
than
they
were
mr
samsa
and
the
women
came
away
from
the
land
and
went
as
if reliev
back

into
the
flat
they
decid
the
best
way
to
make
use
of
that
day
wa
for relax
and
to
go
for
a
walk
not
onli
had
they earn
a
break
from
work
but
they
were
in seriou
need
of
it
so
they sat
at
the
tabl
and wrote

three letter
of
excus
mr
samsa
to
hi employ
mr
samsa
to
her contractor
and
grete
to
her princip
the cleaner
came
in
while
they
were
write
to tell
them
she
wa
go
she d
finish
her
work
for
that
morn
the
three
of
them
at
first

without
look
up
from
what
they
were
write
and
it
wa
onli
when
the cleaner
still
did
not
seem
to
want
to
leav
that
they
look
up
in irrit
well
ask
mr
samsa
the
charwoman
stood
in
the
doorway
with
a
smile
on
her
face
as
if

she
had
some tremend
good
news
to

One morning, when Gregor Samsa woke from troubled dreams, he found himself transformed in his bed into a horrible vermin. He lay on his armour-like back, and if he lifted his head a little he could see his brown belly, slightly domed and divided by arches into stiff sections. The bedding was hardly able to cover it and seemed ready to slide off any moment. His many legs, pitifully thin compared with the size of the rest of him, waved about helplessly as he looked.

"What's happened to me?" he thought. It wasn't a dream. His room, a proper human room although a little too small, lay peacefully between its four familiar walls. A collection of textile samples lay spread out on the table - Samsa was a travelling salesman - and above it there hung a picture that he had recently cut out of an illustrated magazine and housed in a nice, gilded frame. It showed a lady fitted out with a fur hat and fur boa who sat upright, raising a heavy fur muff that covered the whole of her lower arm towards the viewer.

there eating their breakfasts. I ought to just try that with my boss; I'd get kicked out on the spot. But who knows, maybe that would be the best thing for me. If I didn't have my parents to think about I'd have given in my notice a long time ago, I'd have gone up to the boss and told him just what I think, tell him everything I would, let him know just what I feel. He'd fall right off his desk! And it's a funny sort of business to be sitting up there at your desk, talking down at your subordinates from up there, especially when you have to go right up close because the boss is hard of hearing. Well, there's still some hope; once I've got the money together to pay off my parents' debt to him - another five or six years I suppose - that's definitely what I'll do. That's when I'll make the big change. First of all though, I've got to get up, my train leaves at five."

And he looked over at the alarm clock, ticking on the chest of drawers. "God in Heaven!" he thought. It was half past six and the hands were quietly moving forwards, it was even later than half past, more like quarter to seven. Had the alarm clock not rung? He could see from the bed that it had been set for four o'clock as it should have been; it certainly must have rung. Yes, but was it possible to quietly sleep through that furniture-rattling noise? True, he had not slept peacefully, but probably all the more deeply because of that. What should he do now? The next train went at seven; if he were to catch that he would have to rush like mad and the collection of samples was still not packed, and he did not at all feel particularly fresh and lively. And even if he did catch the train he would not avoid his boss's anger as the office assistant would have been there to see the five o'clock train go, he would have put in his report about Gregor's not being there a long time ago. The office assistant was the boss's man, spineless, and with no understanding. What about if he reported sick? But that would be extremely strained and suspicious as in fifteen years of service Gregor had never once yet been ill. His boss would certainly come round with the doctor from the medical insurance company, accuse his parents of having a lazy son, and accept the doctor's recommendation not to make any claim as the doctor believed that no-one was ever ill but that many were workshy. And what's more, would he have been entirely wrong in this case? Gregor did in fact, apart from excessive sleepiness after sleeping for so long, feel completely well and even felt much hungrier than usual.

recognised as the voice he had had before. As if from deep inside him, there was a painful and uncontrollable squeaking mixed in with it, the words could be made out at first but then there was a sort of echo which made them unclear, leaving the hearer unsure whether he had heard properly or not. Gregor had wanted to give a full answer and explain everything, but in the circumstances contented himself with saying: "Yes, mother, yes, thank-you, I'm getting up now." The change in Gregor's voice probably could not be noticed outside through the wooden door, as his mother was satisfied with this explanation and shuffled away. But this short conversation made the other members of the family aware that Gregor, against their expectations was still at home, and soon his father came knocking at one of the side doors, gently, but with his fist. "Gregor, Gregor", he called, "what's wrong?" And after a short while he called again with a warning deepness in his voice: "Gregor! Gregor!" At the other side door his sister came plaintively: "Gregor? Aren't you well? Do you need anything?" Gregor answered to both sides: "I'm ready, now", making an effort to remove all the strangeness from his voice by enunciating very carefully and putting long pauses between each, individual word. His father went back to his breakfast, but his sister whispered: "Gregor, open the door, I beg of you." Gregor, however, had no thought of opening the door, and instead congratulated himself for his cautious habit, acquired from his travelling, of locking all doors at night even when he was at home.

The first thing he wanted to do was to get up in peace without being disturbed, to get dressed, and most of all to have his breakfast. Only then would he consider what to do next, as he was well aware that he would not bring his thoughts to any sensible conclusions by lying in bed. He remembered that he had often felt a slight pain in bed, perhaps caused by lying awkwardly, but that had always turned out to be pure imagination and he wondered how his imaginings would slowly resolve themselves today. He did not have the slightest doubt that the change in his voice was nothing more than the first sign of a serious cold, which was an occupational hazard for travelling salesmen.

done in bed", Gregor said to himself, "so don't keep trying to do it".

So then he tried to get the top part of his body out of the bed first, carefully turning his head to the side. This he managed quite easily, and despite its breadth and its weight, the bulk of his body eventually followed slowly in the direction of the head. But when he had at last got his head out of the bed and into the fresh air it occurred to him that if he let himself fall it would be a miracle if his head were not injured, so he became afraid to carry on pushing himself forward the same way. And he could not knock himself out now at any price; better to stay in bed than lose consciousness.

It took just as much effort to get back to where he had been earlier, but when he lay there sighing, and was once more watching his legs as they struggled against each other even harder than before, if that was possible, he could think of no way of bringing peace and order to this chaos. He told himself once more that it was not possible for him to stay in bed and that the most sensible thing to do would be to get free of it in whatever way he could at whatever sacrifice. At the same time, though, he did not forget to remind himself that calm consideration was much better than rushing to desperate conclusions. At times like this he would direct his eyes to the window and look out as clearly as he could, but unfortunately, even the other side of the narrow street was enveloped in morning fog and the view had little confidence or cheer to offer him. "Seven o'clock, already", he said to himself when the clock struck again, "seven o'clock, and there's still a fog like this." And he lay there quietly a while longer, breathing lightly as if he perhaps expected the total stillness to bring things back to their real and natural state.

of bed in this way and kept his head raised as he did so he could probably avoid injuring it. His back seemed to be quite hard, and probably nothing would happen to it falling onto the carpet. His main concern was for the loud noise he was bound to make, and which even through all the doors would probably raise concern if not alarm. But it was something that had to be risked.

When Gregor was already sticking half way out of the bed - the new method was more of a game than an effort, all he had to do was rock back and forth - it occurred to him how simple everything would be if somebody came to help him. Two strong people - he had his father and the maid in mind - would have been more than enough; they would only have to push their arms under the dome of his back, peel him away from the bed, bend down with the load and then be patient and careful as he swang over onto the floor, where, hopefully, the little legs would find a use. Should he really call for help though, even apart from the fact that all the doors were locked? Despite all the difficulty he was in, he could not suppress a smile at this thought.

After a while he had already moved so far across that it would have been hard for him to keep his balance if he rocked too hard. The time was now ten past seven and he would have to make a final decision very soon. Then there was a ring at the door of the flat. "That'll be someone from work", he said to himself, and froze very still, although his little legs only became all the more lively as they danced around. For a moment everything remained quiet. "They're not opening the door", Gregor said to himself, caught in some nonsensical hope. But then of course, the maid's firm steps went to the door as ever and opened it. Gregor only needed to hear the visitor's first words of greeting and he knew who it was - the chief clerk himself. Why did Gregor have to be the only one condemned to work for a company where they immediately became highly suspicious at the slightest shortcoming? Were all employees, every one of them, louts, was there not one of them who was faithful and devoted who would go so mad with pangs of conscience that he couldn't get out of bed if he didn't spend at least a couple of hours in the morning on company business? Was it really not enough to let one of the trainees make enquiries - assuming enquiries were even necessary - did the chief clerk have to come himself, and did they have to show the whole, innocent family that this was so suspicious that only the chief clerk could be trusted to have the wisdom to investigate it? And more because these thoughts had made him upset than through any proper decision, he swang himself with all his force out of the bed. There was a loud thump, but it wasn't really a loud noise. His fall was softened a little by the carpet, and Gregor's back was also more elastic than he had thought, which made the sound muffled and not too noticeable. He had not held his head carefully enough, though, and hit it as he fell; annoyed and in pain, he turned it and rubbed it against the carpet.

"Something's fallen down in there", said the chief clerk in the room on the left. Gregor tried to imagine whether something of the sort that had happened to him today could ever happen to the chief clerk too; you had to concede that it was possible. But as if in gruff reply to this question, the chief clerk's firm footsteps in his highly polished boots could now be heard in the adjoining room. From the room on his right, Gregor's sister whispered to him to let him know: "Gregor, the chief clerk is here." "Yes, I know", said Gregor to himself; but without daring to raise his voice loud enough for his sister to hear him.

"Gregor", said his father now from the room to his left, "the chief clerk has come round and wants to know why you didn't leave on the early train. We don't know what to say to him. And anyway, he wants to speak to you personally. So please open up this door. I'm sure he'll be good enough to forgive the untidiness of your room." Then the chief clerk called "Good morning, Mr. Samsa". "He isn't well", said his mother to the chief clerk, while his father continued to speak through the door. "He isn't well, please believe me. Why else would Gregor have missed a train! The lad only ever thinks about the business. It nearly makes me cross the way he never goes out in the evenings; he's been in town for a week now but stayed home every evening. He sits with us in the kitchen and just reads the paper or studies train timetables. His idea of relaxation is working with his fretsaw. He's made a little frame, for instance, it only took him two or three evenings, you'll be amazed how nice it is; it's hanging up in his room; you'll see it as soon as Gregor opens the door. Anyway, I'm glad you're here; we wouldn't have been able to get Gregor to open the door by ourselves; he's so stubborn; and I'm sure he isn't well, he said this morning that he is, but he isn't." "I'll be there in a moment", said Gregor slowly and thoughtfully, but without moving so that he would not miss any word of the conversation. "Well I can't think of any other way of explaining it, Mrs. Samsa", said the chief clerk, "I hope it's nothing serious. But on the other hand, I must say that if we people in commerce ever become slightly unwell then, fortunately or unfortunately as you like, we simply have to overcome it because of business considerations." "Can the chief clerk come in to see you now then?", asked his father impatiently, knocking at the door again. "No", said Gregor. In the room on his right there followed a painful silence; in the room on his left his sister began to cry.

So why did his sister not go and join the others? She had probably only just got up and had not even begun to get dressed. And why was she crying? Was it because he had not got up, and had not let the chief clerk in, because he was in danger of losing his job and if that happened his boss would once more pursue their parents with the same demands as before? There was no need to worry about things like that yet. Gregor was still there and had not the slightest intention of abandoning his family. For the time being he just lay there on the carpet, and no-one who knew the condition he was in would seriously have expected him to let the chief clerk in. It was only a minor courtesy, and a suitable excuse could easily be found for it later on, it was not something for which Gregor could be sacked on the spot. And it seemed to Gregor much more sensible to leave him now in peace instead of disturbing him with talking at him and crying. But the others didn't know what was happening, they were worried, that would excuse their behaviour.

The chief clerk now raised his voice, "Mr. Samsa", he called to him, "what is wrong? You barricade yourself in your room, give us no more than yes or no for an answer, you are causing serious and unnecessary concern to your parents and you fail - and I mention this just by the way - you fail to carry out your business duties in a way that is quite unheard of. I'm speaking here on behalf of your parents and of your employer, and really must request a clear and immediate explanation. I am astonished, quite astonished. I thought I knew you as a calm and sensible person, and now you suddenly seem to be showing off with peculiar whims. This morning, your employer did suggest a possible reason for your failure to appear, it's true - it had to do with the money that was recently entrusted to you - but I came near to giving him my word of honour that that could not be the right explanation. But now that I see your incomprehensible stubbornness I no longer feel any wish whatsoever to intercede on your behalf. And nor is your position all that secure. I had originally intended to say all this to you in private, but since you cause me to waste my time here for no good reason I don't see why your parents should not also learn of it. Your turnover has been very unsatisfactory of late; I grant you that it's not the time of year to do especially good business, we recognise that; but there simply is no time of year to do no business at all, Mr. Samsa, we cannot allow there to be."

"But Sir", called Gregor, beside himself and forgetting all else in the excitement, "I'll open up immediately, just a moment. I'm slightly unwell, an attack of dizziness, I haven't been able to get up. I'm still in bed now. I'm quite fresh again now, though. I'm just getting out of bed. Just a moment. Be patient! It's not quite as easy as I'd thought. I'm quite alright now, though. It's shocking, what can suddenly happen to a person! I was quite alright last night, my parents know about it, perhaps better than me, I had a small symptom of it last night already. They must have noticed it. I don't know why I didn't let you know at work! But you always think you can get over an illness without staying at home. Please, don't make my parents suffer! There's no basis for any of the accusations you're making; nobody's ever said a word to me about any of these things. Maybe you haven't read the latest contracts I sent in. I'll set off with the eight o'clock train, as well, these few hours of rest have given me strength. You don't need to wait, sir; I'll be in the office soon after you, and please be so good as to tell that to the boss and recommend me to him!"

And while Gregor gushed out these words, hardly knowing what he was saying, he made his way over to the chest of drawers - this was easily done, probably because of the practise he had already had in bed - where he now tried to get himself upright. He really did want to open the door, really did want to let them see him and to speak with the chief clerk; the others were being so insistent, and he was curious to learn what they would say when they caught sight of him. If they were shocked then it would no longer be Gregor's responsibility and he could rest. If, however, they took everything calmly he would still have no reason to be upset, and if he hurried he really could be at the station for eight o'clock. The first few times he tried to climb up on the smooth chest of drawers he just slid down again, but he finally gave himself one last swing and stood there upright; the lower part of his body was in serious pain but he no longer gave any attention to it. Now he let himself fall against the back of a nearby chair and held tightly to the edges of it with his little legs. By now he had also calmed down, and kept quiet so that he could listen to what the chief clerk was saying.

Gregor, in contrast, had become much calmer. So they couldn't understand his words any more, although they seemed clear enough to him, clearer than before - perhaps his ears had become used to the sound. They had realised, though, that there was something wrong with him, and were ready to help. The first response to his situation had been confident and wise, and that made him feel better. He felt that he had been drawn back in among people, and from the doctor and the locksmith he expected great and surprising achievements - although he did not really distinguish one from the other. Whatever was said next would be crucial, so, in order to make his voice as clear as possible, he coughed a little, but taking care to do this not too loudly as even this might well sound different from the way that a human coughs and he was no longer sure he could judge this for himself. Meanwhile, it had become very quiet in the next room. Perhaps his parents were sat at the table whispering with the chief clerk, or perhaps they were all pressed against the door and listening.

Gregor slowly pushed his way over to the door with the chair. Once there he let go of it and threw himself onto the door, holding himself upright against it using the adhesive on the tips of his legs. He rested there a little while to recover from the effort involved and then set himself to the task of turning the key in the lock with his mouth. He seemed, unfortunately, to have no proper teeth - how was he, then, to grasp the key? - but the lack of teeth was, of course, made up for with a very strong jaw; using the jaw, he really was able to start the key turning, ignoring the fact that he must have been causing some kind of damage as a brown fluid came from his mouth, flowed over the key and dripped onto the floor. "Listen", said the chief clerk in the next room, "he's turning the key." Gregor was greatly encouraged by this; but they all should have been calling to him, his father and his mother too: "Well done, Gregor", they should have cried, "keep at it, keep hold of the lock!" And with the idea that they were all excitedly following his efforts, he bit on the key with all his strength, paying no attention to the pain he was causing himself. As the key turned round he turned around the lock with it, only holding himself upright with his mouth, and hung onto the key or pushed it down again with the whole weight of his body as needed. The clear sound of the lock as it snapped back was Gregor's sign that he could break his concentration, and as he regained his breath he said to himself: "So, I didn't need the locksmith after all". Then he lay his head on the handle of the door to open it completely.

Because he had to open the door in this way, it was already wide open before he could be seen. He had first to slowly turn himself around one of the double doors, and he had to do it very carefully if he did not want to fall flat on his back before entering the room. He was still occupied with this difficult movement, unable to pay attention to anything else, when he heard the chief clerk exclaim a loud "Oh!", which sounded like the soughing of the wind.

Now he also saw him - he was the nearest to the door - his hand pressed against his open mouth and slowly retreating as if driven by a steady and invisible force. Gregor's mother, her hair still dishevelled from bed despite the chief clerk's being there, looked at his father. Then she unfolded her arms, took two steps forward towards Gregor and sank down onto the floor into her skirts that spread themselves out around her as her head disappeared down onto her breast. His father looked hostile, and clenched his fists as if wanting to knock Gregor back into his room. Then he looked uncertainly round the living room, covered his eyes with his hands and wept so that his powerful chest shook.

So Gregor did not go into the room, but leant against the inside of the other door which was still held bolted in place. In this way only half of his body could be seen, along with his head above it which he leant over to one side as he peered out at the others. Meanwhile the day had become much lighter; part of the endless, grey-black building on the other side of the street - which was a hospital - could be seen quite clearly with the austere and regular line of windows piercing its facade; the rain was still falling, now throwing down large, individual droplets which hit the ground one at a time. The washing up from breakfast lay on the table; there was so much of it because, for Gregor's father, breakfast was the most important meal of the day and he would stretch it out for several hours as he sat reading a number of different newspapers. On the wall exactly opposite there was photograph of Gregor when he was a lieutenant in the army, his sword in his hand and a carefree smile on his face as he called forth respect for his uniform and bearing. The door to the entrance hall was open and as the front door of the flat was also open he could see onto the landing and the stairs where they began their way down below.

"Now, then", said Gregor, well aware that he was the only one to have kept calm, "I'll get dressed straight away now, pack up my samples and set off. Will you please just let me leave? You can see", he said to the chief clerk, "that I'm not stubborn and I like to do my job; being a commercial traveller is arduous but without travelling I couldn't earn my living. So where are you going, in to the office? Yes? Will you report everything accurately, then? It's quite possible for someone to be temporarily unable to work, but that's just the right time to remember what's been achieved in the past and consider that later on, once the difficulty has been removed, he will certainly work with all the more diligence and concentration. You're well aware that I'm seriously in debt to our employer as well as having to look after my parents and my sister, so that I'm trapped in a difficult situation, but I will work my way out of it again. Please don't make things any harder for me than they are already, and don't take sides against me at the office. I know that nobody likes the travellers. They think we earn an enormous wage as well as having a soft time of it. That's just prejudice but they have no particular reason to think better of it. But you, sir, you have a better overview than the rest of the staff, in fact, if I can say this in confidence, a better overview than the boss himself - it's very easy for a businessman like him to make mistakes about his employees and judge them more harshly than he should. And you're also well aware that we travellers spend almost the whole year away from the office, so that we can very easily fall victim to gossip and chance and groundless complaints, and it's almost impossible to defend yourself from that sort of thing, we don't usually even hear about them, or if at all it's when we arrive back home exhausted from a trip, and that's when we feel the harmful effects of what's been going on without even knowing what caused them. Please, don't go away, at least first say something to show that you grant that I'm at least partly right!"

But the chief clerk had turned away as soon as Gregor had started to speak, and, with protruding lips, only stared back at him over his trembling shoulders as he left. He did not keep still for a moment while Gregor was speaking, but moved steadily towards the door without taking his eyes off him. He moved very gradually, as if there had been some secret prohibition on leaving the room. It was only when he had reached the entrance hall that he made a sudden movement, drew his foot from the living room, and rushed forward in a panic. In the hall, he stretched his right hand far out towards the stairway as if out there, there were some supernatural force waiting to save him.

Gregor realised that it was out of the question to let the chief clerk go away in this mood if his position in the firm was not to be put into extreme danger. That was something his parents did not understand very well; over the years, they had become convinced that this job would provide for Gregor for his entire life, and besides, they had so much to worry about at present that they had lost sight of any thought for the future. Gregor, though, did think about the future. The chief clerk had to be held back, calmed down, convinced and finally won over; the future of Gregor and his family depended on it! If only his sister were here! She was clever; she was already in tears while Gregor was still lying peacefully on his back. And the chief clerk was a lover of women, surely she could persuade him; she would close the front door in the entrance hall and talk him out of his shocked state. But his sister was not there, Gregor would have to do the job himself. And without considering that he still was not familiar with how well he could move about in his present state, or that his speech still might not - or probably would not - be understood, he let go of the door; pushed himself through the opening; tried to reach the chief clerk on the landing who, ridiculously, was holding on to the banister with both hands; but Gregor fell immediately over and, with a little scream as he sought something to hold onto, landed on his numerous little legs. Hardly had that happened than, for the first time that day, he began to feel alright with his body; the little legs had the solid ground under them; to his pleasure, they did exactly as he told them; they were even making the effort to carry him where he wanted to go; and he was soon believing that all his sorrows would soon be finally at an end. He held back the urge to move but swayed from side to side as he crouched there on the floor. His mother was not far away in front of him and seemed, at first, quite engrossed in herself, but then she suddenly jumped up with her arms outstretched and her fingers spread shouting: "Help, for pity's sake, Help!" The way she held her head suggested she wanted to see Gregor better, but the unthinking way she was hurrying backwards showed that she did not; she had forgotten that the table was behind her with all the breakfast things on it; when she reached the table she sat quickly down on it without knowing what she was doing; without even seeming to notice that the coffee pot had been knocked over and a gush of coffee was pouring down onto the carpet.

"Mother, mother", said Gregor gently, looking up at her. He had completely forgotten the chief clerk for the moment, but could not help himself snapping in the air with his jaws at the sight of the flow of coffee. That set his mother screaming anew, she fled from the table and into the arms of his father as he rushed towards her. Gregor, though, had no time to spare for his parents now; the chief clerk had already reached the stairs; with his chin on the banister, he looked back for the last time. Gregor made a run for him; he wanted to be sure of reaching him; the chief clerk must have expected something, as he leapt down several steps at once and disappeared; his shouts resounding all around the staircase. The flight of the chief clerk seemed, unfortunately, to put Gregor's father into a panic as well. Until then he had been relatively self controlled, but now, instead of running after the chief clerk himself, or at least not impeding Gregor as he ran after him, Gregor's father seized the chief clerk's stick in his right hand (the chief clerk had left it behind on a chair, along with his hat and overcoat), picked up a large newspaper from the table with his left, and used them to drive Gregor back into his room, stamping his foot at him as he went. Gregor's appeals to his father were of no help, his appeals were simply not understood, however much he humbly turned his head his father merely stamped his foot all the harder. Across the room, despite the chilly weather, Gregor's mother had pulled open a window, leant far out of it and pressed her hands to her face. A strong draught of air flew in from the street towards the stairway, the curtains flew up, the newspapers on the table

fluttered and some of them were blown onto the floor. Nothing would stop Gregor's father as he drove him back, making hissing noises at him like a wild man. Gregor had never had any practice in moving backwards and was only able to go very slowly. If Gregor had only been allowed to turn round he would have been back in his room straight away, but he was afraid that if he took the time to do that his father would become impatient, and there was the threat of a lethal blow to his back or head from the stick in his father's hand any moment. Eventually, though, Gregor realised that he had no choice as he saw, to his disgust, that he was quite incapable of going backwards in a straight line; so he began, as quickly as possible and with frequent anxious glances at his father, to turn himself round. It went very slowly, but perhaps his father was able to see his good intentions as he did nothing to hinder him, in fact now and then he used the tip of his stick to give directions from a distance as to which way to turn. If only his father would stop that unbearable hissing! It was making Gregor quite confused. When he had nearly finished turning round, still listening to that hissing, he made a mistake and turned himself back a little the way he had just come. He was pleased when he finally had his head in front of the doorway, but then saw that it was too narrow, and his body was too broad to get through it without further difficulty. In his present mood, it obviously did not occur to his father to open the other of the double doors so that Gregor would have enough space to get through. He was merely fixed on the idea that Gregor should be got back into his room as quickly as possible. Nor would he ever have allowed Gregor the time to get himself upright as preparation for getting through the doorway. What he did, making more noise than ever, was to drive Gregor forwards all the harder as if there had been nothing in the way; it sounded to Gregor as if there was now more than one father behind him; it was not a pleasant experience, and Gregor pushed himself into the doorway without regard for what might happen. One side of his body lifted itself, he lay at an angle in the doorway, one flank scraped on the white door and was painfully injured, leaving vile brown flecks on it, soon he was stuck fast and would not have been able to move at all by himself, the little legs along one side hung quivering in the air while those on the other side were pressed painfully against the ground. Then his father gave him a hefty shove from behind which released him from where he was held and sent him flying, and heavily bleeding, deep into his room. The door was slammed shut with the stick, then, finally, all was quiet.

It was not until it was getting dark that evening that Gregor awoke from his deep and coma-like sleep. He would have woken soon afterwards anyway even if he hadn't been disturbed, as he had had enough sleep and felt fully rested. But he had the impression that some hurried steps and the sound of the door leading into the front room being carefully shut had woken him. The light from the electric street lamps shone palely here and there onto the ceiling and tops of the furniture, but down below, where Gregor was, it was dark. He pushed himself over to the door, feeling his way clumsily with his antennae - of which he was now beginning to learn the value - in order to see what had been happening there. The whole of his left side seemed like one, painfully stretched scar, and he limped badly on his two rows of legs. One of the legs had been badly injured in the events of that morning - it was nearly a miracle that only one of them had been - and dragged along lifelessly.

It was only when he had reached the door that he realised what it actually was that had drawn him over to it; it was the smell of something to eat. By the door there was a dish filled with sweetened milk with little pieces of white bread floating in it. He was so pleased he almost laughed, as he was even hungrier than he had been that morning, and immediately dipped his head into the milk, nearly covering his eyes with it. But he soon drew his head back again in disappointment; not only did the pain in his tender left side make it difficult to eat the food - he was only able to eat if his whole body worked together as a snuffling whole - but the milk did not taste at all nice. Milk like this was normally his favourite drink, and his sister had certainly left it there for him because of that, but he turned, almost against his own will, away from the dish and crawled back into the centre of the room.

Through the crack in the door, Gregor could see that the gas had been lit in the living room. His father at this time would normally be sat with his evening paper, reading it out in a loud voice to Gregor's mother, and sometimes to his sister, but there was now not a sound to be heard. Gregor's sister would often write and tell him about this reading, but maybe his father had lost the habit in recent times. It was so quiet all around too, even though there must have been somebody in the flat. "What a quiet life it is the family lead", said Gregor to himself, and, gazing into the darkness, felt a great pride that he was able to provide a life like that in such a nice home for his sister and parents. But what now, if all this peace and wealth and comfort should come to a horrible and frightening end? That was something that Gregor did not want to think about too much, so he started to move about, crawling up and down the room.

Once during that long evening, the door on one side of the room was opened very slightly and hurriedly closed again; later on the door on the other side did the same; it seemed that someone needed to enter the room but thought better of it. Gregor went and waited immediately by the door, resolved either to bring the timorous visitor into the room in some way or at least to find out who it was; but the door was opened no more that night and Gregor waited in vain. The previous morning while the doors were locked everyone had wanted to get in there to him, but now, now that he had opened up one of the doors and the other had clearly been unlocked some time during the day, no-one came, and the keys were in the other sides.

It was not until late at night that the gaslight in the living room was put out, and now it was easy to see that his parents and sister had stayed awake all that time, as they all could be distinctly heard as they went away together on tip-toe. It was clear that no-one would come into Gregor's room any more until morning; that gave him plenty of time to think undisturbed about how he would have to re-arrange his life. For some reason, the tall, empty room where he was forced to remain made him feel uneasy as he lay there flat on the floor, even though he had been living in it for five years. Hardly aware of what he was doing other than a slight feeling of shame, he hurried under the couch. It pressed down on his back a little, and he was no longer able to lift his head, but he nonetheless felt immediately at ease and his only regret was that his body was too broad to get it all underneath.

in some other food that was more suitable? If she didn't do it herself he would rather go hungry than draw her attention to it, although he did feel a terrible urge to rush forward from under the couch, throw himself at his sister's feet and beg her for something good to eat. However, his sister noticed the full dish immediately and looked at it and the few drops of milk splashed around it with some surprise. She immediately picked it up - using a rag, not her bare hands - and carried it out. Gregor was extremely curious as to what she would bring in its place, imagining the wildest possibilities, but he never could have guessed what his sister, in her goodness, actually did bring. In order to test his taste, she brought him a whole selection of things, all spread out on an old newspaper. There were old, half-rotten vegetables; bones from the evening meal, covered in white sauce that had gone hard; a few raisins and almonds; some cheese that Gregor had declared inedible two days before; a dry roll and some bread spread with butter and salt. As well as all that she had poured some water into the dish, which had probably been permanently set aside for Gregor's use, and placed it beside them. Then, out of consideration for Gregor's feelings, as she knew that he would not eat in front of her, she hurried out again and even turned the key in the lock so that Gregor would know he could make things as comfortable for himself as he liked. Gregor's little legs whirred, at last he could eat. What's more, his injuries must already have completely healed as he found no difficulty in moving. This amazed him, as more than a month earlier he had cut his finger slightly with a knife, he thought of how his finger had still hurt the day before yesterday. "Am I less sensitive than I used to be, then?", he thought, and was already sucking greedily at the cheese which had immediately, almost compellingly, attracted him much more than the other foods on the newspaper. Quickly one after another, his eyes watering with pleasure, he consumed the cheese, the vegetables and the sauce; the fresh foods, on the other hand, he didn't like at all, and even dragged the things he did want to eat a little way away from them because he couldn't stand the smell. Long after he had finished eating and lay lethargic in the same place, his sister slowly turned the key in the lock as a sign to him that he should withdraw. He was immediately startled, although he had been half asleep, and he hurried back under the couch. But he needed great self-control to stay there even for the short time that his sister was in the room, as eating so much food had rounded out his body a little and he could hardly breathe in that narrow space. Half suffocating, he watched with bulging eyes as his sister unselfconsciously took a broom and swept up the left-overs, mixing them in with the food he had not even touched at all as if it could not be used any more. She quickly dropped it all into a bin, closed it with its wooden lid, and carried everything out. She had hardly turned her back before Gregor came out again from under the couch and stretched

himself.

This was how Gregor received his food each day now, once in the morning while his parents and the maid were still asleep, and the second time after everyone had eaten their meal at midday as his parents would sleep for a little while then as well, and Gregor's sister would send the maid away on some errand. Gregor's father and mother certainly did not want him to starve either, but perhaps it would have been more than they could stand to have any more experience of his feeding than being told about it, and perhaps his sister wanted to spare them what distress she could as they were indeed suffering enough.

Although Gregor wasn't able to hear any news directly he did listen to much of what was said in the next rooms, and whenever he heard anyone speaking he would scurry straight to the appropriate door and press his whole body against it. There was seldom any conversation, especially at first, that was not about him in some way, even if only in secret. For two whole days, all the talk at every mealtime was about what they should do now; but even between meals they spoke about the same subject as there were always at least two members of the family at home - nobody wanted to be at home by themselves and it was out of the question to leave the flat entirely empty. And on the very first day the maid had fallen to her knees and begged Gregor's mother to let her go without delay. It was not very clear how much she knew of what had happened but she left within a quarter of an hour, tearfully thanking Gregor's mother for her dismissal as if she had done her an enormous service. She even swore emphatically not to tell anyone the slightest about what had happened, even though no-one had asked that of her.

Gregor often heard how one of them would unsuccessfully urge another to eat, and receive no more answer than "no thanks, I've had enough" or something similar. No-one drank very much either. His sister would sometimes ask his father whether he would like a beer, hoping for the chance to go and fetch it herself. When his father then said nothing she would add, so that he would not feel selfish, that she could send the housekeeper for it, but then his father would close the matter with a big, loud "No", and no more would be said.

Even before the first day had come to an end, his father had explained to Gregor's mother and sister what their finances and prospects were. Now and then he stood up from the table and took some receipt or document from the little cash box he had saved from his business when it had collapsed five years earlier. Gregor heard how he opened the complicated lock and then closed it again after he had taken the item he wanted. What he heard his father say was some of the first good news that Gregor heard since he had first been incarcerated in his room. He had thought that nothing at all remained from his father's business, at least he had never told him anything different, and Gregor had never asked him about it anyway. Their business misfortune had reduced the family to a state of total despair, and Gregor's only concern at that time had been to arrange things so that they could all forget about it as quickly as possible. So then he started working especially hard, with a fiery vigour that raised him from a junior salesman to a travelling representative almost overnight, bringing with it the chance to earn money in quite different ways. Gregor converted his success at work straight into cash that he could lay on the table at home for the benefit of his astonished and delighted family. They had been good times and they had never come again, at least not with the same splendour, even though Gregor had later earned so much that he was in a position to bear the costs of the whole family, and did bear them. They had even got used to it, both Gregor and the family, they took the money with gratitude and he was glad to provide it, although there was no longer much warm affection given in return. Gregor only remained close to his sister now. Unlike him, she was very fond of music and a gifted and expressive violinist, it was his secret plan to send her to the conservatory next year even though it would cause great expense that would have to be made up for in some other way. During Gregor's short periods in town, conversation with his sister would often turn to the conservatory but it was only ever mentioned as a lovely dream that could never be realised. Their parents did not like to hear this innocent talk, but Gregor thought about it quite hard and decided he would let them know what he planned with a grand announcement of it on Christmas day.

listening. There were times when he simply became too tired to continue listening, when his head would fall wearily against the door and he would pull it up again with a start, as even the slightest noise he caused would be heard next door and they would all go silent. "What's that he's doing now", his father would say after a while, clearly having gone over to the door, and only then would the interrupted conversation slowly be taken up again.

When explaining things, his father repeated himself several times, partly because it was a long time since he had been occupied with these matters himself and partly because Gregor's mother did not understand everything the first time. From these repeated explanations Gregor learned, to his pleasure, that despite all their misfortunes there was still some money available from the old days. It was not a lot, but it had not been touched in the meantime and some interest had accumulated. Besides that, they had not been using up all the money that Gregor had been bringing home every month, keeping only a little for himself, so that that, too, had been accumulating. Behind the door, Gregor nodded with enthusiasm in his pleasure at this unexpected thrift and caution. He could actually have used this surplus money to reduce his father's debt to his boss, and the day when he could have freed himself from that job would have come much closer, but now it was certainly better the way his father had done things.

This money, however, was certainly not enough to enable the family to live off the interest; it was enough to maintain them for, perhaps, one or two years, no more. That's to say, it was money that should not really be touched but set aside for emergencies; money to live on had to be earned. His father was healthy but old, and lacking in self confidence. During the five years that he had not been working - the first holiday in a life that had been full of strain and no success - he had put on a lot of weight and become very slow and clumsy. Would Gregor's elderly mother now have to go and earn money? She suffered from asthma and it was a strain for her just to move about the home, every other day would be spent struggling for breath on the sofa by the open window. Would his sister have to go and earn money? She was still a child of seventeen, her life up till then had been very enviable, consisting of wearing nice clothes, sleeping late, helping out in the business, joining in with a few modest pleasures and most of all playing the violin. Whenever they began to talk of the need to earn money, Gregor would always first let go of the door and then throw himself onto the cool, leather sofa next to it, as he became quite hot with shame and regret.

to all the effort of pushing a chair to the window, climbing up onto the sill and, propped up in the chair, leaning on the window to stare out of it. He had used to feel a great sense of freedom from doing this, but doing it now was obviously something more remembered than experienced, as what he actually saw in this way was becoming less distinct every day, even things that were quite near; he had used to curse the ever-present view of the hospital across the street, but now he could not see it at all, and if he had not known that he lived in Charlottenstrasse, which was a quiet street despite being in the middle of the city, he could have thought that he was looking out the window at a barren waste where the grey sky and the grey earth mingled inseparably. His observant sister only needed to notice the chair twice before she would always push it back to its exact position by the window after she had tidied up the room, and even left the inner pane of the window open from then on.

One day, about a month after Gregor's transformation when his sister no longer had any particular reason to be shocked at his appearance, she came into the room a little earlier than usual and found him still staring out the window, motionless, and just where he would be most horrible. In itself, his sister's not coming into the room would have been no surprise for Gregor as it would have been difficult for her to immediately open the window while he was still there, but not only did she not come in, she went straight back and closed the door behind her, a stranger would have thought he had threatened her and tried to bite her. Gregor went straight to hide himself under the couch, of course, but he had to wait until midday before his sister came back and she seemed much more uneasy than usual. It made him realise that she still found his appearance unbearable and would continue to do so, she probably even had to overcome the urge to flee when she saw the little bit of him that protruded from under the couch. One day, in order to spare her even this sight, he spent four hours carrying the bedsheet over to the couch on his back and arranged it so that he was completely covered and his sister would not be able to see him even if she bent down. If she did not think this sheet was necessary then all she had to do was take it off again, as it was clear enough that it was no pleasure for Gregor to cut himself off so completely. She left the sheet where it was. Gregor even thought he glimpsed a look of gratitude one time when he carefully looked out from under the sheet to see how his sister liked the new arrangement.

For the first fourteen days, Gregor's parents could not bring themselves to come into the room to see him. He would often hear them say how they appreciated all the new work his sister was doing even though, before, they had seen her as a girl who was somewhat useless and frequently been annoyed with her. But now the two of them, father and mother, would often both wait outside the door of Gregor's room while his sister tidied up in there, and as soon as she went out again she would have to tell them exactly how everything looked, what Gregor had eaten, how he had behaved this time and whether, perhaps, any slight improvement could be seen. His mother also wanted to go in and visit Gregor relatively soon but his father and sister at first persuaded her against it. Gregor listened very closely to all this, and approved fully. Later, though, she had to be held back by force, which made her call out: "Let me go and see Gregor, he is my unfortunate son! Can't you understand I have to see him?", and Gregor would think to himself that maybe it would be better if his mother came in, not every day of course, but one day a week, perhaps; she could understand everything much better than his sister who, for all her courage, was still just a child after all, and really might not have had an adult's appreciation of the burdensome job she had taken on.

Gregor's wish to see his mother was soon realised. Out of consideration for his parents, Gregor wanted to avoid being seen at the window during the day, the few square meters of the floor did not give him much room to crawl about, it was hard to just lie quietly through the night, his food soon stopped giving him any pleasure at all, and so, to entertain himself, he got into the habit of crawling up and down the walls and ceiling. He was especially fond of hanging from the ceiling; it was quite different from lying on the floor; he could breathe more freely; his body had a light swing to it; and up there, relaxed and almost happy, it might happen that he would surprise even himself by letting go of the ceiling and landing on the floor with a crash. But now, of course, he had far better control of his body than before and, even with a fall as great as that, caused himself no damage. Very soon his sister noticed Gregor's new way of entertaining himself - he had, after all, left traces of the adhesive from his feet as he crawled about - and got it into her head to make it as easy as possible for him by removing the furniture that got in his way, especially the chest of drawers and the desk. Now, this was not something that she would be able to do by herself; she did not dare to ask for help from her father; the sixteen year old maid had carried on bravely since the cook had left but she certainly would not have helped in this, she had even asked to be allowed to keep the kitchen locked at all times and never to have to open the door unless it was especially important; so his sister had no choice but to choose some time when Gregor's father was not there and fetch his mother to help her. As she approached the room, Gregor could hear his mother express her joy, but once at the door she went silent. First, of course, his sister came in and looked round to see that everything in the room was alright; and only then did she let her mother enter. Gregor had hurriedly pulled the sheet down lower over the couch and put more folds into it so that everything really looked as if it had just been thrown down by chance. Gregor also refrained, this time, from spying out from under the sheet; he gave up the chance to see his mother until later and was simply glad that she had come. "You can come in, he can't be seen", said his sister, obviously leading her in by the hand. The old chest of drawers was too heavy for a pair of feeble women to be heaving about, but Gregor listened as they pushed it from its place, his sister always taking on the heaviest part of the work for herself and ignoring her mother's warnings that she would strain herself. This lasted a very long time. After labouring at it for fifteen minutes or more his mother said it would be better to leave the chest where it was, for one thing it was too heavy for them to get the job finished before Gregor's father got home and leaving it in the middle of the room it would be in his way even more, and for another thing it wasn't even sure that taking the furniture away would really be any help to him. She thought just the opposite; the sight of the bare walls saddened her right to her heart; and why wouldn't Gregor feel the same way about it, he'd been used to this furniture in his room for a long time and it would make him feel abandoned to be in an empty room like that. Then, quietly, almost whispering as if wanting Gregor (whose whereabouts she did not know) to hear not even the tone of her voice, as she was convinced that he did not understand her words, she added "and by taking the furniture away, won't it seem like we're showing that we've given up all hope of improvement and we're abandoning him to cope for himself? I think it'd be best to leave the room exactly the way it was before so that when Gregor comes back to us again he'll find everything unchanged and he'll be able to forget the time in between all the easier".

Hearing these words from his mother made Gregor realise that the lack of any direct human communication, along with the monotonous life led by the family during these two months, must have made him confused - he could think of no other way of explaining to himself why he had seriously wanted his room emptied out. Had he really wanted to transform his room into a cave, a warm room fitted out with the nice furniture he had inherited? That would have let him crawl around unimpeded in any direction, but it would also have let him quickly forget his past when he had still been human. He had come very close to forgetting, and it had only been the voice of his mother, unheard for so long, that had shaken him out of it. Nothing should be removed; everything had to stay; he could not do without the good influence the furniture had on his condition; and if the furniture made it difficult for him to crawl about mindlessly that was not a loss but a great advantage.

His sister, unfortunately, did not agree; she had become used to the idea, not without reason, that she was Gregor's spokesman to his parents about the things that concerned him. This meant that his mother's advice now was sufficient reason for her to insist on removing not only the chest of drawers and the desk, as she had thought at first, but all the furniture apart from the all-important couch. It was more than childish perversity, of course, or the unexpected confidence she had recently acquired, that made her insist; she had indeed noticed that Gregor needed a lot of room to crawl about in, whereas the furniture, as far as anyone could see, was of no use to him at all. Girls of that age, though, do become enthusiastic about things and feel they must get their way whenever they can. Perhaps this was what tempted Grete to make Gregor's situation seem even more shocking than it was so that she could do even more for him. Grete would probably be the only one who would dare enter a room dominated by Gregor crawling about the bare walls by himself.

So she refused to let her mother dissuade her. Gregor's mother already looked uneasy in his room, she soon stopped speaking and helped Gregor's sister to get the chest of drawers out with what strength she had. The chest of drawers was something that Gregor could do without if he had to, but the writing desk had to stay. Hardly had the two women pushed the chest of drawers, groaning, out of the room than Gregor poked his head out from under the couch to see what he could do about it. He meant to be as careful and considerate as he could, but, unfortunately, it was his mother who came back first while Grete in the next room had her arms round the chest, pushing and pulling at it from side to side by herself without, of course, moving it an inch. His mother was not used to the sight of Gregor, he might have made her ill, so Gregor hurried backwards to the far end of the couch. In his startlement, though, he was not able to prevent the sheet at its front from moving a little. It was enough to attract his mother's attention. She stood very still, remained there a moment, and then went back out to Grete.

Gregor kept trying to assure himself that nothing unusual was happening, it was just a few pieces of furniture being moved after all, but he soon had to admit that the women going to and fro, their little calls to each other, the scraping of the furniture on the floor, all these things made him feel as if he were being assailed from all sides. With his head and legs pulled in against him and his body pressed to the floor, he was forced to admit to himself that he could not stand all of this much longer. They were emptying his room out; taking away everything that was dear to him; they had already taken out the chest containing his fretsaw and other tools; now they threatened to remove the writing desk with its place clearly worn into the floor, the desk where he had done his homework as a business trainee, at high school, even while he had been at infant school--he really could not wait any longer to see whether the two women's intentions were good. He had nearly forgotten they were there anyway, as they were now too tired to say anything while they worked and he could only hear their feet as they stepped heavily on the floor.

So, while the women were leant against the desk in the other room catching their breath, he sallied out, changed direction four times not knowing what he should save first before his attention was suddenly caught by the picture on the wall - which was already denuded of everything else that had been on it - of the lady dressed in copious fur. He hurried up onto the picture and pressed himself against its glass, it held him firmly and felt good on his hot belly. This picture at least, now totally covered by Gregor, would certainly be taken away by no-one. He turned his head to face the door into the living room so that he could watch the women when they came back.

They had not allowed themselves a long rest and came back quite soon; Grete had put her arm around her mother and was nearly carrying her. "What shall we take now, then?", said Grete and looked around. Her eyes met those of Gregor on the wall. Perhaps only because her mother was there, she remained calm, bent her face to her so that she would not look round and said, albeit hurriedly and with a tremor in her voice: "Come on, let's go back in the living room for a while?" Gregor could see what Grete had in mind, she wanted to take her mother somewhere safe and then chase him down from the wall. Well, she could certainly try it! He sat unyielding on his picture. He would rather jump at Grete's face.

That was the first word she had spoken to him directly since his transformation. She ran into the other room to fetch some kind of smelling salts to bring her mother out of her faint; Gregor wanted to help too - he could save his picture later, although he stuck fast to the glass and had to pull himself off by force; then he, too, ran into the next room as if he could advise his sister like in the old days; but he had to just stand behind her doing nothing; she was looking into various bottles, he startled her when she turned round; a bottle fell to the ground and broke; a splinter cut Gregor's face, some kind of caustic medicine splashed all over him; now, without delaying any longer, Grete took hold of all the bottles she could and ran with them in to her mother; she slammed the door shut with her foot. So now Gregor was shut out from his mother, who, because of him, might be near to death; he could not open the door if he did not want to chase his sister away, and she had to stay with his mother; there was nothing for him to do but wait; and, oppressed with anxiety and self-reproach, he began to crawl about, he crawled over everything, walls, furniture, ceiling, and finally in his confusion as the whole room began to spin around him he fell down into the middle of the dinner table.

He lay there for a while, numb and immobile, all around him it was quiet, maybe that was a good sign. Then there was someone at the door. The maid, of course, had locked herself in her kitchen so that Grete would have to go and answer it. His father had arrived home. "What's happened?" were his first words; Grete's appearance must have made everything clear to him. She answered him with subdued voice, and openly pressed her face into his chest: "Mother's fainted, but she's better now. Gregor got out." "Just as I expected", said his father, "just as I always said, but you women wouldn't listen, would you." It was clear to Gregor that Grete had not said enough and that his father took it to mean that something bad had happened, that he was responsible for some act of violence. That meant Gregor would now have to try to calm his father, as he did not have the time to explain things to him even if that had been possible. So he fled to the door of his room and pressed himself against it so that his father, when he came in from the hall, could see straight away that Gregor had the best intentions and would go back into his room without delay, that it would not be necessary to drive him back but that they had only to open the door and he would disappear.

His father, though, was not in the mood to notice subtleties like that; "Ah!", he shouted as he came in, sounding as if he were both angry and glad at the same time. Gregor drew his head back from the door and lifted it towards his father. He really had not imagined his father the way he stood there now; of late, with his new habit of crawling about, he had neglected to pay attention to what was going on the rest of the flat the way he had done before. He really ought to have expected things to have changed, but still, still, was that really his father? The same tired man as used to be laying there entombed in his bed when Gregor came back from his business trips, who would receive him sitting in the armchair in his nightgown when he came back in the evenings; who was hardly even able to stand up but, as a sign of his pleasure, would just raise his arms and who, on the couple of times a year when they went for a walk together on a Sunday or public holiday wrapped up tightly in his overcoat between Gregor and his mother, would always labour his way forward a little more slowly than them, who were already walking slowly for his sake; who would place his stick down carefully and, if he wanted to say something would invariably stop and gather his companions around him. He was standing up straight enough now; dressed in a smart blue uniform with gold buttons, the sort worn by the employees at the banking institute; above the high, stiff collar of the coat his strong double-chin emerged; under the bushy eyebrows, his piercing, dark eyes looked out fresh and alert; his normally unkempt white hair was combed down painfully close to his scalp. He took his cap, with its gold monogram from, probably, some bank, and threw it in an arc right across the room onto the sofa, put his hands in his trouser pockets, pushing back the bottom of his long uniform coat, and, with look of determination, walked towards Gregor. He probably did not even know himself what he had in mind, but nonetheless lifted his feet unusually high. Gregor was amazed at the enormous size of the soles of his boots, but wasted no time with that - he knew full well, right from the first day of his new life, that his father thought it necessary to always be extremely strict with him. And so he ran up to his father, stopped when his father stopped, scurried forwards again when he moved, even slightly. In this way they went round the room several times without anything decisive happening, without even giving the impression of a chase as everything went so slowly. Gregor remained all this time on the floor, largely because he feared his father might see it as especially provoking if he fled onto the wall or ceiling. Whatever he did, Gregor had to admit that he certainly would not be able to keep up this running about for long, as for each step his father took he had to carry out countless movements. He became noticeably short of breath, even in his earlier life his lungs had not been very reliable. Now, as he lurched about in his efforts to muster all the strength he could for running he could hardly keep his eyes open; his thoughts became too slow for him to think of any other way of saving himself than running; he almost forgot that the walls were there for him to use although, here, they were concealed behind carefully carved furniture full of notches and protrusions - then, right beside him, lightly tossed, something flew down and rolled in front of him. It was an apple; then another one immediately flew at him; Gregor froze in shock; there was no longer any point in running as his father had decided to bombard him. He had filled his pockets with fruit from the bowl on the sideboard and now, without even taking the time for careful aim, threw one apple after another. These little, red apples rolled about on the floor, knocking into each other as if they had electric motors. An apple thrown without much force glanced against Gregor's back and slid off without doing any harm. Another one however, immediately following it, hit squarely and lodged in his back; Gregor wanted to drag himself away, as if he could remove the surprising, the incredible pain by changing his position; but he felt as if nailed to the spot and spread himself out, all his senses in confusion. The last thing he saw was the door of his room being pulled open, his sister was screaming, his mother ran out in front of her in her blouse (as his sister had taken off some of her clothes after she had fainted to make it easier for her to breathe), she ran to his father, her skirts unfastened and sliding one after another to the ground, stumbling over the skirts she pushed herself to his father, her arms around him, uniting herself with him totally - now Gregor lost his ability to see anything - her hands behind his father's head begging him to spare Gregor's life.

III

Because of his injuries, Gregor had lost much of his mobility - probably permanently. He had been reduced to the condition of an ancient invalid and it took him long, long minutes to crawl across his room - crawling over the ceiling was out of the question - but this deterioration in his condition was fully (in his opinion) made up for by the door to the living room being left open every evening.

He got into the habit of closely watching it for one or two hours before it was opened and then, lying in the darkness of his room where he could not be seen from the living room, he could watch the family in the light of the dinner table and listen to their conversation - with everyone's permission, in a way, and thus quite differently from before.

They no longer held the lively conversations of earlier times, of course, the ones that Gregor always thought about with longing when he was tired and getting into the damp bed in some small hotel room.

All of them were usually very quiet nowadays. Soon after dinner, his father would go to sleep in his chair; his mother and sister would urge each other to be quiet; his mother, bent deeply under the lamp, would sew fancy underwear for a fashion shop; his sister, who had taken a sales job, learned shorthand and French in the evenings so that she might be able to get a better position later on.

With a kind of stubbornness, Gregor's father refused to take his uniform off even at home; while his nightgown hung unused on its peg Gregor's father would slumber where he was, fully dressed, as if always ready to serve and expecting to hear the voice of his superior even here. The uniform had not been new to start with, but as a result of this it slowly became even shabbier despite the efforts of Gregor's mother and sister to look after it. Gregor would often spend the whole evening looking at all the stains on this coat, with its gold buttons always kept polished and shiny, while the old man in it would sleep, highly uncomfortable but peaceful.

As soon as it struck ten, Gregor's mother would speak gently to his father to wake him and try to persuade him to go to bed, as he couldn't sleep properly where he was and he really had to get his sleep if he was to be up at six to get to work. But since he had been in work he had become more obstinate and would always insist on staying longer at the table, even though he regularly fell asleep and it was then harder than ever to persuade him to exchange the chair for his bed. Then, however much mother and sister would importune him with little reproaches and warnings he would keep slowly shaking his head for a quarter of an hour with his eyes closed and refusing to get up. Gregor's mother would tug at his sleeve, whisper endearments into his ear, Gregor's sister would leave her work to help her mother, but nothing would have any effect on him. He would just sink deeper into his chair. Only when the two women took him under the arms he would abruptly open his eyes, look at them one after the other and say: "What a life! This is what peace I get in my old age!" And supported by the two women he would lift himself up carefully as if he were carrying the greatest load himself, let the women take him to the door, send them off and carry on by himself while Gregor's mother would throw down her needle and his sister her pen so that they could run after his father and continue being of help to him.

Who, in this tired and overworked family, would have had time to give more attention to Gregor than was absolutely necessary? The household budget became even smaller; so now the maid was dismissed; an enormous, thick-boned charwoman with white hair that flapped around her head came every morning and evening to do the heaviest work; everything else was looked after by Gregor's mother on top of the large amount of sewing work she did. Gregor even learned, listening to the evening conversation about what price they had hoped for, that several items of jewellery belonging to the family had been sold, even though both mother and sister had been very fond of wearing them at functions and celebrations. But the loudest complaint was that although the flat was much too big for their present circumstances, they could not move out of it, there was no imaginable way of transferring Gregor to the new address. He could see quite well, though, that there were more reasons than consideration for him that made it difficult for them to move, it would have been quite easy to transport him in any suitable crate with a few air holes in it; the main thing holding the family back from their decision to move was much more to do with their total despair, and the thought that they had been struck with a misfortune unlike anything experienced by anyone else they knew or were related to. They carried out absolutely everything that the world expects from poor people, Gregor's father brought bank employees their breakfast, his mother sacrificed herself by washing clothes for strangers, his sister ran back and forth behind her desk at the behest of the customers, but they just did not have the strength to do any more. And the injury in Gregor's back began to hurt as much as when it was new. After they had come back from taking his father to bed Gregor's mother and sister would now leave their work where it was and sit close together, cheek to cheek; his mother would point to Gregor's room and say "Close that door, Grete", and then, when he was in the dark again, they would sit in the next room and their tears would mingle, or they would simply sit there staring dry-eyed at the table.

again, a cashier from a hat shop for whom his attention had been serious but too slow, - all of them appeared to him, mixed together with strangers and others he had forgotten, but instead of helping him and his family they were all of them inaccessible, and he was glad when they disappeared. Other times he was not at all in the mood to look after his family, he was filled with simple rage about the lack of attention he was shown, and although he could think of nothing he would have wanted, he made plans of how he could get into the pantry where he could take all the things he was entitled to, even if he was not hungry. Gregor's sister no longer thought about how she could please him but would hurriedly push some food or other into his room with her foot before she rushed out to work in the morning and at midday, and in the evening she would sweep it away again with the broom, indifferent as to whether it had been eaten or - more often than not - had been left totally untouched. She still cleared up the room in the evening, but now she could not have been any quicker about it. Smears of dirt were left on the walls, here and there were little balls of dust and filth. At first, Gregor went into one of the worst of these places when his sister arrived as a reproach to her, but he could have stayed there for weeks without his sister doing anything about it; she could see the dirt as well as he could but she had simply decided to leave him to it. At the same time she became touchy in a way that was quite new for her and which everyone in the family understood - cleaning up Gregor's room was for her and her alone. Gregor's mother did once thoroughly clean his room, and needed to use several bucketfuls of water to do it - although that much dampness also made Gregor ill and he lay flat on the couch, bitter and immobile. But his mother was to be punished still more for what she had done, as hardly had his sister arrived home in the evening than she noticed the change in Gregor's room and, highly aggrieved, ran back into the living room where, despite her mother's raised and imploring hands, she broke into convulsive tears. Her father, of course, was startled out of his chair and the two parents looked on astonished and helpless; then they, too, became agitated; Gregor's father, standing to the right of his mother, accused her of not leaving the cleaning of Gregor's room to his sister; from her left, Gregor's sister screamed at her that she was never to clean Gregor's room again; while his mother tried to draw his father, who was beside himself with anger, into the bedroom; his sister, quaking with tears, thumped on the table with her small fists; and Gregor hissed in anger that no-one had even thought of closing the door to save him the sight of this and all its noise.

the charwoman was here. This elderly widow, with a robust bone structure that made her able to withstand the hardest of things in her long life, wasn't really repelled by Gregor. Just by chance one day, rather than any real curiosity, she opened the door to Gregor's room and found herself face to face with him. He was taken totally by surprise, no-one was chasing him but he began to rush to and fro while she just stood there in amazement with her hands crossed in front of her. From then on she never failed to open the door slightly every evening and morning and look briefly in on him. At first she would call to him as she did so with words that she probably considered friendly, such as "come on then, you old dung-beetle!", or "look at the old dung-beetle there!" Gregor never responded to being spoken to in that way, but just remained where he was without moving as if the door had never even been opened. If only they had told this charwoman to clean up his room every day instead of letting her disturb him for no reason whenever she felt like it! One day, early in the morning while a heavy rain struck the windowpanes, perhaps indicating that spring was coming, she began to speak to him in that way once again. Gregor was so resentful of it that he started to move toward her, he was slow and infirm, but it was like a kind of attack. Instead of being afraid, the charwoman just lifted up one of the chairs from near the door and stood there with her mouth open, clearly intending not to close her mouth until the chair in her hand had been slammed down into Gregor's back. "Aren't you coming any closer, then?", she asked when Gregor turned round again, and she calmly put the chair back in the corner.

anything she couldn't use for the time being she would just chuck in there. He, fortunately, would usually see no more than the object and the hand that held it. The woman most likely meant to fetch the things back out again when she had time and the opportunity, or to throw everything out in one go, but what actually happened was that they were left where they landed when they had first been thrown unless Gregor made his way through the junk and moved it somewhere else. At first he moved it because, with no other room free where he could crawl about, he was forced to, but later on he came to enjoy it although moving about in that way left him sad and tired to death, and he would remain immobile for hours afterwards.

The gentlemen who rented the room would sometimes take their evening meal at home in the living room that was used by everyone, and so the door to this room was often kept closed in the evening. But Gregor found it easy to give up having the door open, he had, after all, often failed to make use of it when it was open and, without the family having noticed it, lain in his room in its darkest corner. One time, though, the charwoman left the door to the living room slightly open, and it remained open when the gentlemen who rented the room came in in the evening and the light was put on. They sat up at the table where, formerly, Gregor had taken his meals with his father and mother, they unfolded the serviettes and picked up their knives and forks. Gregor's mother immediately appeared in the doorway with a dish of meat and soon behind her came his sister with a dish piled high with potatoes. The food was steaming, and filled the room with its smell. The gentlemen bent over the dishes set in front of them as if they wanted to test the food before eating it, and the gentleman in the middle, who seemed to count as an authority for the other two, did indeed cut off a piece of meat while it was still in its dish, clearly wishing to establish whether it was sufficiently cooked or whether it should be sent back to the kitchen. It was to his satisfaction, and Gregor's mother and sister, who had been looking on anxiously, began to breathe again and smiled.

The family themselves ate in the kitchen. Nonetheless, Gregor's father came into the living room before he went into the kitchen, bowed once with his cap in his hand and did his round of the table. The gentlemen stood as one, and mumbled something into their beards.

Then, once they were alone, they ate in near perfect silence. It seemed remarkable to Gregor that above all the various noises of eating their chewing teeth could still be heard, as if they had wanted to show Gregor that you need teeth in order to eat and it was not possible to perform anything with jaws that are toothless however nice they might be. "I'd like to eat something", said Gregor anxiously, "but not anything like they're eating. They do feed themselves. And here I am, dying!"

Throughout all this time, Gregor could not remember having heard the violin being played, but this evening it began to be heard from the kitchen. The three gentlemen had already finished their meal, the one in the middle had produced a newspaper, given a page to each of the others, and now they leant back in their chairs reading them and smoking. When the violin began playing they became attentive, stood up and went on tip-toe over to the door of the hallway where they stood pressed against each other. Someone must have heard them in the kitchen, as Gregor's father called out: "Is the playing perhaps unpleasant for the gentlemen? We can stop it straight away." "On the contrary", said the middle gentleman, "would the young lady not like to come in and play for us here in the room, where it is, after all, much more cosy and comfortable?" "Oh yes, we'd love to", called back Gregor's father as if he had been the violin player himself. The gentlemen stepped back into the room and waited. Gregor's father soon appeared with the music stand, his mother with the music and his sister with the violin. She calmly prepared everything for her to begin playing; his parents, who had never rented a room out before and therefore showed an exaggerated courtesy towards the three gentlemen, did not even dare to sit on their own chairs; his father leant against the door with his right hand pushed in between two buttons on his uniform coat; his mother, though, was offered a seat by one of the gentlemen and sat - leaving the chair where the gentleman happened to have placed it - out of the way in a corner.

His sister began to play; father and mother paid close attention, one on each side, to the movements of her hands. Drawn in by the playing, Gregor had dared to come forward a little and already had his head in the living room. Before, he had taken great pride in how considerate he was but now it hardly occurred to him that he had become so thoughtless about the others. What's more, there was now all the more reason to keep himself hidden as he was covered in the dust that lay everywhere in his room and flew up at the slightest movement; he carried threads, hairs, and remains of food about on his back and sides; he was much too indifferent to everything now to lay on his back and wipe himself on the carpet like he had used to do several times a day. And despite this condition, he was not too shy to move forward a little onto the immaculate floor of the living room.

No-one noticed him, though. The family was totally preoccupied with the violin playing; at first, the three gentlemen had put their hands in their pockets and come up far too close behind the music stand to look at all the notes being played, and they must have disturbed Gregor's sister, but soon, in contrast with the family, they withdrew back to the window with their heads sunk and talking to each other at half volume, and they stayed by the window while Gregor's father observed them anxiously. It really now seemed very obvious that they had expected to hear some beautiful or entertaining violin playing but had been disappointed, that they had had enough of the whole performance and it was only now out of politeness that they allowed their peace to be disturbed. It was especially unnerving, the way they all blew the smoke from their cigarettes upwards from their mouth and noses. Yet Gregor's sister was playing so beautifully. Her face was leant to one side, following the lines of music with a careful and melancholy expression. Gregor crawled a little further forward, keeping his head close to the ground so that he could meet her eyes if the chance came. Was he an animal if music could captivate him so? It seemed to him that he was being shown the way to the unknown nourishment he had been yearning for. He was determined to make his way forward to his sister and tug at her skirt to show her she might come into his room with her violin, as no-one appreciated her playing here as much as he would. He never wanted to let her out of his room, not while he lived, anyway; his shocking appearance should, for once, be of some use to him; he wanted to be at every door of his room at once to hiss and spit at the attackers; his sister should not be forced to stay with him, though, but stay of her own free will; she would sit beside him on the couch with her ear bent down to him while he told her how he had always intended to send her to the conservatory, how he would have told everyone about it last Christmas - had Christmas really come and gone already? - if this misfortune hadn't got in the way, and refuse to let anyone dissuade him from it. On hearing all this, his sister would break out in tears of emotion, and Gregor would climb up to her shoulder and kiss her neck, which, since she had been going out to work, she had kept free without any necklace or collar.

"Mr. Samsa!", shouted the middle gentleman to Gregor's father, pointing, without wasting any more words, with his forefinger at Gregor as he slowly moved forward. The violin went silent, the middle of the three gentlemen first smiled at his two friends, shaking his head, and then looked back at Gregor. His father seemed to think it more important to calm the three gentlemen before driving Gregor out, even though they were not at all upset and seemed to think Gregor was more entertaining than the violin playing had been. He rushed up to them with his arms spread out and attempted to drive them back into their room at the same time as trying to block their view of Gregor with his body. Now they did become a little annoyed, and it was not clear whether it was his father's behaviour that annoyed them or the dawning realisation that they had had a neighbour like Gregor in the next room without knowing it. They asked Gregor's father for explanations, raised their arms like he had, tugged excitedly at their beards and moved back towards their room only very slowly. Meanwhile Gregor's sister had overcome the despair she had fallen into when her playing was suddenly interrupted. She had let her hands drop and let violin and bow hang limply for a while but continued to look at the music as if still playing, but then she suddenly pulled herself together, lay the instrument on her mother's lap who still sat laboriously struggling for breath where she was, and ran into the next room which, under pressure from her father, the three gentlemen were more quickly moving toward. Under his sister's experienced hand, the pillows and covers on the beds flew up and were put into order and she had already finished making the beds and slipped out again before the three gentlemen had reached the room. Gregor's father seemed so obsessed with what he was doing that he forgot all the respect he owed to his tenants. He urged them and pressed them until, when he was already at the door of the room, the middle of the three gentlemen shouted like thunder and stamped his foot and thereby brought Gregor's father to a halt. "I declare here and now", he said, raising his hand and glancing at Gregor's mother and sister to gain their attention too, "that with regard to the repugnant conditions that prevail in this flat and with this family" - here he looked briefly but decisively at the floor - "I give immediate notice on my room. For the days that I have been living here I will, of course, pay nothing at all, on the contrary I will consider whether to proceed with some kind of action for damages from you, and believe me it would be very easy to set out the grounds for such an action." He was silent and looked straight ahead as if waiting for something. And indeed, his two friends joined in with the words: "And we also give immediate notice." With that, he took hold of the door handle and slammed the door.

Gregor's father staggered back to his seat, feeling his way with his hands, and fell into it; it looked as if he was stretching himself out for his usual evening nap but from the uncontrolled way his head kept nodding it could be seen that he was not sleeping at all. Throughout all this, Gregor had lain still where the three gentlemen had first seen him. His disappointment at the failure of his plan, and perhaps also because he was weak from hunger, made it impossible for him to move. He was sure that everyone would turn on him any moment, and he waited. He was not even startled out of this state when the violin on his mother's lap fell from her trembling fingers and landed loudly on the floor.

"Father, Mother", said his sister, hitting the table with her hand as introduction, "we can't carry on like this. Maybe you can't see it, but I can. I don't want to call this monster my brother, all I can say is: we have to try and get rid of it. We've done all that's humanly possible to look after it and be patient, I don't think anyone could accuse us of doing anything wrong."

"She's absolutely right", said Gregor's father to himself. His mother, who still had not had time to catch her breath, began to cough dully, her hand held out in front of her and a deranged expression in her eyes.

Gregor's sister rushed to his mother and put her hand on her forehead. Her words seemed to give Gregor's father some more definite ideas. He sat upright, played with his uniform cap between the plates left by the three gentlemen after their meal, and occasionally looked down at Gregor as he lay there immobile.

"We have to try and get rid of it", said Gregor's sister, now speaking only to her father, as her mother was too occupied with coughing to listen, "it'll be the death of both of you, I can see it coming. We can't all work as hard as we have to and then come home to be tortured like this, we can't endure it. I can't endure it any more." And she broke out so heavily in tears that they flowed down the face of her mother, and she wiped them away with mechanical hand movements.

"My child", said her father with sympathy and obvious understanding, "what are we to do?"

His sister just shrugged her shoulders as a sign of the helplessness and tears that had taken hold of her, displacing her earlier certainty.

"If he could just understand us", said his father almost as a question; his sister shook her hand vigorously through her tears as a sign that of that there was no question.

which was totally beyond Gregor's comprehension, his sister even abandoned his mother as she pushed herself vigorously out of her chair as if more willing to sacrifice her own mother than stay anywhere near Gregor. She rushed over to behind her father, who had become excited merely because she was and stood up half raising his hands in front of Gregor's sister as if to protect her.

But Gregor had had no intention of frightening anyone, least of all his sister. All he had done was begin to turn round so that he could go back into his room, although that was in itself quite startling as his pain-wracked condition meant that turning round required a great deal of effort and he was using his head to help himself do it, repeatedly raising it and striking it against the floor. He stopped and looked round. They seemed to have realised his good intention and had only been alarmed briefly. Now they all looked at him in unhappy silence. His mother lay in her chair with her legs stretched out and pressed against each other, her eyes nearly closed with exhaustion; his sister sat next to his father with her arms around his neck.

"Maybe now they'll let me turn round", thought Gregor and went back to work. He could not help panting loudly with the effort and had sometimes to stop and take a rest. No-one was making him rush any more, everything was left up to him. As soon as he had finally finished turning round he began to move straight ahead. He was amazed at the great distance that separated him from his room, and could not understand how he had covered that distance in his weak state a little while before and almost without noticing it. He concentrated on crawling as fast as he could and hardly noticed that there was not a word, not any cry, from his family to distract him. He did not turn his head until he had reached the doorway. He did not turn it all the way round as he felt his neck becoming stiff, but it was nonetheless enough to see that nothing behind him had changed, only his sister had stood up. With his last glance he saw that his mother had now fallen completely asleep.

was unnatural. He also felt relatively comfortable. It is true that his entire body was aching, but the pain seemed to be slowly getting weaker and weaker and would finally disappear altogether. He could already hardly feel the decayed apple in his back or the inflamed area around it, which was entirely covered in white dust. He thought back of his family with emotion and love. If it was possible, he felt that he must go away even more strongly than his sister. He remained in this state of empty and peaceful rumination until he heard the clock tower strike three in the morning. He watched as it slowly began to get light everywhere outside the window too. Then, without his willing it, his head sank down completely, and his last breath flowed weakly from his nostrils.

When the cleaner came in early in the morning - they'd often asked her not to keep slamming the doors but with her strength and in her hurry she still did, so that everyone in the flat knew when she'd arrived and from then on it was impossible to sleep in peace - she made her usual brief look in on Gregor and at first found nothing special. She thought he was laying there so still on purpose, playing the martyr; she attributed all possible understanding to him. She happened to be holding the long broom in her hand, so she tried to tickle Gregor with it from the doorway. When she had no success with that she tried to make a nuisance of herself and poked at him a little, and only when she found she could shove him across the floor with no resistance at all did she start to pay attention. She soon realised what had really happened, opened her eyes wide, whistled to herself, but did not waste time to yank open the bedroom doors and shout loudly into the darkness of the bedrooms: "Come and 'ave a look at this, it's dead, just lying there, stone dead!"

Mr. and Mrs. Samsa sat upright there in their marriage bed and had to make an effort to get over the shock caused by the cleaner before they could grasp what she was saying. But then, each from his own side, they hurried out of bed. Mr. Samsa threw the blanket over his shoulders, Mrs. Samsa just came out in her nightdress; and that is how they went into Gregor's room. On the way they opened the door to the living room where Grete had been sleeping since the three gentlemen had moved in; she was fully dressed as if she had never been asleep, and the paleness of her face seemed to confirm this. "Dead?", asked Mrs. Samsa, looking at the charwoman enquiringly, even though she could have checked for herself and could have known it even without checking. "That's what I said", replied the cleaner, and to prove it she gave Gregor's body another shove with the broom, sending it sideways across the floor. Mrs. Samsa made a movement as if she wanted to hold back the broom, but did not complete it. "Now then", said Mr. Samsa, "let's give thanks to God for that". He crossed himself, and the three women followed his example. Grete, who had not taken her eyes from the corpse, said:

"Just look how thin he was. He didn't eat anything for so long. The food came out again just the same as when it went in". Gregor's body was indeed completely dried up and flat, they had not seen it until then, but now he was not lifted up on his little legs, nor did he do anything to make them look away.

"Grete, come with us in here for a little while", said Mrs. Samsa with a pained smile, and Grete followed her parents into the bedroom but not without looking back at the body. The cleaner shut the door and opened the window wide. Although it was still early in the morning the fresh air had something of warmth mixed in with it. It was already the end of March, after all.

The three gentlemen stepped out of their room and looked round in amazement for their breakfasts; they had been forgotten about. "Where is our breakfast?", the middle gentleman asked the cleaner irritably. She just put her finger on her lips and made a quick and silent sign to the men that they might like to come into Gregor's room. They did so, and stood around Gregor's corpse with their hands in the pockets of their well-worn coats. It was now quite light in the room.

Then the door of the bedroom opened and Mr. Samsa appeared in his uniform with his wife on one arm and his daughter on the other. All of them had been crying a little; Grete now and then pressed her face against her father's arm.

"Leave my home. Now!", said Mr. Samsa, indicating the door and without letting the women from him. "What do you mean?", asked the middle of the three gentlemen somewhat disconcerted, and he smiled sweetly. The other two held their hands behind their backs and continually rubbed them together in gleeful anticipation of a loud quarrel which could only end in their favour. "I mean just what I said", answered Mr. Samsa, and, with his two companions, went in a straight line towards the man. At first, he stood there still, looking at the ground as if the contents of his head were rearranging themselves into new positions. "Alright, we'll go then", he said, and looked up at Mr. Samsa as if he had been suddenly overcome with humility and wanted permission again from Mr. Samsa for his decision. Mr. Samsa merely opened his eyes wide and briefly nodded to him several times. At that, and without delay, the man actually did take long strides into the front hallway; his two friends had stopped rubbing their hands some time before and had been listening to what was being said. Now they jumped off after their friend as if taken with a sudden fear that Mr. Samsa might go into the hallway in front of them and break the connection with their leader. Once there, all three took their hats from the stand, took their sticks from the holder, bowed without a word and left the premises. Mr. Samsa and the two women followed them out onto the landing; but they had had no reason to mistrust the men's intentions and as they leaned over the landing they saw how the three gentlemen made slow but steady progress down the many steps. As they turned the corner on each floor they disappeared and would reappear a few moments later; the further down they went, the more that the Samsa family lost interest in them; when a butcher's boy, proud of posture with his tray on his head, passed them on his way up and came nearer than they were, Mr. Samsa and the women came away from the landing and went, as if relieved, back into the flat.

They decided the best way to make use of that day was for relaxation and to go for a walk; not only had they earned a break from work but they were in serious need of it. So they sat at the table and wrote three letters of excusal, Mr. Samsa to his employers, Mrs. Samsa to her contractor and Grete to her principal. The cleaner came in while they were writing to tell them she was going, she'd finished her work for that morning. The three of them at first just nodded without looking up from what they were writing, and it was only when the cleaner still did not seem to want to leave that they looked up in irritation. "Well?", asked Mr. Samsa. The charwoman stood in the doorway with a smile on her face as if she had some tremendous good news to report, but would only do it if she was clearly asked to. The almost vertical little ostrich feather on her hat, which had been a source of irritation to Mr. Samsa all the time she had been working for them, swayed gently in all directions. "What is it you want then?", asked Mrs. Samsa, whom the cleaner had the most respect for. "Yes", she answered, and broke into a friendly laugh that made her unable to speak straight away, "well then, that thing in there, you needn't worry about how you're going to get rid of it.

That's all been sorted out." Mrs. Samsa and Grete bent down over their letters as if intent on continuing with what they were writing; Mr. Samsa saw that the cleaner wanted to start describing everything in detail but, with outstretched hand, he made it quite clear that she was not to. So, as she was prevented from telling them all about it, she suddenly remembered what a hurry she was in and, clearly peeved, called out "Cheerio then, everyone", turned round sharply and left, slamming the door terribly as she went.

"Tonight she gets sacked", said Mr. Samsa, but he received no reply from either his wife or his daughter as the charwoman seemed to have destroyed the peace they had only just gained. They got up and went over to the window where they remained with their arms around each other. Mr. Samsa twisted round in his chair to look at them and sat there watching for a while. Then he called out: "Come here, then. Let's forget about all that old stuff, shall we. Come and give me a bit of attention". The two women immediately did as he said, hurrying over to him where they kissed him and hugged him and then they quickly finished their letters.

After that, the three of them left the flat together, which was something they had not done for months, and took the tram out to the open country outside the town. They had the tram, filled with warm sunshine, all to themselves. Leant back comfortably on their seats, they discussed their prospects and found that on closer examination they were not at all bad - until then they had never asked each other about their work but all three had jobs which were very good and held particularly good promise for the future. The greatest improvement for the time being, of course, would be achieved quite easily by moving house; what they needed now was a flat that was smaller and cheaper than the current one which had been chosen by Gregor, one that was in a better location and, most of all, more practical. All the time, Grete was becoming livelier. With all the worry they had been having of late her cheeks had become pale, but, while they were talking, Mr. and Mrs. Samsa were struck, almost simultaneously, with the thought of how their daughter was blossoming into a well built and beautiful young lady. They became quieter. Just from each other's glance and almost without knowing it they agreed that it would soon be time to find a good man for her. And, as if in confirmation of their new dreams and good intentions, as soon as they reached their destination Grete was the first to get up and stretch out her young body.

The following sentence, with active links to, or other immediate access to, the full Project Gutenberg-tm License must appear prominently whenever any copy of a Project Gutenberg-tm work (any work on which the phrase "Project Gutenberg" appears, or with which the phrase "Project Gutenberg" is associated) is accessed, displayed, performed, viewed, copied or distributed:

This eBook is for the use of anyone anywhere at no cost and with almost no restrictions whatsoever. You may copy it, give it away or re-use it under the terms of the Project Gutenberg License included with this eBook or online at www.gutenberg.net

1.E.2. If an individual Project Gutenberg-tm electronic work is derived from the public domain (does not contain a notice indicating that it is posted with permission of the copyright holder), the work can be copied and distributed to anyone in the United States without paying any fees or charges. If you are redistributing or providing access to a work with the phrase "Project Gutenberg" associated with or appearing on the work, you must comply either with the requirements of paragraphs 1.E.1 through 1.E.7 or obtain permission for the use of the work and the Project Gutenberg-tm trademark as set forth in paragraphs 1.E.8 or 1.E.9.

1.E.3. If an individual Project Gutenberg-tm electronic work is posted with the permission of the copyright holder, your use and distribution must comply with both paragraphs 1.E.1 through 1.E.7 and any additional terms imposed by the copyright holder. Additional terms will be linked to the Project Gutenberg-tm License for all works posted with the permission of the copyright holder found at the beginning of this work.

1.E.4. Do not unlink or detach or remove the full Project Gutenberg-tm License terms from this work, or any files containing a part of this work or any other work associated with Project Gutenberg-tm.

1.E.5. Do not copy, display, perform, distribute or redistribute this electronic work, or any part of this electronic work, without prominently displaying the sentence set forth in paragraph 1.E.1 with active links or immediate access to the full terms of the Project Gutenberg-tm License.

1.E.6. You may convert to and distribute this work in any binary, compressed, marked up, nonproprietary or proprietary form, including any word processing or hypertext form. However, if you provide access to or distribute copies of a Project Gutenberg-tm work in a format other than "Plain Vanilla ASCII" or other format used in the official version posted on the official Project Gutenberg-tm web site (www.gutenberg.net), you must, at no additional cost, fee or expense to the user, provide a copy, a means of exporting a copy, or a means of obtaining a copy upon request, of the work in its original "Plain Vanilla ASCII" or other form. Any alternate format must include the full Project Gutenberg-tm License as specified in paragraph 1.E.1.

1.E.7. Do not charge a fee for access to, viewing, displaying, performing, copying or distributing any Project Gutenberg-tm works unless you comply with paragraph 1.E.8 or 1.E.9.

1.E.8. You may charge a reasonable fee for copies of or providing access to or distributing Project Gutenberg-tm electronic works provided that

- You provide, in accordance with paragraph 1.F.3, a full refund of any money paid for a work or a replacement copy, if a defect in the electronic work is discovered and reported to you within 90 days of receipt of the work.
- You comply with all other terms of this agreement for free distribution of Project Gutenberg-tm works.

1.E.9. If you wish to charge a fee or distribute a Project Gutenberg-tm electronic work or group of works on different terms than are set forth in this agreement, you must obtain permission in writing from both the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation and Michael Hart, the owner of the Project Gutenberg-tm trademark. Contact the Foundation as set forth in Section 3 below.

1.F.

your equipment.

1.F.2. LIMITED WARRANTY, DISCLAIMER OF DAMAGES - Except for the "Right of Replacement or Refund" described in paragraph 1.F.3, the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, the owner of the Project Gutenberg-tm trademark, and any other party distributing a Project Gutenberg-tm electronic work under this agreement, disclaim all liability to you for damages, costs and expenses, including legal fees. YOU AGREE THAT YOU HAVE NO REMEDIES FOR NEGLIGENCE, STRICT LIABILITY, BREACH OF WARRANTY OR BREACH OF CONTRACT EXCEPT THOSE PROVIDED IN PARAGRAPH F3. YOU AGREE THAT THE FOUNDATION, THE TRADEMARK OWNER, AND ANY DISTRIBUTOR UNDER THIS AGREEMENT WILL NOT BE LIABLE TO YOU FOR ACTUAL, DIRECT, INDIRECT, CONSEQUENTIAL, PUNITIVE OR INCIDENTAL DAMAGES EVEN IF YOU GIVE NOTICE OF THE POSSIBILITY OF SUCH DAMAGE.

1.F.3. LIMITED RIGHT OF REPLACEMENT OR REFUND - If you discover a defect in this electronic work within 90 days of receiving it, you can receive a refund of the money (if any) you paid for it by sending a written explanation to the person you received the work from. If you received the work on a physical medium, you must return the medium with your written explanation. The person or entity that provided you with the defective work may elect to provide a replacement copy in lieu of a refund. If you received the work electronically, the person or entity providing it to you may choose to give you a second opportunity to receive the work electronically in lieu of a refund. If the second copy is also defective, you may demand a refund in writing without further opportunities to fix the problem.

1.F.5. Some states do not allow disclaimers of certain implied warranties or the exclusion or limitation of certain types of damages. If any disclaimer or limitation set forth in this agreement violates the law of the state applicable to this agreement, the agreement shall be interpreted to make the maximum disclaimer or limitation permitted by the applicable state law. The invalidity or unenforceability of any provision of this agreement shall not void the remaining provisions.

that arise directly or indirectly from any of the following which you do or cause to occur: (a) distribution of this or any Project Gutenberg-tm work, (b) alteration, modification, or additions or deletions to any Project Gutenberg-tm work, and (c) any Defect you cause.

Section 2. Information about the Mission of Project Gutenberg-tm

Project Gutenberg-tm is synonymous with the free distribution of electronic works in formats readable by the widest variety of computers including obsolete, old, middle-aged and new computers. It exists because of the efforts of hundreds of volunteers and donations from people in all walks of life.

Section 3. Information about the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation

The Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation is a non profit 501(c)(3) educational corporation organized under the laws of the state of Mississippi and granted tax exempt status by the Internal Revenue Service. The Foundation's EIN or federal tax identification number is 64-6221541. Its 501(c)(3) letter is posted at <http://pglaf.org/fundraising>. Contributions to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation are tax deductible to the full extent permitted by U.S. federal laws and your state's laws.

The Foundation's principal office is located at 4557 Melan Dr. S. Fairbanks, AK, 99712., but its volunteers and employees are scattered throughout numerous locations. Its business office is located at 809 North 1500 West, Salt Lake City, UT 84116, (801) 596-1887, email business@pglaf.org. Email contact links and up to date contact information can be found at the Foundation's web site and official page at <http://pglaf.org>

Project Gutenberg-tm depends upon and cannot survive without wide spread public support and donations to carry out its mission of increasing the number of public domain and licensed works that can be freely distributed in machine readable form accessible by the widest array of equipment including outdated equipment. Many small donations ($1 to $5,000) are particularly important to maintaining tax exempt status with the IRS.

The Foundation is committed to complying with the laws regulating charities and charitable donations in all 50 states of the United States. Compliance requirements are not uniform and it takes a considerable effort, much paperwork and many fees to meet and keep up with these requirements. We do not solicit donations in locations where we have not received written confirmation of compliance. To SEND DONATIONS or determine the status of compliance for any particular state visit <http://pglaf.org>

While we cannot and do not solicit contributions from states where we have not met the solicitation requirements, we know of no prohibition against accepting unsolicited donations from donors in such states who approach us with offers to donate.

International donations are gratefully accepted, but we cannot make any statements concerning tax treatment of donations received from outside the United States. U.S. laws alone swamp our small staff.

Section 5. General Information About Project Gutenberg-tm electronic works.

Professor Michael S. Hart is the originator of the Project Gutenberg-tm concept of a library of electronic works that could be freely shared with anyone. For thirty years, he produced and distributed Project Gutenberg-tm eBooks with only a loose network of volunteer support.

Project Gutenberg-tm eBooks are often created from several printed editions, all of which are confirmed as Public Domain in the U.S. unless a copyright notice is included. Thus, we do not necessarily keep eBooks in compliance with any particular paper edition.

Most people start at our Web site which has the main PG search facility:

This Web site includes information about Project Gutenberg-tm, including how to make donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, how to help produce our new eBooks, and how to subscribe to our email newsletter to hear about new eBooks.

[22]: '/:;=<@\none morning, when gregor samsa woke from troubled dreams, he found\nhimself transformed in his bed into a horrible vermin. he lay on\nhis armour-like back, and if he lifted his head a little he could\nsee his brown belly, slightly domed and divided by arches into stiff\nsections. the bedding was hardly able to cover it and seemed ready\nslide off any moment. his many legs, pitifully thin compared\nwith the size of the rest of him, waved about helplessly as he\nlooked.\n\n"what's happened to me?" he thought. it wasn't a dream. his room,\na proper human room although a little too small, lay peacefully\nbetween its four familiar walls. a collection of textile samples\nlay spread out on the table - samsa was a travelling salesman - and\nabove it there hung a picture that he had recently cut out of an\nillustrated magazine and housed in a nice, gilded frame. it showed\na lady fitted out with a fur hat and fur boa who sat upright,\nraising a heavy fur muff that covered the whole of her lower arm\\ntowards the viewer.\n\ngregor then turned to look out the window at the dull weather.\ndrops of rain could be heard hitting the pane, which made him feel\\nquite sad. "how about if i sleep a little bit longer and forget all\nthis nonsense", he thought, but that was something he was unable to\\ndo because he was used to sleeping on his right, and in his present\\nstate couldn't get into that position. however hard he threw\nhimself onto his right, he always rolled back to where he was. he\\nmust have tried it a hundred times, shut his eyes so that he\\nwouldn't have to look at the floundering legs, and only stopped when\nhe began to feel a mild, dull pain there that he had never felt\\nbefore.\n\n"oh, god", he thought, "what a strenuous career it is that i've\\nchosen! travelling day in and day out. doing business like this\\ntakes much more effort than doing your own business at home, and on\\ntop of that there\\'s the curse of travelling, worries about making\\ntrain connections, bad and irregular food, contact with different\\npeople all the time so that you can never get to know anyone or\\nbecome friendly with them. it can all go to hell!" he felt a\\nslight itch up on his belly; pushed himself slowly up on his back\\ntowards the headboard so that he could lift his head better; found\\nwhere the itch was, and saw that it was covered with lots of little\\nwhite spots which he didn't know what to make of; and when he tried\nto feel the place with one of his legs he drew it quickly back\nbecause as soon as he touched it he was overcome by a cold shudder.\n\nhe slid back into his former position. "getting up early all the\ntime", he thought, "it makes you stupid. you\'ve got to get enough\nsleep. other travelling salesmen live a life of luxury. for\ninstance, whenever i go back to the guest house during the morning\nto copy out the contract, these gentlemen are always still sitting\nthere eating their breakfasts. i ought to just try that with my\nboss; i\'d get kicked out on the spot. but who knows, maybe that\nwould be the best thing for me. if i didn\'t have my parents to\nthink about i\'d have given in my notice a long time ago, i\'d have\ngone up to the boss and told him just what i think, tell him\neverything i would, let him know just what i feel. he\'d fall right\noff his desk! and it\'s a funny sort of business to be sitting up\nthere at your desk, talking down at your subordinates from up there,\nespecially when you have to go right up close because the boss is\nhard of hearing. well, there\'s still some hope; once i\'ve got the\nmoney together to pay off my parents\' debt to him - another five or\nsix years i suppose - that\'s definitely what i\'ll do. that\'s when\ni\'ll make the big change. first of all though, i\'ve got to get up,\nmy train leaves at five." \n\nand he looked over at the alarm clock, ticking on the chest of\nndrawers. "god in heaven!" he thought. it was half past six and the\nhands were quietly moving forwards, it was even later than half\npast, more like quarter to seven. had the alarm clock not rung? he\ncould see from the bed that it had been set for four o\'clock as it\nshould have been; it certainly must have rung. yes, but was it\npossible to quietly sleep through that furniture-rattling noise?\ntrue, he had not slept peacefully, but probably all the more deeply\nbecause of that. what should he do now? the next train went at\nseven; if he were to catch that he would have to rush like mad and\nthe collection of samples was still not packed, and he did not at\nall feel particularly fresh and lively. and even if he did catch\nthe train he would not avoid his boss\'s anger as the office\nassistant would have been there to see the five o\'clock train go, he\nwould have put in his report about gregor\'s not being there a long\ntime ago. the office assistant was the boss\'s man, spineless, and\nwith no understanding. what about if he reported sick? but that\nwould be extremely strained and suspicious as in fifteen years of\nservice gregor had never once yet been ill. his boss would\ncertainly come round with the doctor from the medical insurance\ncompany, accuse his parents of having a lazy son, and accept the\ndoctor\'s recommendation not to make any claim as the doctor believed\nthat no-one was ever ill but that many were workshy. and what\'s\nmore, would he have been entirely wrong in this case? gregor did in\nfact, apart from excessive sleepiness after sleeping for so long,\nfeel completely well and even felt much hungrier than usual.\n\nhe was still hurriedly thinking all this through, unable to decide\nto get out of the bed, when the clock struck quarter to seven.\n\nthere was a cautious knock at the door near his head. "gregor",\nsomebody called - it was his mother - "it\'s quarter to seven.\ndidn\'t you want to go somewhere?" that gentle voice! gregor was\nshocked when he heard his own voice answering, it could hardly be\nrecognised as the voice he had had before. as if from deep\ninside\nhim, there was a painful and uncontrollable squeaking mixed in with\nit, the words could be made out at first but then there was a sort\nof echo which made them unclear, leaving the hearer unsure whether\ne he had heard properly or not. gregor had wanted to give a full\nanswer and explain everything, but in the circumstances contented\nhimself with saying: "yes, mother, yes, thank-you, i'm getting up\nnow." the change in gregor's voice probably could not be noticed\noutside through the wooden door, as his mother was satisfied with\nthis explanation and shuffled away. but this short conversation\nmade the other members of the family aware that gregor, against\ntheir expectations was still at home, and soon his father came\nknocking at one of the side doors, gently, but with his fist.\n"gregor, gregor", he called, "what's wrong?" and after a short\nwhile he called again with a warning deepness in his voice: "gregor!\ngregor!" at the other side door his sister came plaintively:\n"gregor? aren't you well? do you need anything?" gregor answered to\nboth sides: "i'm ready, now", making an effort to remove all the\nstrangeness from his voice by enunciating very carefully and putting\nlong pauses between each, individual word. his father went back to\nhis breakfast, but his sister whispered: "gregor, open the door, i\nbeg of you." gregor, however, had no thought of opening the door,\nand instead congratulated himself for his cautious habit, acquired\nfrom his travelling, of locking all doors at night even when he was\nat home.\nthe first thing he wanted to do was to get up in peace without being\ndisturbed, to get dressed, and most of all to have his breakfast.\nonly then would he consider what to do next, as he was well aware\nthat he would not bring his thoughts to any sensible conclusions by\nlying in bed. he remembered that he had often felt a slight pain in\nbed, perhaps caused by lying awkwardly, but that had always turned\nout to be pure imagination and he wondered how his imaginings would\nslowly resolve themselves today. he did not have the slightest\ndoubt that the change in his voice was nothing more than the first\nsign of a serious cold, which was an occupational hazard for\ntravelling salesmen.\nit was a simple matter to throw off the covers; he only had to blow\nhimself up a little and they fell off by themselves. but it became\ndifficult after that, especially as he was so exceptionally broad.\ne would have used his arms and his hands to push himself up; but\ninstead of them he only had all those little legs continuously\nmoving in different directions, and which he was moreover unable to\ncontrol. if he wanted to bend one of them, then that was the first\nnone that would stretch itself out; and if he finally managed to do\nwhat he wanted with that leg, all the others seemed to be set free\nand would move about painfully. "this is something that can't be\ndone in bed", gregor said to himself, "so don't keep trying to do\nit".\nthe first thing he wanted to do was get the lower part of his body\nout of the bed, but he had never seen this lower part, and could not\nimagine what it looked like; it turned out to be too hard to move;\nit went so slowly; and finally, almost in a frenzy, when he\ncarelessly shoved himself forwards with all the force he could\ngather, he chose the wrong direction, hit hard against the lower\nbedpost, and learned from the burning pain he felt that the lower\npart of his body might well, at present, be the most sensitive.\nso then he tried to get the top part of his body out of the bed\nfirst, carefully turning his head to the side. this he managed\nquite easily, and despite its breadth and its weight, the bulk of\nhis body eventually followed slowly in the direction of the head.\nbut when he had at last got his head out of the bed and into the\nfresh air it occurred to him that if he let himself fall it would be\na miracle if his head were not injured, so he became afraid to carry\npushing himself forward the same way. and he could not knock\nhimself out now at any price; better to stay in bed than lose\nconsciousness.\n\nit took just as much effort to get back to where he had been\nearlier, but when he lay there sighing, and was once more watching\nhis legs as they struggled against each other even harder than\nbefore, if that was possible, he could think of no way of bringing\npeace and order to this chaos. he told himself once more that it\nwas not possible for him to stay in bed and that the most sensible\nthing to do would be to get free of it in whatever way he could at\nwhatever sacrifice. at the same time, though, he did not forget to\nremind himself that calm consideration was much better than rushing\ninto desperate conclusions. at times like this he would direct his\neyes to the window and look out as clearly as he could, but\nunfortunately, even the other side of the narrow street was\nenveloped in morning fog and the view had little confidence or cheer\nto offer him. "seven o'\nclock, already", he said to himself when the\nclock struck again, "seven o'\nclock, and there's still a fog like\nthis." and he lay there quietly a while longer, breathing lightly\nas if he perhaps expected the total stillness to bring things back\nonto their real and natural state.\n\nbut then he said to himself: "before it strikes quarter past seven\ni'll definitely have to have got properly out of bed. and by then\nsomebody will have come round from work to ask what's happened to me\nas well, as they open up at work before seven o'\nclock." and so he\nset himself to the task of swinging the entire length of his body\nout of the bed all at the same time. if he succeeded in falling out\nof bed in this way and kept his head raised as he did so he could\nprobably avoid injuring it. his back seemed to be quite hard,\nand\nnothing would happen to it falling onto the carpet. his\nmain concern was for the loud noise he was bound to make, and which\nnever through all the doors would probably raise concern if not\nalarm. but it was something that had to be risked.\n\nwhen gregor was already sticking half way out of the bed - the new\nmethod was more of a game than an effort, all he had to do was rock\nback and forth - it occurred to him how simple everything would be\nif somebody came to help him. two strong people - he had his father\nand the maid in mind - would have been more than enough; they would\nonly have to push their arms under the dome of his back, peel him\naway from the bed, bend down with the load and then be patient and\ncareful as he swang over onto the floor, where, hopefully, the\nlittle legs would find a use. should he really call for help\nthough, even apart from the fact that all the doors were locked?\ndespite all the difficulty he was in, he could not suppress a smile\nat this thought.\n\nafter a while he had already moved so far across that it would have\nbeen hard for him to keep his balance if he rocked too hard. the\ntime was now ten past seven and he would have to make a final\ndecision very soon. then there was a ring at the door of the flat.\n"that'll be someone from work", he said to himself, and froze very\nstill, although his little legs only became all the more lively as\nthey danced around. for a moment everything remained quiet.\n"they\\'re not opening the door", gregor said to himself, caught in\nsome nonsensical hope. but then of course, the maid\\'s firm steps\\nwent to the door as ever and opened it. gregor only needed to hear\nthe visitor\\'s first words of greeting and he knew who it was - the\\nchief clerk himself. why did gregor have to be the only one\\ncondemned to work for a company where they immediately became highly\\nsuspicious at the slightest shortcoming? were all employees, every\\none of them, louts, was there not one of them who was faithful and\\ndevoted who would go so mad with pangs of conscience that he\\ncouldn\\'t get out of bed if he didn\\'t spend at least a couple of\\nhours in the morning on company business? was it really not enough\\nto let one of the trainees make enquiries - assuming enquiries were\\neven necessary - did the chief clerk have to come himself, and did\\nthey have to show the whole, innocent family that this was so\\nsuspicious that only the chief clerk could be trusted to have the\\nwisdom to investigate it? and more because these thoughts had made\\nhim upset than through any proper decision, he swang himself with\\nall his force out of the bed. there was a loud thump, but it wasn\\'t\\nreally a loud noise. his fall was softened a little by the carpet,\\nand gregor\\'s back was also more elastic than he had thought, which\\nmade the sound muffled and not too noticeable. he had not held his\\nhead carefully enough, though, and hit it as he fell; annoyed and in\\npain, he turned it and rubbed it against the carpet.\n\n"something\\'s fallen down in there", said the chief clerk in the room\\non the left. gregor tried to imagine whether something of the sort\\nthat had happened to him today could ever happen to the chief clerk\\ntoo; you had to concede that it was possible. but as if in gruff\\nreply to this question, the chief clerk\\'s firm footsteps in his\\nhighly polished boots could now be heard in the adjoining room.\nfrom the room on his right, gregor\\'s sister whispered to him to let\\nhim know: "gregor, the chief clerk is here." "yes, i know", said\\ngregor to himself; but without daring to raise his voice loud enough\\nfor his sister to hear him.\n\n"gregor", said his father now from the room to his left, "the chief\\nclerk has come round and wants to know why you didn\\'t leave on the\\nearly train. we don\\'t know what to say to him. and anyway, he\\nwants to speak to you personally. so please open up this door. i\\'m\\nsure he\\'ll be good enough to forgive the untidiness of your room."\nthen the chief clerk called "good morning, mr. samsa". "he isn\\'t\\nwell", said his mother to the chief clerk, while his father\\ncontinued to speak through the door. "he isn\\'t well, please believe\\nme. why else would gregor have missed a train! the lad only ever\\nthinks about the business. it nearly makes me cross the way he\\nnever goes out in the evenings; he\\'s been in town for a week now but\\nstayed home every evening. he sits with us in the kitchen and just\\nreads the paper or studies train timetables. his idea of relaxation\\nis working with his fretsaw. he\\'s made a little frame, for\\ninstance, it only took him two or three evenings, you\\'ll be amazed\\nhow nice it is; it\\'s hanging up in his room; you\\'ll see it as soon\\nas gregor opens the door. anyway, i\\'m glad you\\'re here; we wouldn\\'t\\nhave been able to get gregor to open the door by ourselves; he\\'s so\\nstubborn; and i\\'m sure he isn\\'t well, he said this morning that he\\nis, but he isn\\'t." "i\\'ll be there in a moment", said gregor slowly\\nand thoughtfully, but without moving so that he would not miss any\\nword of the conversation. "well i can't think of any other way of\nexplaining it, mrs. samsa", said the chief clerk, "i hope it's\nnothing serious. but on the other hand, i must say that if we\\npeople in commerce ever become slightly unwell then, fortunately or\\nunfortunately as you like, we simply have to overcome it because of\\nbusiness considerations." "can the chief clerk come in to see you\\nnow then?", asked his father impatiently, knocking at the door\\nagain. "no", said gregor. in the room on his right there followed\\na painful silence; in the room on his left his sister began to cry.\n\\nso why did his sister not go and join the others? she had probably\\nonly just got up and had not even begun to get dressed. and why was\\nshe crying? was it because he had not got up, and had not let the\\nchief clerk in, because he was in danger of losing his job and if\\nthat happened his boss would once more pursue their parents with the\\nsame demands as before? there was no need to worry about things like\\nthat yet. gregor was still there and had not the slightest\\nintention of abandoning his family. for the time being he just lay\\nthere on the carpet, and no-one who knew the condition he was in\\nwould seriously have expected him to let the chief clerk in. it was\\nonly a minor courtesy, and a suitable excuse could easily be\\nfound for it later on, it was not something for which gregor could\\nbe sacked on the spot. and it seemed to gregor much more sensible\\nto leave him now in peace instead of disturbing him with talking at\\nhim and crying. but the others didn\\'t know what was happening, they\\nwere worried, that would excuse their behaviour.\n\\nthe chief clerk now raised his voice, "mr. samsa", he called to him,\n"what is wrong? you barricade yourself in your room, give us no more\\nthan yes or no for an answer, you are causing serious and\\nunnecessary concern to your parents and you fail - and i mention\\nthis just by the way - you fail to carry out your business duties in\\na way that is quite unheard of. i\\'m speaking here on behalf of your\\nparents and of your employer, and really must request a clear and\\nimmediate explanation. i am astonished, quite astonished. i\\nthought i knew you as a calm and sensible person, and now you\\nsuddenly seem to be showing off with peculiar whims. this morning,\\nyour employer did suggest a possible reason for your failure to\\nappear, it\\'s true - it had to do with the money that was recently\\nentrusted to you - but i came near to giving him my word of honour\\nthat that could not be the right explanation. but now that i see\\nyour incomprehensible stubbornness i no longer feel any wish\\nwhatsoever to intercede on your behalf. and nor is your position\\nall that secure. i had originally intended to say all this to you\\nin private, but since you cause me to waste my time here for no good\\nreason i don\\'t see why your parents should not also learn of it.\\nyour turnover has been very unsatisfactory of late; i grant you that\\nit\\'s not the time of year to do especially good business, we\\nrecognise that; but there simply is no time of year to do no\\nbusiness at all, mr. samsa, we cannot allow there to be.\n\\n"but sir", called gregor, beside himself and forgetting all else in\\nthe excitement, "i\\'ll open up immediately, just a moment. i\\'m\\nslightly unwell, an attack of dizziness, i haven\\'t been able to get\\nup. i\\'m still in bed now. i\\'m quite fresh again now, though. i\\'m\\njust getting out of bed. just a moment. be patient! it\\'s not quite\\nas easy as i\\'d thought. i\\'m quite alright now, though. it\\'s\\nshocking, what can suddenly happen to a person! i was quite alright\\nlast night, my parents know about it, perhaps better than me, i had\na small symptom of it last night already. they must have noticed\nit. i don't know why i didn't let you know at work! but you always\nthink you can get over an illness without staying at home. please,\nndon't make my parents suffer! there's no basis for any of the\naccusations you're making; nobody's ever said a word to me about any\nof these things. maybe you haven't read the latest contracts i sent\nin. i'll set off with the eight o'clock train, as well, these few\nhours of rest have given me strength. you don't need to wait, sir;\nni'll be in the office soon after you, and please be so good as to\nntell that to the boss and recommend me to him!"\nand while gregor gushed out these words, hardly knowing what he was\nsaying, he made his way over to the chest of drawers - this was\nneasily done, probably because of the practise he had already had in\nbed - where he now tried to get himself upright. he really did want\nnto open the door, really did want to let them see him and to speak\nwith the chief clerk; the others were being so insistent, and he was\ncurious to learn what they would say when they caught sight of him.\nif they were shocked then it would no longer be gregor's\nresponsibility and he could rest. if, however, they took everything\nncalmly he would still have no reason to be upset, and if he hurried\nhe really could be at the station for eight o'clock. the first few\nntimes he tried to climb up on the smooth chest of drawers he just\nslid down again, but he finally gave himself one last swing and\nstood there upright; the lower part of his body was in serious pain\nbut he no longer gave any attention to it. now he let himself fall\nagainst the back of a nearby chair and held tightly to the edges of\nit with his little legs. by now he had also calmed down, and kept\nquiet so that he could listen to what the chief clerk was saying.\n"did you understand a word of all that?" the chief clerk asked his\nparents, "surely he's not trying to make fools of us". "oh, god!"\ncalled his mother, who was already in tears, "he could be seriously\nill and we're making him suffer. grete! grete!" she then cried.\n"mother?" his sister called from the other side. they communicated\nacross gregor's room. "you'll have to go for the doctor straight\naway. gregor is ill. quick, get the doctor. did you hear the way\ngregor spoke just now?" "that was the voice of an animal", said the\nchief clerk, with a calmness that was in contrast with his mother's\nscreams. "anna! anna!" his father called into the kitchen through\nthe entrance hall, clapping his hands, "get a locksmith here, now!"\nand the two girls, their skirts swishing, immediately ran out\nthrough the hall, wrenching open the front door of the flat as they\nwent. how had his sister managed to get dressed so quickly? there\nwas no sound of the door banging shut again; they must have left it\nopen; people often do in homes where something awful has happened.\nngregor, in contrast, had become much calmer. so they couldn't\nunderstand his words any more, although they seemed clear enough to\nhim, clearer than before - perhaps his ears had become used to the\nsound. they had realised, though, that there was something wrong\nwith him, and were ready to help. the first response to his\nsituation had been confident and wise, and that made him feel\nbetter. he felt that he had been drawn back in among people, and\nfrom the doctor and the locksmith he expected great and surprising\nachievements - although he did not really distinguish one from the\other. whatever was said next would be crucial, so, in order to\make his voice as clear as possible, he coughed a little, but taking\ncare to do this not too loudly as even this might well sound\ndifferent from the way that a human coughs and he was no longer sure\ne could judge this for himself.

meanwhile, it had become very\quiet in the next room. perhaps his parents were sat at the table\whispering with the chief clerk, or perhaps they were all pressed\ngagainst the door and listening.\n\ngregor slowly pushed his way over to the door with the chair. once\nthere he let go of it and threw himself onto the door, holding\nhimself upright against it using the adhesive on the tips of his\nlegs. he rested there a little while to recover from the effort\ninvolved and then set himself to the task of turning the key in the\nlock with his mouth. he seemed, unfortunately, to have no proper\nnteeth - how was he, then, to grasp the key? - but the lack of teeth\nwas, of course, made up for with a very strong jaw; using the jaw,\nhe really was able to start the key turning, ignoring the fact that\nhe must have been causing some kind of damage as a brown fluid came\nfrom his mouth, flowed over the key and dripped onto the floor.\n"listen", said the chief clerk in the next room, "he's turning the\nkey." gregor was greatly encouraged by this; but they all should\nhave been calling to him, his father and his mother too: "well done,\nngregor", they should have cried, "keep at it, keep hold of the\nlock!" and with the idea that they were all excitedly following his\nefforts, he bit on the key with all his strength, paying no\nattention to the pain he was causing himself. as the key turned\nround he turned around the lock with it, only holding himself\nupright with his mouth, and hung onto the key or pushed it down\nagain with the whole weight of his body as needed. the clear sound\nof the lock as it snapped back was gregor's sign that he could break\nhis concentration, and as he regained his breath he said to himself:\n"so, i didn't need the locksmith after all". then he lay his head on\nthe handle of the door to open it completely.\n\nbecause he had to open the door in this way, it was already wide\nopen before he could be seen. he had first to slowly turn himself\naround one of the double doors, and he had to do it very carefully\nif he did not want to fall flat on his back before entering the\nroom. he was still occupied with this difficult movement, unable to\npay attention to anything else, when he heard the chief clerk\nexclaim a loud "oh!", which sounded like the soughing of the wind.\nnow he also saw him - he was the nearest to the door - his hand\npressed against his open mouth and slowly retreating as if driven by\na steady and invisible force. gregor's mother, her hair still\nshevelled from bed despite the chief clerk's being there, looked\nat his father. then she unfolded her arms, took two steps forward\nand sank down onto the floor into her skirts that\nspread themselves out around her as her head disappeared down onto\nher breast. his father looked hostile, and clenched his fists as if\nwanting to knock gregor back into his room. then he looked\nuncertainly round the living room, covered his eyes with his hands\nand wept so that his powerful chest shook.\n\nso gregor did not go into the room, but leant against the inside of\nthe other door which was still held bolted in place. in this way\nonly half of his body could be seen, along with his head above it\nwhich he leant over to one side as he peered out at the others.\nmeanwhile the day had become much lighter; part of the endless, grey-black building on the other side of the street - which was a hospital - could be seen quite clearly with the austere and regular line of windows piercing its facade; the rain was still falling, now throwing down large, individual droplets which hit the ground one at a time. the washing up from breakfast lay on the table; there was so much of it because, for gregor's father, breakfast was the most important meal of the day and he would stretch it out for several hours as he sat reading a number of different newspapers. on the wall exactly opposite there was a photograph of gregor when he was a lieutenant in the army, his sword in his hand and a carefree smile on his face as he called forth respect for his uniform and bearing. the door to the entrance hall was open and as the front door of the flat was also open he could see onto the landing and the stairs where they began their way down below.

room, and rushed forward in\na panic. in the hall, he stretched his right hand far out towards\ntthe stairway as if out there, there were some supernatural force\nwaiting to save him.\n\ngregor realised that it was out of the question to let the chief\nclerk go away in this mood if his position in the firm was not to be\lput into extreme danger. that was something his parents did not\ntunderstand very well; over the years, they had become convinced that\ntthis job would provide for gregor for his entire life, and besides,\ntthey had so much to worry about at present that they had lost sight\nof any thought for the future. gregor, though, did think about the\nfuture. the chief clerk had to be held back, calmed down, convinced\nand finally won over; the future of gregor and his family depended\non it! if only his sister were here! she was clever; she was already\nin tears while gregor was still lying peacefully on his back. and\ntthe chief clerk was a lover of women, surely she could persuade him;\ntshe would close the front door in the entrance hall and talk him out\nof his shocked state. but his sister was not there, gregor would\nhave to do the job himself. and without considering that he still\nwas not familiar with how well he could move about in his present\nstate, or that his speech still might not - or probably would not -\nbbe understood, he let go of the door; pushed himself through the\nopening; tried to reach the chief clerk on the landing who,\nridiculously, was holding on to the banister with both hands; but\ngregor fell immediately over and, with a little scream as he sought\nsomething to hold onto, landed on his numerous little legs. hardly\nhad that happened than, for the first time that day, he began to\nfeel alright with his body; the little legs had the solid ground\nunder them; to his pleasure, they did exactly as he told them; they\nwere even making the effort to carry him where he wanted to go; and\nhe was soon believing that all his sorrows would soon be finally at\nan end. he held back the urge to move but swayed from side to side\nas he crouched there on the floor. his mother was not far away in\nfront of him and seemed, at first, quite engrossed in herself, but\nthen she suddenly jumped up with her arms outstretched and her\nfingers spread shouting: "help, for pity\n's sake, help!" the way she\nheld her head suggested she wanted to see gregor better, but the\nunthinking way she was hurrying backwards showed that she did not;\nshe had forgotten that the table was behind her with all the\nbreakfast things on it; when she reached the table she sat quickly\ndown on it without knowing what she was doing; without even seeming\nto notice that the coffee pot had been knocked over and a gush of\ncoffee was pouring down onto the carpet.\n\n"mother, mother", said gregor gently, looking up at her. he had\ncompletely forgotten the chief clerk for the moment, but could not\nhelp himself snapping in the air with his jaws at the sight of the\nflow of coffee. that set his mother screaming anew, she fled from\nthe table and into the arms of his father as he rushed towards her.\ngregor, though, had no time to spare for his parents now; the chief\nclerk had already reached the stairs; with his chin on the banister,\nhe looked back for the last time. gregor made a run for him; he\nwanted to be sure of reaching him; the chief clerk must have\nexpected something, as he leapt down several steps at once and\ndisappeared; his shouts resounding all around the staircase. the\nflight of the chief clerk seemed, unfortunately, to put gregor\n's\nfather into a panic as well. until then he had been relatively self\ncontrolled, but now, instead of running after the chief clerk\nhimself, or at least not impeding gregor as he ran after him,\ngregor\)'s father seized the chief clerk\)'s stick in his right hand\n(the chief clerk had left it behind on a chair, along with his hat\land overcoat), picked up a large newspaper from the table with his\nleft, and used them to drive gregor back into his room, stamping his\nfoot at him as he went. gregor\)'s appeals to his father were of no\nhelp, his appeals were simply not understood, however much he humbly\nturned his head his father merely stamped his foot all the harder.\nacross the room, despite the chilly weather, gregor\)'s mother had\npulled open a window, leant far out of it and pressed her hands to\nher face. a strong draught of air flew in from the street towards\nthe stairway, the curtains flew up, the newspapers on the table\nfluttered and some of them were blown onto the floor. nothing would\nstop gregor\)'s father as he drove him back, making hissing noises at\nhim like a wild man. gregor had never had any practice in moving\nbackwards and was only able to go very slowly. if gregor had only\nbeen allowed to turn round he would have been back in his room\nstraight away, but he was afraid that if he took the time to do that\nhis father would become impatient, and there was the threat of a\nlethal blow to his back or head from the stick in his father\)'s hand\nany moment. eventually, though, gregor realised that he had no\nchoice as he saw, to his disgust, that he was quite incapable of\nmoving backwards in a straight line; so he began, as quickly as\npossible and with frequent anxious glances at his father, to turn\nhimself round. it went very slowly, but perhaps his father was able\nto see his good intentions as he did nothing to hinder him, in fact\nnow and then he used the tip of his stick to give directions from a\nndistance as to which way to turn. if only his father would stop\nthat unbearable hissing! it was making gregor quite confused. when\nhe had nearly finished turning round, still listening to that\nhissing, he made a mistake and turned himself back a little the way\nhe had just come. he was pleased when he finally had his head in\nfront of the doorway, but then saw that it was too narrow, and his\nbody was too broad to get through it without further difficulty. in\nhis present mood, it obviously did not occur to his father to open\nthe other of the double doors so that gregor would have enough space\nto get through. he was merely fixed on the idea that gregor should\nbe got back into his room as quickly as possible. nor would he ever\nhave allowed gregor the time to get himself upright as preparation\nfor getting through the doorway. what he did, making more noise\nthan ever, was to drive gregor forwards all the harder as if there\nhad been nothing in the way; it sounded to gregor as if there was\nnow more than one father behind him; it was not a pleasant\nexperience, and gregor pushed himself into the doorway without\nregard for what might happen. one side of his body lifted itself,\nhe lay at an angle in the doorway, one flank scraped on the white\nDoor and was painfully injured, leaving vile brown flecks on it,\nonsoon he was stuck fast and would not have been able to move at all\nby himself, the little legs along one side hung quivering in the air\nwhile those on the other side were pressed painfully against the\nground. then his father gave him a hefty shove from behind which\nreleased him from where he was held and sent him flying, and heavily\nbleeding, deep into his room. the door was slammed shut with the\nstick, then, finally, all was quiet.\n\n\n\ni\ni\n\nnit was not until it was getting dark that evening that gregor awoke\nfrom his deep and coma-like sleep. he would have woken soon\nafterwards anyway even if he hadn't been disturbed, as he had had\nenough sleep and felt fully rested. but he had the impression that\nsome hurried steps and the sound of the door leading into the front\nroom being carefully shut had woken him. the light from the\nelectric street lamps shone palely here and there onto the ceiling\nand tops of the furniture, but down below, where gregor was, it was\ndark. he pushed himself over to the door, feeling his way clumsily\nwith his antennae - of which he was now beginning to learn the value\n- in order to see what had been happening there. the whole of his\nleft side seemed like one, painfully stretched scar, and he limped\nbadly on his two rows of legs. one of the legs had been badly\ninjured in the events of that morning - it was nearly a miracle that\nonly one of them had been - and dragged along lifelessly.\n\nit was only when he had reached the door that he realised what it\nactually was that had drawn him over to it; it was the smell of\nsomething to eat. by the door there was a dish filled with\nsweetened milk with little pieces of white bread floating in it. he\nwas so pleased he almost laughed, as he was even hungrier than he\nhad been that morning, and immediately dipped his head into the\nmilk, nearly covering his eyes with it. but he soon drew his head\nback again in disappointment; not only did the pain in his tender\nleft side make it difficult to eat the food - he was only able to\nneat if his whole body worked together as a snuffling whole - but the\nmilk did not taste at all nice. milk like this was normally his\nfavourite drink, and his sister had certainly left it there for him\nbecause of that, but he turned, almost against his own will, away\nfrom the dish and crawled back into the centre of the room.\n\nthrough the crack in the door, gregor could see that the gas had\nbeen lit in the living room. his father at this time would normally\nbe sat with his evening paper, reading it out in a loud voice to\ngregor's mother, and sometimes to his sister, but there was now not\na sound to be heard. gregor's sister would often write and tell him\nabout this reading, but maybe his father had lost the habit in\nrecent times. it was so quiet all around too, even though there\nmust have been somebody in the flat. "what a quiet life it is the\nfamily lead", said gregor to himself, and, gazing into the darkness,\nfelt a great pride that he was able to provide a life like that in\nsuch a nice home for his sister and parents. but what now, if all\nthis peace and wealth and comfort should come to a horrible and\nfrightening end? that was something that gregor did not want to\nthink about too much, so he started to move about, crawling up and\ndown the room.\n\nonce during that long evening, the door on one side of the room was\nopened very slightly and hurriedly closed again; later on the door\non the other side did the same; it seemed that someone needed to\nenter the room but thought better of it. gregor went and waited\nimmediately by the door, resolved either to bring the timorous\nvisitor into the room in some way or at least to find out who it\nwas; but the door was opened no more that night and gregor waited\nin\nvain. the previous morning while the doors were locked everyone had\nwanted to get in there to him, but now, now that he had opened up\nnone of the doors and the other had clearly been unlocked some time\nduring the day, no-one came, and the keys were in the other sides.\n\nit was not until late at night that the gaslight in the living room\nwas put out, and now it was easy to see that his parents and sister had\nstayed awake all that time, as they all could be distinctly heard as\nthey went away together on tip-toe. it was clear that no-one would\ncome into gregor\n's room any more until morning; that gave him plenty\nof time to think undisturbed about how he would have to re-arrange\nhis life. for some reason, the tall, empty room where he was forced\nto remain made him feel uneasy as he lay there flat on the floor,\nthough he had been living in it for five years. hardly aware\nof what he was doing other than a slight feeling of shame, he\nhurried under the couch. it pressed down on his back a little, and\nhe was no longer able to lift his head, but he nonetheless felt\nimmediately at ease and his only regret was that his body was too\nbroad to get it all underneath.\n\nhe spent the whole night there. some of the time he passed in a\nlight sleep, although he frequently woke from it in alarm because of\nhis hunger, and some of the time was spent in worries and vague\nhopes which, however, always led to the same conclusion: for the\ntime being he must remain calm, he must show patience and the\ngreatest consideration so that his family could bear the\nunpleasantness that he, in his present condition, was forced to\nimpose on them.\n\ngregor soon had the opportunity to test the strength of his\ndecisions, as early the next morning, almost before the night had\nended, his sister, nearly fully dressed, opened the door from the\nfront room and looked anxiously in. she did not see him straight\naway, but when she did notice him under the couch - he had to be\nsomewhere, for god\n's sake, he couldn't have flown away - she was so\nshocked that she lost control of herself and slammed the door shut\nagain from outside. but she seemed to regret her behaviour, as she\nopened the door again straight away and came in on tip-toe as if\nentering the room of someone seriously ill or even of a stranger.\ngregor had pushed his head forward, right to the edge of the couch,\nand watched her. would she notice that he had left the milk as it\nwas, realise that it was not from any lack of hunger and bring him\nsome other food that was more suitable? if she didn't do it\nherself he would rather go hungry than draw her attention to it,\nalthough he did feel a terrible urge to rush forward from under the\ncouch, throw himself at his sister\n's feet and beg her for something\ngood to eat. however, his sister noticed the full dish immediately\nand looked at it and the few drops of milk splashed around it with\nsome surprise. she immediately picked it up - using a rag,\nnot her bare hands - and carried it out. gregor was extremely\ncurious as to what she would bring in its place, imagining the\nwildest possibilities, but he never could have guessed what his\nsister, in her goodness, actually did bring. in order to test his\ntaste, she brought him a whole selection of things, all spread out\non an old newspaper. there were old, half-rotten vegetables; bones\nfrom the evening meal, covered in white sauce that had gone hard;\nfew raisins and almonds; some cheese that gregor had declared\ninedible two days before; a dry roll and some bread spread with\nbutter and salt. as well as all that she had poured some water into\nthe dish, which had probably been permanently set aside for gregor\n's\nuse, and placed it beside them. then, out of consideration for\ngregor\n's feelings, as she knew that he would not eat in front of\ner, she hurried out again and even turned the key in the lock so\nthat gregor would know he could make things as comfortable for\nhimself as he liked. gregor's little legs whirred, at last he could\nneat. what's more, his injuries must already have completely healed\nas he found no difficulty in moving. this amazed him, as more than\na month earlier he had cut his finger slightly with a knife, he\nthought of how his finger had still hurt the day before yesterday.\n"am i less sensitive than i used to be, then?", he thought, and was\nalready sucking greedily at the cheese which had immediately, almost\ncompellingly, attracted him much more than the other foods on the\nnewspaper. quickly one after another, his eyes watering with\npleasure, he consumed the cheese, the vegetables and the sauce; the\nfresh foods, on the other hand, he didn't like at all, and even\ndragged the things he did want to eat a little way away from them\nbecause he couldn't stand the smell. long after he had finished\neating and lay lethargic in the same place, his sister slowly turned\nthe key in the lock as a sign to him that he should withdraw. he\nwas immediately startled, although he had been half asleep, and he\nhurried back under the couch. but he needed great self-control to\nstay there even for the short time that his sister was in the room,\nas eating so much food had rounded out his body a little and he\ncould hardly breathe in that narrow space. half suffocating, he\nwatched with bulging eyes as his sister unselfconsciously took a\nbroom and swept up the left-overs, mixing them in with the food he\nhad not even touched at all as if it could not be used any more.\nshe quickly dropped it all into a bin, closed it with its wooden\nlid, and carried everything out. she had hardly turned her back\nbefore gregor came out again from under the couch and stretched\nhimself.\n\nthis was how gregor received his food each day now, once in the\nmorning while his parents and the maid were still asleep, and the\nsecond time after everyone had eaten their meal at midday as his\nparents would sleep for a little while then as well, and gregor's\nsister would send the maid away on some errand. gregor's father and\nmother certainly did not want him to starve either, but perhaps it\nwould have been more than they could stand to have any more\nexperience of his feeding than being told about it, and perhaps his\nsister wanted to spare them what distress she could as they were\nindeed suffering enough.\nit was impossible for gregor to find out what they had told the\ndoctor and the locksmith that first morning to get them out of the\nflat. as nobody could understand him, nobody, not even his sister,\nthought that he could understand them, so he had to be content to\nhear his sister's sighs and appeals to the saints as she moved about\nhis room. it was only later, when she had become a little more used\nto everything - there was, of course, no question of her ever\nbecoming fully used to the situation - that gregor would sometimes\nCatch a friendly comment, or at least a comment that could be\nconstrued as friendly. "he's enjoyed his dinner today", she might\nsay when he had diligently cleared away all the food left for him,\nor if he left most of it, which slowly became more and more\ninfrequent, she would often say, sadly, "now everything's just been\nleft there again".\nalthough gregor wasn't able to hear any news directly he did listen\nto much of what was said in the next rooms, and whenever he heard\nanyone speaking he would scurry straight to the appropriate door and\ncpress his whole body against it. there was seldom any conversation,\nespecially at first, that was not about him in some way, even if\nonly in secret. for two whole days, all the talk at every mealtime\ncwas about what they should do now; but even between meals they spoke\ncabout the same subject as there were always at least two members of\ncthe family at home - nobody wanted to be at home by themselves and\nit was out of the question to leave the flat entirely empty. and on\ncthe very first day the maid had fallen to her knees and begged\ngregor\'s mother to let her go without delay. it was not very clear\ncnow much she knew of what had happened but she left within a quarter\nof an hour, tearfully thanking gregor\'s mother for her dismissal as\nif she had done her an enormous service. she even swore\ncnemphatically not to tell anyone the slightest about what had\nhappened, even though no-one had asked that of her.\nnow gregor\'s sister also had to help his mother with the cooking;\nalthough that was not so much bother as no-one ate very much.\ngregor often heard how one of them would unsuccessfully urge another\nto eat, and receive no more answer than "no thanks, i've had enough"\nor something similar. no-one drank very much either. his sister\ncwould sometimes ask his father whether he would like a beer, hoping\ncfor the chance to go and fetch it herself. when his father then\nsaid nothing she would add, so that he would not feel selfish, that\nshe could send the housekeeper for it, but then his father would\nenclose the matter with a big, loud "no", and no more would be said.\nneven before the first day had come to an end, his father had\nexplained to gregor\'s mother and sister what their finances and\nprospects were. now and then he stood up from the table and took\nsome receipt or document from the little cash box he had saved from\nhis business when it had collapsed five years earlier. gregor heard\nhow he opened the complicated lock and then closed it again after he\nhad taken the item he wanted. what he heard his father say was some\nof the first good news that gregor heard since he had first been\nincarcerated in his room. he had thought that nothing at all\nremained from his father\'s business, at least he had never told him\nanything different, and gregor had never asked him about it anyway.\ntheir business misfortune had reduced the family to a state of total\ndespair, and gregor\'s only concern at that time had been to arrange\nthings so that they could all forget about it as quickly as\npossible. so then he started working especially hard, with a fiery\nvigour that raised him from a junior salesman to a travelling\nrepresentative almost overnight, bringing with it the chance to earn\nmoney in quite different ways. gregor converted his success at work\nstraight into cash that he could lay on the table at home for the\nbenefit of his astonished and delighted family. they had been good\ntimes and they had never come again, at least not with the same\nsplendour, even though gregor had later earned so much that he was\nin a position to bear the costs of the whole family, and did bear\nthem. they had even got used to it, both gregor and the family,\nthey took the money with gratitude and he was glad to provide it,\nalthough there was no longer much warm affection given in return.\ngregor only remained close to his sister now. unlike him, she was\nvery fond of music and a gifted and expressive violinist, it was his\nsecret plan to send her to the conservatory next year even though it\ncould cause great expense that would have to be made up for in some\another way. during gregor\'s short periods in town, conversation with\nhis sister would often turn to the conservatory but it was only ever\ncited as a lovely dream that could never be realised. their\ncparents did not like to hear this innocent talk, but gregor thought\nabout it quite hard and decided he would let them know what he\nplanned with a grand announcement of it on christmas day.\n\nthat was the sort of totally pointless thing that went through his\nmind in his present state, pressed upright against the door and\nlistening. there were times when he simply became too tired to\ncontinue listening, when his head would fall wearily against the\nndoor and he would pull it up again with a start, as even the\nnslightest noise he caused would be heard next door and they would\nall go silent. "what\'s that he\'s doing now", his father would say\nafter a while, clearly having gone over to the door, and only then\nwould the interrupted conversation slowly be taken up again.\n\nwhen explaining things, his father repeated himself several times,\npartly because it was a long time since he had been occupied with\nthese matters himself and partly because gregor\'s mother did not\nunderstand everything the first time. from these repeated explanations\ngregor learned, to his pleasure, that despite all their misfortunes\nthere was still some money available from the old days. it was not\na lot, but it had not been touched in the meantime and some interest\nhad accumulated. besides that, they had not been using up all the\nmoney that gregor had been bringing home every month, keeping only a\nlittle for himself, so that that, too, had been accumulating.\nbbehind the door, gregor nodded with enthusiasm in his pleasure at\nthis unexpected thrift and caution. he could actually have used\nthis surplus money to reduce his father\'s debt to his boss, and the\nday when he could have freed himself from that job would have come\nmuch closer, but now it was certainly better the way his father had\nndone things.\n\nthis money, however, was certainly not enough to enable the family\nto live off the interest; it was enough to maintain them for,\nperhaps, one or two years, no more. that\'s to say, it was money\nthat should not really be touched but set aside for emergencies;\nmoney to live on had to be earned. his father was healthy but old,\nand lacking in self confidence. during the five years that he had\nnot been working - the first holiday in a life that had been full of\nstrain and no success - he had put on a lot of weight and become\nvery slow and clumsy. would gregor\'s elderly mother now have to go\nand earn money? she suffered from asthma and it was a strain for her\njust to move about the home, every other day would be spent\nstruggling for breath on the sofa by the open window. would his\nsister have to go and earn money? she was still a child of\nseventeen, her life up till then had been very enviable, consisting\nof wearing nice clothes, sleeping late, helping out in the business,\njoining in with a few modest pleasures and most of all playing the\nviolin. whenever they began to talk of the need to earn money,\ngregor would always first let go of the door and then throw himself\nonto the cool, leather sofa next to it, as he became quite hot with\nshame and regret.\n\nhe would often lie there the whole night through, not sleeping a\nwink but scratching at the leather for hours on end. or he might go\nonto all the effort of pushing a chair to the window, climbing up onto\nthe sill and, propped up in the chair, leaning on the window to\nstare out of it. he had used to feel a great sense of freedom from\ndoing this, but doing it now was obviously something more remembered\nthan experienced, as what he actually saw in this way was becoming\nless distinct every day, even things that were quite near; he had\nused to curse the ever-present view of the hospital across the\nstreet, but now he could not see it at all, and if he had not known\nthat he lived in charlottenstrasse, which was a quiet street despite\nbeing in the middle of the city, he could have thought that he was\nlooking out the window at a barren waste where the grey sky and the\ngrey earth mingled inseparably. his observant sister only needed to\nnotice the chair twice before she would always push it back to its\nexact position by the window after she had tidied up the room, and\nnever left the inner pane of the window open from then on.\n\nif gregor had only been able to speak to his sister and thank her\nfor all that she had to do for him it would have been easier for him\nto bear it; but as it was it caused him pain. his sister,\nnaturally, tried as far as possible to pretend there was nothing\nburdensome about it, and the longer it went on, of course, the\nbetter she was able to do so, but as time went by gregor was also\nable to see through it all so much better. it had even become very\nunpleasant for him, now, whenever she entered the room. no sooner\nhad she come in than she would quickly close the door as a\nprecaution so that no-one would have to suffer the view into\ngregor's room, then she would go straight to the window and pull it\nhurriedly open almost as if she were suffocating. even if it was\ncold, she would stay at the window breathing deeply for a little\nwhile. she would alarm gregor twice a day with this running about\nand noise making; he would stay under the couch shivering the whole\nwhile, knowing full well that she would certainly have liked to\nspare him this ordeal, but it was impossible for her to be in the\nsame room with him with the windows closed.\n\none day, about a month after gregor's transformation when his sister\nno longer had any particular reason to be shocked at his appearance,\nshe came into the room a little earlier than usual and found him\nstill staring out the window, motionless, and just where he would be\nmost horrible. in itself, his sister's not coming into the room\nwould have been no surprise for gregor as it would have been\ndifficult for her to immediately open the window while he was still\nthere, but not only did she not come in, she went straight back and\nclosed the door behind her, a stranger would have thought he had\nthreatened her and tried to bite her. gregor went straight to hide\nhimself under the couch, of course, but he had to wait until midday\nbefore his sister came back and she seemed much more uneasy than\nusual. it made him realise that she still found his appearance\nunbearable and would continue to do so, she probably even had to\novercome the urge to flee when she saw the little bit of him that\nprotruded from under the couch. one day, in order to spare her even\nthis sight, he spent four hours carrying the bedsheet over to the\ncouch on his back and arranged it so that he was completely covered\nand his sister would not be able to see him even if she bent down.\nif she did not think this sheet was necessary then all she had to do\nwas take it off again, as it was clear enough that it was no\npleasure for gregor to cut himself off so completely. she left the\nsheet where it was. gregor even thought he glimpsed a look of\ngratitude one time when he carefully looked out from under the sheet\nto see how his sister liked the new arrangement.\n\nfor the first fourteen days, gregor\'s parents could not bring\ntthemselves to come into the room to see him. he would often hear\ntthem say how they appreciated all the new work his sister was doing\nneven though, before, they had seen her as a girl who was somewhat\nuseless and frequently been annoyed with her. but now the two of\ntthem, father and mother, would often both wait outside the door of\ngregor\'s room while his sister tidied up in there, and as soon as\nshe went out again she would have to tell them exactly how\neverything looked, what gregor had eaten, how he had behaved this\ntime and whether, perhaps, any slight improvement could be seen.\nthis mother also wanted to go in and visit gregor relatively soon but\nhis father and sister at first persuaded her against it. gregor\nlistened very closely to all this, and approved fully. later,\nthough, she had to be held back by force, which made her call out:\n"let me go and see gregor, he is my unfortunate son! can't you\nunderstand i have to see him?", and gregor would think to himself\nthat maybe it would be better if his mother came in, not every day\nof course, but one day a week, perhaps; she could understand\neverything much better than his sister who, for all her courage, was\nstill just a child after all, and really might not have had an\nadult\'s appreciation of the burdensome job she had taken on.\nngregor\'s wish to see his mother was soon realised. out of\nconsideration for his parents, gregor wanted to avoid being seen at\nthe window during the day, the few square meters of the floor did\nnot give him much room to crawl about, it was hard to just lie\nquietly through the night, his food soon stopped giving him any\npleasure at all, and so, to entertain himself, he got into the habit\nof crawling up and down the walls and ceiling. he was especially\nfond of hanging from the ceiling; it was quite different from lying\non the floor; he could breathe more freely; his body had a light\nswing to it; and up there, relaxed and almost happy, it might happen\nthat he would surprise even himself by letting go of the ceiling and\nlanding on the floor with a crash. but now, of course, he had far\nbetter control of his body than before and, even with a fall as\ngreat as that, caused himself no damage. very soon his sister\nnoticed gregor\'s new way of entertaining himself - he had, after\nall, left traces of the adhesive from his feet as he crawled about -\nand got it into her head to make it as easy as possible for him by\nremoving the furniture that got in his way, especially the chest of\ndrawers and the desk. now, this was not something that she would be\nable to do by herself; she did not dare to ask for help from her\nfather; the sixteen year old maid had carried on bravely since the\ncook had left but she certainly would not have helped in this, she\nhad even asked to be allowed to keep the kitchen locked at all times\nand never to have to open the door unless it was especially\nimportant; so his sister had no choice but to choose some time when\ngregor\'s father was not there and fetch his mother to help her. as\nshe approached the room, gregor could hear his mother express her\njoy, but once at the door she went silent. first, of course, his\nsister came in and looked round to see that everything in the room\nwas alright; and only then did she let her mother enter. gregor had\nhurriedly pulled the sheet down lower over the couch and put more\nfolds into it so that everything really looked as if it had just\nbeen thrown down by chance. gregor also refrained, this time, from\nspying out from under the sheet; he gave up the chance to see his\nmother until later and was simply glad that she had come. "you can\ncome in, he can't be seen", said his sister, obviously leading her\nin by the hand. the old chest of drawers was too heavy for a pair\nof feeble women to be heaving about, but gregor listened as they\npushed it from its place, his sister always taking on the heaviest\npart of the work for herself and ignoring her mother's warnings that\nshe would strain herself. this lasted a very long time. after\nlabouring at it for fifteen minutes or more his mother said it would\nbe better to leave the chest where it was, for one thing it was too\nheavy for them to get the job finished before gregor's father got\nhome and leaving it in the middle of the room it would be in his way\neven more, and for another thing it wasn't even sure that taking the\nfurniture away would really be any help to him. she thought just\nthe opposite; the sight of the bare walls saddened her right to her\nheart; and why wouldn't gregor feel the same way about it, he'd been\nused to this furniture in his room for a long time and it would make\nhim feel abandoned to be in an empty room like that. then, quietly,\nalmost whispering as if wanting gregor (whose whereabouts she did\nnot know) to hear not even the tone of her voice, as she was\nconvinced that he did not understand her words, she added "and by\ntaking the furniture away, won't it seem like we're showing that\nwe've given up all hope of improvement and we're abandoning him to\ncope for himself? i think it'd be best to leave the room exactly the\nway it was before so that when gregor comes back to us again he'll\nfind everything unchanged and he'll be able to forget the time\nin\nbetween all the easier".\nhearing these words from his mother made gregor realise that the\nlack of any direct human communication, along with the monotonous\nlife led by the family during these two months, must have made him\nconfused - he could think of no other way of explaining to himself\nwhy he had seriously wanted his room emptied out. had he really\nwanted to transform his room into a cave, a warm room fitted out\nwith the nice furniture he had inherited? that would have let him\ncrawl around unimpeded in any direction, but it would also have let\nhim quickly forget his past when he had still been human. he had\ncome very close to forgetting, and it had only been the voice of his\nmother, unheard for so long, that had shaken him out of it. nothing\nshould be removed; everything had to stay; he could not do without\nthe good influence the furniture had on his condition; and if the\nfurniture made it difficult for him to crawl about mindlessly that\nwas not a loss but a great advantage.\nhis sister, unfortunately, did not agree; she had become used to the\nidea, not without reason, that she was gregor's spokesman to his\nparents about the things that concerned him. this meant that his\nmother's advice now was sufficient reason for her to insist on\nremoving not only the chest of drawers and the desk, as she had\nthought at first, but all the furniture apart from the all-important\ncouch. it was more than childish perversity, of course, or the\nunexpected confidence she had recently acquired, that made her\ninsist; she had indeed noticed that gregor needed a lot of room to\ncrawl about in, whereas the furniture, as far as anyone could see,\nwas of no use to him at all. girls of that age, though, do become\nenthusiastic about things and feel they must get their way whenever\nthey can. perhaps this was what tempted grete to make gregor\'s\nsituation seem even more shocking than it was so that she could do\nneven more for him. grete would probably be the only one who would\ndare enter a room dominated by gregor crawling about the bare walls\nby himself.\n\nso she refused to let her mother dissuade her. gregor\'s mother\nalready looked uneasy in his room, she soon stopped speaking and\nhelped gregor\'s sister to get the chest of drawers out with what\nstrength she had. the chest of drawers was something that gregor\ncould do without if he had to, but the writing desk had to stay.\nhardly had the two women pushed the chest of drawers, groaning, out\nof the room than gregor poked his head out from under the couch to\nsee what he could do about it. he meant to be as careful and\nconsiderate as he could, but, unfortunately, it was his mother who\ncame back first while grete in the next room had her arms round the\nchest, pushing and pulling at it from side to side by herself\nwithout, of course, moving it an inch. his mother was not used to\nthe sight of gregor, he might have made her ill, so gregor hurried\nbackwards to the far end of the couch. in his startlement, though,\nhe was not able to prevent the sheet at its front from moving a\nlittle. it was enough to attract his mother\'s attention. she stood\nvery still, remained there a moment, and then went back out to\nngrete.\n\ngregor kept trying to assure himself that nothing unusual was\nhappening, it was just a few pieces of furniture being moved after\nall, but he soon had to admit that the women going to and fro, their\nlittle calls to each other, the scraping of the furniture on the\nfloor, all these things made him feel as if he were being assailed\nfrom all sides. with his head and legs pulled in against him and\nhis body pressed to the floor, he was forced to admit to himself\nthat he could not stand all of this much longer. they were emptying\nhis room out; taking away everything that was dear to him; they had\nalready taken out the chest containing his fretsaw and other tools;\nnow they threatened to remove the writing desk with its place\nClearly worn into the floor, the desk where he had done his homework\nas a business trainee, at high school, even while he had been at\ninfant school--he really could not wait any longer to see whether\nthe two women\'s intentions were good. he had nearly forgotten they\nwere there anyway, as they were now too tired to say anything while\nthey worked and he could only hear their feet as they stepped\nheavily on the floor.\n\nso, while the women were leant against the desk in the other room\natching their breath, he sallied out, changed direction four times\nnot knowing what he should save first before his attention was\nsuddenly caught by the picture on the wall - which was already\ndenuded of everything else that had been on it - of the lady dressed\nin copious fur. he hurried up onto the picture and pressed himself\nagainst its glass, it held him firmly and felt good on his hot\nbelly. this picture at least, now totally covered by gregor, would\ncertainly be taken away by no-one. he turned his head to face the\ndoor into the living room so that he could watch the women when they\ncame back.\n\nthey had not allowed themselves a long rest and came back quite\nsoon; grete had put her arm around her mother and was nearly\ncarrying her. "what shall we take now, then?", said grete and\nlooked around. her eyes met those of gregor on the wall. perhaps\nonly because her mother was there, she remained calm, bent her face\nto her so that she would not look round and said, albeit hurriedly\rand with a tremor in her voice: "come on, let\'s go back in the\nliving room for a while?" gregor could see what grete had in mind,\nshe wanted to take her mother somewhere safe and then chase him down\nfrom the wall. well, she could certainly try it! he sat unyielding\non his picture. he would rather jump at grete\'s face.\nbut grete\'s words had made her mother quite worried, she stepped to\none side, saw the enormous brown patch against the flowers of the\nwallpaper, and before she even realised it was gregor that she saw\nscreamed: "oh god, oh god!" arms outstretched, she fell onto the\ncouch as if she had given up everything and stayed there immobile.\n"gregor!" shouted his sister, glowering at him and shaking her fist.\nthat was the first word she had spoken to him directly since his\ntransformation. she ran into the other room to fetch some kind of\nsmelling salts to bring her mother out of her faint; gregor wanted\nto help too - he could save his picture later, although he stuck\nfast to the glass and had to pull himself off by force; then he,\ntoo, ran into the next room as if he could advise his sister like in\nthe old days; but he had to just stand behind her doing nothing; she\nwas looking into various bottles, he startled her when she turned\nround; a bottle fell to the ground and broke; a splinter cut\ngregor\'s face, some kind of caustic medicine splashed all over him;\nnow, without delaying any longer, grete took hold of all the bottles\nshe could and ran with them in to her mother; she slammed the door\nshut with her foot. so now gregor was shut out from his mother,\nwho, because of him, might be near to death; he could not open the\ndoors if he did not want to chase his sister away, and she had to\nstay with his mother; there was nothing for him to do but wait; and,\noppressed with anxiety and self-reproach, he began to crawl about,\nhe crawled over everything, walls, furniture, ceiling, and finally\nin his confusion as the whole room began to spin around him he fell\ndown into the middle of the dinner table.\nhe lay there for a while, numb and immobile, all around him it was\nquiet, maybe that was a good sign. then there was someone at the\ndoors. the maid, of course, had locked herself in her kitchen so\nthat grete would have to go and answer it. his father had arrived\nhome. "what\'s happened?" were his first words; grete\'s appearance\nmust have made everything clear to him. she answered him with\nsubdued voice, and openly pressed her face into his chest: "mother\'s\nfainted, but she\'s better now. gregor got out." "just as i\nexpected", said his father, "just as i always said, but you women\ncouldn\'t listen, would you." it was clear to gregor that grete had\nnot said enough and that his father took it to mean that something\nbad had happened, that he was responsible for some act of violence.\nthat meant gregor would now have to try to calm his father, as he\ndid not have the time to explain things to him even if that had been\npossible. so he fled to the door of his room and pressed himself\nagainst it so that his father, when he came in from the hall,\ncould\nsee straight away that gregor had the best intentions and would go\nback into his room without delay, that it would not be necessary to\ndrive him back but that they had only to open the door and he would\ndisappear.\nhis father, though, was not in the mood to notice subtleties like\nthat; "ah!", he shouted as he came in, sounding as if he were both\nangry and glad at the same time.

gregor drew his head back from the\ndoors and lifted it towards his father. he really had not imagined\nhis father the way he stood there now; of late, with his new habit\nof crawling about, he had neglected to pay attention to what was\ngoing on the rest of the flat the way he had done before. he really\nought to have expected things to have changed, but still, still, was\ntthat really his father? the same tired man as used to be laying\ntthere entombed in his bed when gregor came back from his business\ntrips, who would receive him sitting in the armchair in his\ennightgown when he came back in the evenings; who was hardly even\nable to stand up but, as a sign of his pleasure, would just raise\nhis arms and who, on the couple of times a year when they went for a\newalk together on a sunday or public holiday wrapped up tightly in\nhis overcoat between gregor and his mother, would always labour his\neway forward a little more slowly than them, who were already walking\nslowly for his sake; who would place his stick down carefully and,\nif he wanted to say something would invariably stop and gather his\ncompanions around him. he was standing up straight enough now;\ndressed in a smart blue uniform with gold buttons, the sort worn by\nthe employees at the banking institute; above the high, stiff collar\nof the coat his strong double-chin emerged; under the bushy\neyebrows, his piercing, dark eyes looked out fresh and alert; his\nnormally unkempt white hair was combed down painfully close to his\nscalp. he took his cap, with its gold monogram from, probably, some\nbank, and threw it in an arc right across the room onto the sofa,\nput his hands in his trouser pockets, pushing back the bottom of his\nlong uniform coat, and, with look of determination, walked towards\ngregor. he probably did not even know himself what he had in mind,\nbut nonetheless lifted his feet unusually high. gregor was amazed\nat the enormous size of the soles of his boots, but wasted no time\nwith that - he knew full well, right from the first day of his new\nlife, that his father thought it necessary to always be extremely\nstrict with him. and so he ran up to his father, stopped when his\nfather stopped, scurried forwards again when he moved, even\nslightly. in this way they went round the room several times\nwithout anything decisive happening, without even giving the\nimpression of a chase as everything went so slowly. gregor remained\nall this time on the floor, largely because he feared his father\nmight see it as especially provoking if he fled onto the wall or\nceiling. whatever he did, gregor had to admit that he certainly\nwould not be able to keep up this running about for long, as for\neach step his father took he had to carry out countless movements.\nhe became noticeably short of breath, even in his earlier life his\nlungs had not been very reliable. now, as he lurched about in his\nefforts to muster all the strength he could for running he could\nhardly keep his eyes open; his thoughts became too slow for him to\nthink of any other way of saving himself than running; he almost\nforgot that the walls were there for him to use although, here, they\nwere concealed behind carefully carved furniture full of notches and\nprotrusions - then, right beside him, lightly tossed, something flew\ndown and rolled in front of him. it was an apple; then another one\nimmediately flew at him; gregor froze in shock; there was no longer\nany point in running as his father had decided to bombard him. he\nhad filled his pockets with fruit from the bowl on the sideboard and\nnow, without even taking the time for careful aim, threw one apple\nafter

another. these little, red apples rolled about on the floor, \nknocking into each other as if they had electric motors. an apple\nthrown without much force glanced against gregor\'s back and slid off\nwithout doing any harm. another one however, immediately following\nit, hit squarely and lodged in his back; gregor wanted to drag\nhimself away, as if he could remove the surprising, the incredible\npain by changing his position; but he felt as if nailed to the spot\nand spread himself out, all his senses in confusion. the last thing\nhe saw was the door of his room being pulled open, his sister was\nscreaming, his mother ran out in front of her in her blouse (as his\nsister had taken off some of her clothes after she had fainted to\nmake it easier for her to breathe), she ran to his father, her\nskirts unfastened and sliding one after another to the ground,\nstumbling over the skirts she pushed herself to his father, her arms\naround him, uniting herself with him totally - now gregor lost his\nability to see anything - her hands behind his father\'s head begging\nhim to spare gregor\'s life.\n\n\n\niiii\n\nno-one dared to remove the apple lodged in gregor\'s flesh, so it\nremained there as a visible reminder of his injury. he had suffered\nthere for more than a month, and his condition seemed serious\nenough to remind even his father that gregor, despite his current\nsad and revolting form, was a family member who could not be treated\nas an enemy. on the contrary, as a family there was a duty to\nswallow any revulsion for him and to be patient, just to be patient.\nbecause of his injuries, gregor had lost much of his mobility - probably permanently. he had been reduced to the condition of an\nancient invalid and it took him long, long minutes to crawl across\nhis room - crawling over the ceiling was out of the question - but\nthis deterioration in his condition was fully (in his opinion) made\nup for by the door to the living room being left open every evening.\nhe got into the habit of closely watching it for one or two hours\nbefore it was opened and then, lying in the darkness of his room\nwhere he could not be seen from the living room, he could watch the\nfamily in the light of the dinner table and listen to their\nconversation - with everyone\'s permission, in a way, and thus quite\ndifferently from before.\n\nthey no longer held the lively conversations of earlier times, of\ncourse, the ones that gregor always thought about with longing when\nhe was tired and getting into the damp bed in some small hotel room.\nall of them were usually very quiet nowadays. soon after dinner,\nhis father would go to sleep in his chair; his mother and sister\nwould urge each other to be quiet; his mother, bent deeply under the\nlamp, would sew fancy underwear for a fashion shop; his sister, who\nhad taken a sales job, learned shorthand and french in the evenings\nso that she might be able to get a better position later on.\nsometimes his father would wake up and say to gregor\'s mother\n"you\'re doing so much sewing again today!", as if he did not know\nthat he had been dozing - and then he would go back to sleep again\nwhile mother and sister would exchange a tired grin.\n\nwith a kind of stubbornness, gregor\'s father refused to take his\nuniform off even at home; while his nightgown hung unused on its peg\ngregor\'s father would slumber where he was, fully dressed, as if\nalways ready to serve and expecting to hear the voice of his\nsuperior even here. the uniform had not been new to start with, but\nas a result of this it slowly became even shabbier despite the\nefforts of gregor\'s mother and sister to look after it. gregor\nwould often spend the whole evening looking at all the stains on\nthis coat, with its gold buttons always kept polished and shiny,\nwhile the old man in it would sleep, highly uncomfortable but\npeaceful.\n\nas soon as it struck ten, gregor\n's mother would speak gently to his\nfather to wake him and try to persuade him to go to bed, as he\ncouldn't sleep properly where he was and he really had to get his\nsleep if he was to be up at six to get to work. but since he had\nbeen in work he had become more obstinate and would always insist on\nstaying longer at the table, even though he regularly fell asleep\nand it was then harder than ever to persuade him to exchange the\nchair for his bed. then, however much mother and sister would\nimportune him with little reproaches and warnings he would keep\nslowly shaking his head for a quarter of an hour with his eyes\nclosed and refusing to get up. gregor\n's mother would tug at his\nsleeve, whisper endearments into his ear, gregor\n's sister would\nleave her work to help her mother, but nothing would have any effect\non him. he would just sink deeper into his chair. only when the\ntwo women took him under the arms he would abruptly open his eyes,\nlook at them one after the other and say: "what a life! this is what\npeace i get in my old age!" and supported by the two women he would\nlift himself up carefully as if he were carrying the greatest load\nhimself, let the women take him to the door, send them off and carry\nby himself while gregor\n's mother would throw down her needle and\nhis sister her pen so that they could run after his father and\ncontinue being of help to him.\n\nwho, in this tired and overworked family, would have had time to\ngive more attention to gregor than was absolutely necessary? the\nhousehold budget became even smaller; so now the maid was dismissed;\nan enormous, thick-boned charwoman with white hair that flapped\naround her head came every morning and evening to do the heaviest\nwork; everything else was looked after by gregor\n's mother on top of\nthe large amount of sewing work she did. gregor even learned,\nlistening to the evening conversation about what price they had\nhoped for, that several items of jewellery belonging to the family\nhad been sold, even though both mother and sister had been very fond\nof wearing them at functions and celebrations. but the loudest\ncomplaint was that although the flat was much too big for their\npresent circumstances, they could not move out of it, there was no\nimaginable way of transferring gregor to the new address. he could\nsee quite well, though, that there were more reasons than\nconsideration for him that made it difficult for them to move, it\nwould have been quite easy to transport him in any suitable crate\nwith a few air holes in it; the main thing holding the family back\nfrom their decision to move was much more to do with their total\ndespair, and the thought that they had been struck with a misfortune\nunlike anything experienced by anyone else they knew or were related\nto. they carried out absolutely everything that the world expects\nfrom poor people, gregor\n's father brought bank employees\ntheir\nbreakfast, his mother sacrificed herself by washing clothes\nfor\nstrangers, his sister ran back and forth behind her desk at the\nbehest of the customers, but they just did not have the strength to\ndo any more. and the injury in gregor\n's back began to hurt as much\nas when it was new. after they had come back from taking his father\ninto bed gregor\n's mother and sister would now leave their work where\nit was and sit close together, cheek to cheek; his mother would\npoint to gregor\'s room and say "close that door, grete", and then,\nwhen he was in the dark again, they would sit in the next room and\ntheir tears would mingle, or they would simply sit there staring\ndry-eyed at the table.\nngregor hardly slept at all, either night or day. sometimes he would\nthink of taking over the family\'s affairs, just like before, the\nnext time the door was opened; he had long forgotten about his boss\nand the chief clerk, but they would appear again in his thoughts,\nthe salesmen and the apprentices, that stupid teaboy, two or three\nfriends from other businesses, one of the chambermaids from a\nprovincial hotel, a tender memory that appeared and disappeared\nagain, a cashier from a hat shop for whom his attention had been\nserious but too slow, - all of them appeared to him, mixed together\nwith strangers and others he had forgotten, but instead of helping\nhim and his family they were all of them inaccessible, and he was\n glad when they disappeared. other times he was not at all in the\nmood to look after his family, he was filled with simple rage about\nthe lack of attention he was shown, and although he could think of\nnothing he would have wanted, he made plans of how he could get into\nthe pantry where he could take all the things he was entitled to,\neven if he was not hungry. gregor\'s sister no longer thought about\nhow she could please him but would hurriedly push some food or\nother\ninto his room with her foot before she rushed out to work in the\nmorning and at midday, and in the evening she would sweep it away\nagain with the broom, indifferent as to whether it had been eaten or\nmore often than not - had been left totally untouched. she still\ncleared up the room in the evening, but now she could not have been\nany quicker about it. smears of dirt were left on the walls, here\nand there were little balls of dust and filth. at first, gregor\nwent into one of the worst of these places when his sister arrived\nas a reproach to her, but he could have stayed there for weeks\nwithout his sister doing anything about it; she could see the dirt\nas well as he could but she had simply decided to leave him to it.\nat the same time she became touchy in a way that was quite new for\nher and which everyone in the family understood - cleaning up\nngregor\'s room was for her and her alone. gregor\'s mother did once\nthoroughly clean his room, and needed to use several bucketfuls of\nwater to do it - although that much dampness also made gregor ill\nand he lay flat on the couch, bitter and immobile. but his mother\nwas to be punished still more for what she had done, as hardly had\nhis sister arrived home in the evening than she noticed the change\nin gregor\'s room and, highly aggrieved, ran back into the living\nroom where, despite her mothers raised and imploring hands, she\nbroke into convulsive tears. her father, of course, was startled\nout of his chair and the two parents looked on astonished and\nhelpless; then they, too, became agitated; gregor\'s father, standing\nto the right of his mother, accused her of not leaving the cleaning\nof gregor\'s room to his sister; from her left, gregor\'s sister\nscreamed at her that she was never to clean gregor\'s room again;\nwhile his mother tried to draw his father, who was beside himself\nwith anger, into the bedroom; his sister, quaking with tears,\nthumped on the table with her small fists; and gregor hissed in\nanger that no-one had even thought of closing the door to save him\nthe sight of this and all its

noise.\n\ngregor\'s sister was exhausted from going out to work, and looking\nafter gregor as she had done before was even more work for her, but\nneven so his mother ought certainly not to have taken her place.\ngregor, on the other hand, ought not to be neglected. now, though,\nthe charwoman was here. this elderly widow, with a robust bone\nstructure that made her able to withstand the hardest of things in\nher long life, wasn't really repelled by gregor. just by chance one\nday, rather than any real curiosity, she opened the door to gregor\'s\nroom and found herself face to face with him. he was taken totally\nby surprise, no-one was chasing him but he began to rush to and fro\nwhile she just stood there in amazement with her hands crossed in\nfront of her. from then on she never failed to open the door\nslightly every evening and morning and look briefly in on him. at\nfirst she would call to him as she did so with words that she\nprobably considered friendly, such as "come on then, you old\nndung-beetle!", or "look at the old dung-beetle there!" gregor never\nresponded to being spoken to in that way, but just remained where he\nwas without moving as if the door had never even been opened. if\nonly they had told this charwoman to clean up his room every day\ninstead of letting her disturb him for no reason whenever she felt\nlike it! one day, early in the morning while a heavy rain struck the\nwindowpanes, perhaps indicating that spring was coming, she began to\nspeak to him in that way once again. gregor was so resentful of it\nthat he started to move toward her, he was slow and infirm, but it\nwas like a kind of attack. instead of being afraid, the charwoman\njust lifted up one of the chairs from near the door and stood there\nwith her mouth open, clearly intending not to close her mouth until\nthe chair in her hand had been slammed down into gregor\'s back.\n"aren't you coming any closer, then?", she asked when gregor turned\nround again, and she calmly put the chair back in the corner.\n\ngregor had almost entirely stopped eating. only if he happened to\nfind himself next to the food that had been prepared for him he\nmight take some of it into his mouth to play with it, leave it there\na few hours and then, more often than not, spit it out again. at\nfirst he thought it was distress at the state of his room that\nstopped him eating, but he had soon got used to the changes made\nthere. they had got into the habit of putting things into this room\nthat they had no room for anywhere else, and there were now many\nsuch things as one of the rooms in the flat had been rented out to\nthree gentlemen. these earnest gentlemen - all three of them had\nfull beards, as gregor learned peering through the crack in the door\never day - were painfully insistent on things'\nbeing tidy. this\nmeant not only in their own room but, since they had taken a room in\nthis establishment, in the entire flat and especially in the\nkitchen. unnecessary clutter was something they could not tolerate,\nespecially if it was dirty. they had moreover brought most of their\nown furnishings and equipment with them. for this reason, many\nthings had become superfluous which, although they could not be\nsold, the family did not wish to discard. all these things found\ntheir way into gregor\'s room. the dustbins from the kitchen found\ntheir way in there too. the charwoman was always in a hurry, and\nanything she couldn't use for the time being she would just chuck in\nthere. he, fortunately, would usually see no more than the object\nand the hand that held it. the woman most likely meant to fetch the\ntings back out again when she had time and the opportunity, or to\nthrow everything out in one go, but what actually happened was that\nthey were left where they landed when they had first been thrown\nunless gregor made his way through the junk and moved it somewhere\nelse. at first he moved it because, with no other room free where\nhe could crawl about, he was forced to, but later on he came to\nenjoy it although moving about in that way left him sad and tired to\ndeath, and he would remain immobile for hours afterwards.\n\nthe gentlemen who rented the room would sometimes take their evening\nmeal at home in the living room that was used by everyone, and so\nthe door to this room was often kept closed in the evening. but\ngregor found it easy to give up having the door open, he had, after\nall, often failed to make use of it when it was open and, without\nthe family having noticed it, lain in his room in its darkest\ncorner. one time, though, the charwoman left the door to the living\nroom slightly open, and it remained open when the gentlemen who\nrented the room came in in the evening and the light was put on.\nthey sat up at the table where, formerly, gregor had taken his meals\nwith his father and mother, they unfolded the serviettes and picked\nup their knives and forks. gregor's mother immediately appeared in\nthe doorway with a dish of meat and soon behind her came his sister\nwith a dish piled high with potatoes. the food was steaming, and\nfilled the room with its smell. the gentlemen bent over the dishes\nset in front of them as if they wanted to test the food before\neating it, and the gentleman in the middle, who seemed to count as\nan authority for the other two, did indeed cut off a piece of meat\nwhile it was still in its dish, clearly wishing to establish whether\nit was sufficiently cooked or whether it should be sent back to the\nkitchen. it was to his satisfaction, and gregor's mother and\nsister, who had been looking on anxiously, began to breathe again\nand smiled.\n\nthe family themselves ate in the kitchen. nonetheless, gregor's\nfather came into the living room before he went into the kitchen,\nbowed once with his cap in his hand and did his round of the table.\nthe gentlemen stood as one, and mumbled something into their beards.\nthen, once they were alone, they ate in near perfect silence. it\nseemed remarkable to gregor that above all the various noises of\neating their chewing teeth could still be heard, as if they had\nwanted to show gregor that you need teeth in order to eat and it was\nnot possible to perform anything with jaws that are toothless\nhowever nice they might be. "i'd like to eat something", said\ngregor anxiously, "but not anything like they're eating. they do\nfeed themselves. and here i am, dying!"\n\nthroughout all this time, gregor could not remember having heard the\nviolin being played, but this evening it began to be heard from the\nkitchen. the three gentlemen had already finished their meal, the\nnone in the middle had produced a newspaper, given a page to each of\nthe others, and now they leant back in their chairs reading them and\nsmoking. when the violin began playing they became attentive, stood\nup and went on tip-toe over to the door of the hallway where they\nstood pressed against each other. someone must have heard them in\nthe kitchen, as gregor's father called out: "is the playing perhaps\nunpleasant for the gentlemen? we can stop it straight away." "on\nthe contrary", said the middle gentleman, "would the young lady not\nlike to come in and play for us here in the room, where it is, after\ndl, much more cosy and comfortable?" "oh yes, we\'d love to", \ncalled back gregor\'s father as if he had been the violin player\nhimself. the gentlemen stepped back into the room and waited.\ngregor\'s father soon appeared with the music stand, his mother with\nthe music and his sister with the violin. she calmly prepared\neverything for her to begin playing; his parents, who had never\nrented a room out before and therefore showed an exaggerated\ncourtesy towards the three gentlemen, did not even dare to sit on\ntheir own chairs; his father leant against the door with his right\nhand pushed in between two buttons on his uniform coat; his mother,\nthough, was offered a seat by one of the gentlemen and sat - leaving\nthe chair where the gentleman happened to have placed it - out of\nthe way in a corner.\n\nhis sister began to play; father and mother paid close attention,\nnone on each side, to the movements of her hands. drawn in by the\nplaying, gregor had dared to come forward a little and already had\nhis head in the living room. before, he had taken great pride in\nhow considerate he was but now it hardly occurred to him that he had\nbecome so thoughtless about the others. what\'s more, there was now\nall the more reason to keep himself hidden as he was covered in the\ndust that lay everywhere in his room and flew up at the slightest\nmovement; he carried threads, hairs, and remains of food about on\nhis back and sides; he was much too indifferent to everything now to\nlay on his back and wipe himself on the carpet like he had used to\ndo several times a day. and despite this condition, he was not too\nshy to move forward a little onto the immaculate floor of the living\nroom.\n\nno-one noticed him, though. the family was totally preoccupied with\nthe violin playing; at first, the three gentlemen had put their\nhands in their pockets and come up far too close behind the music\nstand to look at all the notes being played, and they must have\ndisturbed gregor\'s sister, but soon, in contrast with the family,\nthey withdrew back to the window with their heads sunk and talking\nto each other at half volume, and they stayed by the window while\ngregor\'s father observed them anxiously. it really now seemed very\nobvious that they had expected to hear some beautiful or\nentertaining violin playing but had been disappointed, that they had\nhad enough of the whole performance and it was only now out of\npoliteness that they allowed their peace to be disturbed. it was\nespecially unnerving, the way they all blew the smoke from their\ncigarettes upwards from their mouth and noses. yet gregor\'s sister\nwas playing so beautifully. her face was leant to one side,\nfollowing the lines of music with a careful and melancholy\nexpression. gregor crawled a little further forward, keeping his\nhead close to the ground so that he could meet her eyes if the\nchance came. was he an animal if music could captivate him so? it\nseemed to him that he was being shown the way to the unknown\nnourishment he had been yearning for. he was determined to make his\nway forward to his sister and tug at her skirt to show her she might\ncome into his room with her violin, as no-one appreciated her\nplaying here as much as he would. he never wanted to let her out of\nhis room, not while he lived, anyway; his shocking appearance\nshould, for once, be of some use to him; he wanted to be at every\ndoors of his room at once to hiss and spit at the attackers; his\nsister should not be forced to stay with him, though, but stay of\her own free will; she would sit beside him on the couch with her\near bent down to him while he told her how he had always intended to\nsend her to the conservatory, how he would have told everyone about\nit last christmas - had christmas really come and gone already? - if\nthis misfortune hadn\t got in the way, and refuse to let anyone\ndissuade him from it. on hearing all this, his sister would break\nout in tears of emotion, and gregor would climb up to her shoulder\nand kiss her neck, which, since she had been going out to work, she\nhad kept free without any necklace or collar.\n\n"mr. samsa!", shouted the middle gentleman to gregor\n's father,\npointing, without wasting any more words, with his forefinger at\ngregor as he slowly moved forward. the violin went silent, the\nmiddle of the three gentlemen first smiled at his two friends,\nshaking his head, and then looked back at gregor. his father seemed\nnto think it more important to calm the three gentlemen before\nDriving gregor out, even though they were not at all upset and\nseemed to think gregor was more entertaining than the violin playing\nhad been. he rushed up to them with his arms spread out and\nattempted to drive them back into their room at the same time as\ntrying to block their view of gregor with his body. now they did\nbecome a little annoyed, and it was not clear whether it was his\nfather\n's behaviour that annoyed them or the dawning realisation that\nthey had had a neighbour like gregor in the next room without\nknowing it. they asked gregor\n's father for explanations, raised\ntheir arms like he had, tugged excitedly at their beards and moved\nback towards their room only very slowly. meanwhile gregor\n's sister\nhad overcome the despair she had fallen into when her playing was\nsuddenly interrupted. she had let her hands drop and let violin and\nbow hang limply for a while but continued to look at the music as if\nstill playing, but then she suddenly pulled herself together, lay\nthe instrument on her mother\n's lap who still sat laboriously\nstruggling for breath where she was, and ran into the next room\nwhich, under pressure from her father, the three gentlemen were more\nquickly moving toward. under his sister\n's experienced hand, the\npillows and covers on the beds flew up and were put into order and\nshe had already finished making the beds and slipped out again\nbefore the three gentlemen had reached the room. gregor\n's father\nseemed so obsessed with what he was doing that he forgot all the\nrespect he owed to his tenants. he urged them and pressed them\nuntil, when he was already at the door of the room, the middle of\nthe three gentlemen shouted like thunder and stamped his foot and\nthereby brought gregor\n's father to a halt. "i declare here and\nnow", he said, raising his hand and glancing at gregor\n's mother and\nsister to gain their attention too, "that with regard to the\nrepugnant conditions that prevail in this flat and with this family"\nhere he looked briefly but decisively at the floor - "i give\nimmediate notice on my room. for the days that i have been living\nhere i will, of course, pay nothing at all, on the contrary i will\nconsider whether to proceed with some kind of action for damages\nfrom you, and believe me it would be very easy to set out the\ngrounds for such an action." he was silent and looked straight\nahead as if waiting for something. and indeed, his two friends\njoined in with the words: "and we also give immediate notice." with\nthat, he took hold of the door handle and slammed the door.\n\ngregor\n's father staggered back to his seat, feeling his way with his hands, and fell into it; it looked as if he was stretching himself out for his usual evening nap but from the uncontrolled way his head kept nodding it could be seen that he was not sleeping at all. Throughout all this, gregor had lain still where the three gentlemen had first seen him. his disappointment at the failure of his plan, and perhaps also because he was weak from hunger, made it impossible for him to move. he was sure that everyone would turn on him any moment, and he waited. he was not even startled out of this state when the violin on his mother's lap fell from her trembling fingers and landed loudly on the floor.

"father, mother", said his sister, hitting the table with her hand as introduction, "we can't carry on like this. maybe you can't see it, but i can. i don't want to call this monster my brother, all i can say is: we have to try and get rid of it. we've done all that's unhumanly possible to look after it and be patient, i don't think anyone could accuse us of doing anything wrong."

"she's absolutely right", said gregor's father to himself. his mother, who still had not had time to catch her breath, began to cough dully, her hand held out in front of her and a deranged expression in her eyes.

gregor's sister rushed to his mother and put her hand on her forehead. her words seemed to give gregor's father some more indefinite ideas. he sat upright, played with his uniform cap between the plates left by the three gentlemen after their meal, and occasionally looked down at gregor as he lay there immobile.

"we have to try and get rid of it", said gregor's sister, now speaking only to her father, as her mother was too occupied with coughing to listen, "it'll be the death of both of you, i can see it coming. we can't all work as hard as we have to and then come home to be tortured like this, we can't endure it. i can't endure it anymore." and she broke out so heavily in tears that they flowed down the face of her mother, and she wiped them away with mechanical hand movements.

"my child", said her father with sympathy and obvious understanding,

"what are we to do?"

his sister just shrugged her shoulders as a sign of the helplessness and tears that had taken hold of her, displacing her earlier uncertainty.

"if he could just understand us", said his father almost as a question; his sister shook her hand vigorously through her tears as a sign that of that there was no question.

"if he could just understand us", repeated gregor's father, closing his eyes in acceptance of his sister's certainty that that was quite impossible, "then perhaps we could come to some kind of arrangement with him. but as it is ..." "it's got to go", shouted his sister, "that's the only way, father. you've got to get rid of the idea that that's gregor. we've only harmed ourselves by believing it for so long. how can that be gregor? if it were gregor he would have seen long ago that it's not possible for human beings to live with an animal like that and he would have gone of his own free will. we wouldn't have a brother any more, then, but we could carry on with our lives and remember him with respect. as it is this animal is persecuting us, it's driven out our tenants, it obviously wants to take over the whole flat and force us to sleep on the streets. father, look, just look", she suddenly screamed, "he's starting again!" in her alarm, which was totally beyond gregor's comprehension, his sister

even\abandoned his mother as she pushed herself vigorously out of her\nchair as if more willing to sacrifice her own mother than stay\nanywhere near gregor. she rushed over to behind her father, who had\nbecome excited merely because she was and stood up half raising his\nhands in front of gregor\'s sister as if to protect her.\nbut gregor had had no intention of frightening anyone, least of all\nhis sister. all he had done was begin to turn round so that he\ncould go back into his room, although that was in itself quite\nstartling as his pain-wracked condition meant that turning round\nrequired a great deal of effort and he was using his head to help\nhimself do it, repeatedly raising it and striking it against the\nfloor. he stopped and looked round. they seemed to have realised\nhis good intention and had only been alarmed briefly. now they all\nlooked at him in unhappy silence. his mother lay in her chair with\nher legs stretched out and pressed against each other, her eyes\nnearly closed with exhaustion; his sister sat next to his father\nwith her arms around his neck.\n"maybe now they'll let me turn round", thought gregor and went back\ninto work. he could not help panting loudly with the effort and had\nsometimes to stop and take a rest. no-one was making him rush any\nmore, everything was left up to him. as soon as he had finally\nfinished turning round he began to move straight ahead. he was\namazed at the great distance that separated him from his room, and\ncould not understand how he had covered that distance in his weak\nstate a little while before and almost without noticing it. he\nconcentrated on crawling as fast as he could and hardly noticed that\nthere was not a word, not any cry, from his family to distract him.\nhe did not turn his head until he had reached the doorway. he did\nnot turn it all the way round as he felt his neck becoming stiff,\nbut it was nonetheless enough to see that nothing behind him had\nchanged, only his sister had stood up. with his last glance he saw\nthat his mother had now fallen completely asleep.\nhe was hardly inside his room before the door was hurriedly shut,\nbolted and locked. the sudden noise behind gregor so startled him\nthat his little legs collapsed under him. it was his sister who had\nbeen in so much of a rush. she had been standing there waiting and\nsprung forward lightly, gregor had not heard her coming at all, and\nas she turned the key in the lock she said loudly to her parents "at\nlast!".\n"what now, then?", gregor asked himself as he looked round in the\ndarkness. he soon made the discovery that he could no longer move\nat all. this was no surprise to him, it seemed rather that being\nable to actually move around on those spindly little legs until then\nwas unnatural. he also felt relatively comfortable. it is true\nthat his entire body was aching, but the pain seemed to be slowly\ngetting weaker and weaker and would finally disappear altogether.\nhe could already hardly feel the decayed apple in his back or the\ninflamed area around it, which was entirely covered in white dust.\nhe thought back of his family with emotion and love. if it was\nimpossible, he felt that he must go away even more strongly than his\nsister. he remained in this state of empty and peaceful rumination\nuntil he heard the clock tower strike three in the morning. he\nwatched as it slowly began to get light everywhere outside the\nwindow too. then, without his willing it, his head sank down\ncompletely, and his last breath flowed weakly from his nostrils.\nwhen the cleaner came in early in the morning - they'd often asked her not to keep slamming the doors but with her strength and in her hurry she still did, so that everyone in the flat knew when she'd arrived and from then on it was impossible to sleep in peace - she made her usual brief look in on gregor and at first found nothing special. she thought he was laying there so still on purpose, playing the martyr; she attributed all possible understanding to him. she happened to be holding the long broom in her hand, so she tried to tickle gregor with it from the doorway. when she had no success with that she tried to make a nuisance of herself and poked at him a little, and only when she found she could shove him across the floor with no resistance at all did she start to pay attention. she soon realised what had really happened, opened her eyes wide, whistled to herself, but did not waste time to yank open the bedroom doors and shout loudly into the darkness of the bedrooms: "come and have a look at this, it's dead, just lying there, stone dead!" nmr. and mrs. samsa sat upright there in their marriage bed and had to make an effort to get over the shock caused by the cleaner before they could grasp what she was saying. but then, each from his own inside, they hurried out of bed. mr. samsa threw the blanket over his shoulders, mrs. samsa just came out in her nightdress; and that is how they went into gregor's room. on the way they opened the door onto the living room where grete had been sleeping since the three gentlemen had moved in; she was fully dressed as if she had never been asleep, and the paleness of her face seemed to confirm this. "dead?", asked mrs. samsa, looking at the charwoman enquiringly, even though she could have checked for herself and could have known it even without checking. "that's what i said", replied the cleaner, and to prove it she gave gregor's body another shove with the broom, sending it sideways across the floor. mrs. samsa made a movement as if she wanted to hold back the broom, but did not complete it. "now then", said mr. samsa, "let's give thanks to god for that". he crossed himself, and the three women followed his example. grete, who had not taken her eyes from the corpse, said: "just look how thin he was. he didn't eat anything for so long. the food came out again just the same as when it went in". gregor's body was indeed completely dried up and flat, they had not seen it until then, but now he was not lifted up on his little legs, nor did he do anything to make them look away. "grete, come with us in here for a little while", said mrs. samsa with a pained smile, and grete followed her parents into the bedroom but not without looking back at the body. the cleaner shut the door and opened the window wide. although it was still early in the morning the fresh air had something of warmth mixed in with it. it was already the end of march, after all. the three gentlemen stepped out of their room and looked round in amazement for their breakfasts; they had been forgotten about. "where is our breakfast?", the middle gentleman asked the cleaner irritably. she just put her finger on her lips and made a quick and silent sign to the men that they might like to come into gregor's room. they did so, and stood around gregor's corpse with their hands in the pockets of their well-worn coats. it was now quite light in the room. then the door of the bedroom opened and mr. samsa appeared in his uniform with his wife on one arm and his daughter on the other. all of them had been crying a little; grete now and then pressed her\ncface against her father\'s arm.\n\n"leave my home. now!", said mr. samsa, indicating the door and\nwithout letting the women from him. "what do you mean?", asked the\nmiddle of the three gentlemen somewhat disconcerted, and he smiled\nsweetly. the other two held their hands behind their backs and\ncontinually rubbed them together in gleeful anticipation of a loud\nquarrel which could only end in their favour. "i mean just what i\nsaid", answered mr. samsa, and, with his two companions, went in a\nstraight line towards the man. at first, he stood there still,\nlooking at the ground as if the contents of his head were\nrearranging themselves into new positions. "alright, we'll go\nthen", he said, and looked up at mr. samsa as if he had been\nsuddenly overcome with humility and wanted permission again from\nmr. samsa for his decision. mr. samsa merely opened his eyes wide\nand briefly nodded to him several times. at that, and without\ndelay, the man actually did take long strides into the front\nhallway; his two friends had stopped rubbing their hands some time\nbefore and had been listening to what was being said. now they\njumped off after their friend as if taken with a sudden fear that\nmr. samsa might go into the hallway in front of them and break the\nconnection with their leader. once there, all three took their hats\nfrom the stand, took their sticks from the holder, bowed without a\nword and left the premises. mr. samsa and the two women followed\nthem out onto the landing; but they had had no reason to mistrust\nthe men's intentions and as they leaned over the landing they saw how\nthe three gentlemen made slow but steady progress down the many\nsteps. as they turned the corner on each floor they disappeared and\nwould reappear a few moments later; the further down they went, the\nmore that the samsa family lost interest in them; when a butcher'\nsboy, proud of posture with his tray on his head, passed them on his\nway up and came nearer than they were, mr. samsa and the women came\naway from the landing and went, as if relieved, back into the flat.\nthey decided the best way to make use of that day was for relaxation\nand to go for a walk; not only had they earned a break from work but\nthey were in serious need of it. so they sat at the table and wrote\nthree letters of excusal, mr. samsa to his employers, mrs. samsa\nonto her contractor and grete to her principal. the cleaner came in\nwhile they were writing to tell them she was going, she'd finished\nher work for that morning. the three of them at first just nodded\nwithout looking up from what they were writing, and it was only when\nthe cleaner still did not seem to want to leave that they looked up\nin irritation. "well?", asked mr. samsa. the charwoman stood in\nthe doorway with a smile on her face as if she had some tremendous\ngood news to report, but would only do it if she was clearly asked\nonto. the almost vertical little ostrich feather on her hat, which\nhad been a source of irritation to mr. samsa all the time she had\nbeen working for them, swayed gently in all directions. "what is it\nyou want then?", asked mrs. samsa, whom the cleaner had the most\nrespect for. "yes", she answered, and broke into a friendly laugh\nthat made her unable to speak straight away, "well then, that thing\nin there, you needn't worry about how you're going to get rid of it.\nthat's all been sorted out." mrs. samsa and grete bent down over\ntheir letters as if intent on continuing with what they were\nwriting; mr. samsa saw that the cleaner wanted to start describing\neverything in detail

but, with outstretched hand, he made it quite\nclear that she was not to. so, as she was prevented from telling\nthem all about it, she suddenly remembered what a hurry she was in\nand, clearly peeved, called out "cheerio then, everyone", turned\nround sharply and left, slamming the door terribly as she went.\n\n"tonight she gets sacked", said mr. samsa, but he received no reply\nfrom either his wife or his daughter as the charwoman seemed to have\ndestroyed the peace they had only just gained. they got up and went\nover to the window where they remained with their arms around each\nother. mr. samsa twisted round in his chair to look at them and sat\nthere watching for a while. then he called out: "come here, then.\nlet's forget about all that old stuff, shall we. come and give me a\nbit of attention". the two women immediately did as he said,\nhurrying over to him where they kissed him and hugged him and then\nthey quickly finished their letters.\n\nafter that, the three of them left the flat together, which was\nsomething they had not done for months, and took the tram out to the\nopen country outside the town. they had the tram, filled with warm\nsunshine, all to themselves. leant back comfortably on their seats,\nthey discussed their prospects and found that on closer examination\nthey were not at all bad - until then they had never asked each\nother about their work but all three had jobs which were very good\nand held particularly good promise for the future. the greatest\nimprovement for the time being, of course, would be achieved quite\nreadily by moving house; what they needed now was a flat that was\nsmaller and cheaper than the current one which had been chosen by\nngregor, one that was in a better location and, most of all, more\npractical. all the time, grete was becoming livelier. with all the\nworry they had been having of late her cheeks had become pale, but,\nwhile they were talking, mr. and mrs. samsa were struck, almost\nsimultaneously, with the thought of how their daughter was\nblossoming into a well built and beautiful young lady. they became\nquieter. just from each other's glance and almost without knowing\nit they agreed that it would soon be time to find a good man for\nher. and, as if in confirmation of their new dreams and good\nintentions, as soon as they reached their destination grete was the\nfirst to get up and stretch out her young body.\n\n*** end of the project gutenberg ebook of metamorphosis, by franz kafka\ntranslated by david wyllie.\n\n*** end of this project gutenberg ebook metamorphosis ***\n\nthis file should be named 5200.txt or 5200.zip\n\nthis and all associated files of various formats will be found in:\n\nhttp://www.gutenberg.net/5/2/0/5200/\n\nupdated editions will replace the previous one--the old editions\nwill be renamed.\n\ncreating the works from public domain print editions means that no\none owns a united states copyright in these works, so the foundation\n(and you!) can copy and distribute it in the united states without\npermission and without paying copyright royalties.\n\nspecial rules, set forth in the general terms of use part of this license,\napply to\ncopying and distributing project gutenberg-tm electronic works\nto\nprotect the project gutenberg-tm concept and trademark. project\ngutenberg is a registered trademark, and may not be used if you\ncharge for the ebooks, unless you receive specific permission. if you\ndo not charge anything for copies of this ebook, complying with the\nrules is very easy. you may use this you agree that you have no remedies for negligence, strict liability, breach of warranty or breach of contract except those provided in paragraph f3. you agree that the foundation, the trademark owner, and any distributor under this agreement will not be liable to you for actual, direct, indirect, consequential, punitive or incidental damages even if you give notice of the possibility of such damage.

f.3. limited right of replacement or refund - if you discover a defect in this electronic work within 90 days of receiving it, you can receive a refund of the money (if any) you paid for it by sending a written explanation to the person you received the work from. if you received the work on a physical medium, you must return the medium with your written explanation. the person or entity that provided you with the defective work may elect to provide a replacement copy in lieu of a refund. if you received the work electronically, the person or entity providing it to you may choose to give you a second opportunity to receive the work electronically in lieu of a refund. if the second copy is also defective, you may demand a refund in writing without further opportunities to fix the problem.

f.4. except for the limited right of replacement or refund set forth in paragraph 1.f.3, this work is provided to you 'as-is,' with no other warranties of any kind, express or implied, including but not limited to warranties of merchantability or fitness for any purpose.

f.5. some states do not allow disclaimers of certain implied warranties or the exclusion or limitation of certain types of damages. if any disclaimer or limitation set forth in this agreement violates the law of the state applicable to this agreement, the agreement shall be interpreted to make the maximum disclaimer or limitation permitted by the applicable state law. the invalidity or unenforceability of any provision of this agreement shall not void the remaining provisions.

f.6. indemnity - you agree to indemnify and hold the foundation, the trademark owner, any agent or employee of the foundation, anyone providing copies of project gutenberg-tm electronic works in accordance with this agreement, and any volunteers associated with the production, promotion and distribution of project gutenberg-tm electronic works, harmless from all liability, costs and expenses, including legal fees, that arise directly or indirectly from any of the following which you do nor cause to occur: (a) distribution of this or any project gutenberg-tm work, (b) alteration, modification, or additions or deletions to any project gutenberg-tm work, and (c) any defect you cause.

project gutenberg-tm is synonymous with the free distribution of electronic works in formats readable by the widest variety of computers including obsolete, old, middle-aged and new computers. it exists because of the efforts of hundreds of volunteers and donations from people in all walks of life. volunteers and financial support to provide volunteers with the assistance they need, is critical to reaching project gutenberg-tm's goals and ensuring that the project gutenberg-tm collection will remain freely available for generations to come. in 2001, the project gutenberg literary archive foundation was created to provide a secure and permanent future for project gutenberg-tm and future

[23]: '/:;<=@\nOne morning, when Gregor Samsa woke from troubled dreams, he found\nhimself transformed in his bed into a horrible vermin. He lay on\nhis armour-like back, and if he lifted his head a little he could\nsee his brown belly, slightly domed and divided by arches into stiff\nsections. The bedding was hardly able to cover it and seemed ready\nto slide off any moment. His many legs, pitifully thin compared\nwith the size of the rest of him, waved about helplessly as he\nlooked.\n\n"What's happened to me?" he thought. It wasn't a dream. His room,\na proper human room although a little too small, lay peacefully\nbetween its four familiar walls. A collection of textile samples\nlay spread out on the table - Samsa was a travelling salesman - and\nabove it there hung a picture that he had recently cut out of an\nillustrated magazine and housed in a nice, gilded frame. It showed\na lady fitted out with a fur hat and fur boa who sat upright,\nraising a heavy fur muff that covered the whole of her lower arm\towards the viewer.\n\nGregor then turned to look out the window at the dull weather.\nDrops of rain could be heard hitting the pane, which made him feel\nquite sad. "How about if I sleep a little bit longer and forget all\nthis nonsense", he thought, but that was something he was unable to\ndo because he was used to sleeping on his right, and in his present\nstate couldn't get into that position. However hard he threw\nhimself onto his right, he always rolled back to where he was. He\nmust have tried it a hundred times, shut his eyes so that he\ncouldn't have to look at the floundering legs, and only stopped when\nhe began to feel a mild, dull pain there that he had never felt\nbefore.\n\n"Oh, God", he thought, "what a strenuous career it is that I've\nchosen! Travelling day in and day out. Doing business like this\ntakes much more effort than doing your own business at home, and\non top of that there's the curse of travelling, worries about making\ntrain connections, bad and irregular food, contact with different\npeople all the time so that you can never get to know anyone or\nbecome friendly with them. It can all go to Hell!" He felt a slight itch\nup on his belly; pushed himself slowly up on his back\towards the headboard so that he could lift his head better; found\nwhere the itch was, and saw that it was covered with lots of little\nwhite spots which he didn't know what to make of; and when he tried\nto feel the place with one of his legs he drew it quickly back\nbecause as soon as he touched it he was overcome by a cold shudder.\n\nHe slid back into his former position. "Getting up early all the\ntime", he thought, "it makes you stupid. You've got to get enough\nsleep. Other travelling salesmen live a life of luxury. For\ninstance, whenever I go back to the guest house during the morning\nonto copy out the contract, these gentlemen are always still sitting\nthere eating their breakfasts. I ought to just try that with my\nboss; I'd get kicked out on the spot. But who knows, maybe that\nwould be the best thing for me. If I didn't have my parents to\nthink about I'd have given in my notice a long time ago, I'd have\ngone up to the boss and told him just what I think, tell him\nneverthing I would, let him know just what I feel. He'd fall right\noff his desk! And it's a funny sort of business to be sitting up\nthere at your desk, talking down at your subordinates from up\nthere, especially when you have to go right up close because the boss is\nhard of hearing. Well, there's still some hope; once I've got the\nmoney together to pay off my parents' debt to him - another five or\nsix years I suppose - that's definitely what I'll do. That's when\nI'll make the big change. First of all though, I've got to get up,\nmy train leaves at five."

And he looked over at the alarm clock, ticking on the chest of\ndrawers. "God in Heaven!" he thought. It was half past six and the\nhands were quietly moving forwards, it was even later than half\npast, more like quarter to seven. Had the alarm clock not rung? He\ncould see from the bed that it had been set for four o'clock as it\nshould have been; it certainly must have rung. Yes, but was it\npossible to quietly sleep through that furniture-rattling noise?
True, he had not slept peacefully, but probably all the more deeply\nbecause of that. What should he do now? The next train went at\nseven; if he were to catch that he would have to rush like mad and\nthe collection of samples was still not packed, and he did not at\nall feel particularly fresh and lively. And even if he did catch\nthe train he would not avoid his boss's anger as the office\nassistant would have been there to see the five o'clock train go, he\nwould have put in his report about Gregor's not being there a long\ntime ago. The office assistant was the boss's man, spineless, and\nwith no understanding. What about if he reported sick? But that\nwould be extremely strained and suspicious as in fifteen years of\nservice Gregor had never once yet been ill. His boss would\ncertainly come round with the doctor from the medical insurance\ncompany, accuse his parents of having a lazy son, and accept the\ndoctor's recommendation not to make any claim as the doctor believed\nthat no-one was ever ill but that many were workshy. And what's\nmore, would he have been entirely wrong in this case? Gregor did in\nfact, apart from excessive sleepiness after sleeping for so long,\nfeel completely well and even felt much hungrier than usual.
He was still hurriedly thinking all this through, unable to decide\nonto get out of the bed, when the clock struck quarter to seven.
There was a cautious knock at the door near his head. "Gregor", somebody called - it was his mother - "it's quarter to seven.\nDid you want to go somewhere?"
That gentle voice! Gregor was\nshocked when he heard his own voice answering, it could hardly be\nrecognised as the voice he had had before. As if from deep inside\nhim, there was a painful and uncontrollable squeaking mixed in with\nit, the words could be made out at first but then there was a sort\nof echo which made them unclear, leaving the hearer unsure whether\nhe had heard properly or not. Gregor had wanted to give a full\nanswer and explain everything, but in the circumstances contented\nhimself with saying: "Yes, mother, yes, thank-you, I\\'m getting up\\nnow." The change in Gregor\\'s voice probably could not be noticed\\noutside through the wooden door, as his mother was satisfied with\\nthis explanation and shuffled away. But this short conversation\\nmade the other members of the family aware that Gregor, against\\ntheir expectations was still at home, and soon his father came\\nknocking at one of the side doors, gently, but with his fist.\n"Gregor, Gregor", he called, "what\\'s wrong?" And after a short\\nwhile he called again with a warning deepness in his voice:

"Gregor!\nGregor!" At the other side door his sister came plaintively:\n"Gregor? Aren\\'t you well? Do you need anything?" Gregor answered to\\nboth sides: "I\\'m ready, now", making an effort to remove all the\\nstrangeness from his voice by enunciating very carefully and putting\\nlong pauses between each, individual word. His father went back to\\nhis breakfast, but his sister whispered: "Gregor, open the door, I\\nbeg of you." Gregor, however, had no thought of opening the door,\\nand instead congratulated himself for his cautious habit, acquired\\nfrom his travelling, of locking all doors at night even when he was\\nat home.\n\nThe first thing he wanted to do was to get up in peace without being\\ndisturbed, to get dressed, and most of all to have his breakfast.\nOnly then would he consider what to do next, as he was well aware\\nthat he would not bring his thoughts to any sensible conclusions by\\nlying in bed. He remembered that he had often felt a slight pain in\\nbed, perhaps caused by lying awkwardly, but that had always turned\\nout to be pure imagination and he wondered how his imaginings would\\nslowly resolve themselves today. He did not have the slightest\\ndoubt that the change in his voice was nothing more than the first\\nsign of a serious cold, which was an occupational hazard for\\ntravelling salesmen.\n\nIt was a simple matter to throw off the covers; he only had to blow\\nhimself up a little and they fell off by themselves. But it became\\ndifficult after that, especially as he was so exceptionally broad.\nHe would have used his arms and his hands to push himself up; but\\ninstead of them he only had all those little legs continuously\\nmoving in different directions, and which he was moreover unable to\\ncontrol. If he wanted to bend one of them, then that was the first\\none that would stretch itself out; and if he finally managed to do\\nwhat he wanted with that leg, all the others seemed to be set free\\nand would move about painfully. "This is something that can\\'t be\\ndone in bed", Gregor said to himself, "so don\\'t keep trying to do\\nit".\n\nThe first thing he wanted to do was get the lower part of his body\\nout of the bed, but he had never seen this lower part, and could not\\nimagine what it looked like; it turned out to be too hard to move;\\nit went so slowly; and finally, almost in a frenzy, when he\\ncarelessly shoved himself forwards with all the force he could\\ngather, he chose the wrong direction, hit hard against the lower\\nbedpost, and learned from the burning pain he felt that the lower\\npart of his body might well, at present, be the most sensitive.\n\nSo then he tried to get the top part of his body out of the bed\\nfirst, carefully turning his head to the side. This he managed\\nquite easily, and despite its breadth and its weight, the bulk of\\nhis body eventually followed slowly in the direction of the head.\nBut when he had at last got his head out of the bed and into the\lfresh air it occurred to him that if he let himself fall it would be\na miracle if his head were not injured, so he became afraid to carry\non pushing himself forward the same way. And he could not knock\nhimself out now at any price; better to stay in bed than lose\nconsciousness.\n\nIt took just as much effort to get back to where he had been\nearlier, but when he lay there sighing, and was once more watching\nhis legs as they struggled against each other even harder than\nbefore, if that was possible, he could think of no way of bringing\npeace and order to this chaos. He told himself once more that it\nwas not possible for him to stay in bed and that the most sensible\nthing to do would be to get free of it in whatever way he could at\nwhatever sacrifice. At the same time, though, he did not forget to\nremind himself that calm consideration was much better than rushing\nonto desperate conclusions. At times like this he would direct his\neyes to the window and look out as clearly as he could, but\nunfortunately, even the other side of the narrow street was\nenveloped in morning fog and the view had little confidence or cheer\nto offer him. "Seven o'\'clock, already", he said to himself when the\nclock struck again, "seven o'\'clock, and there's still a fog like\nthis." And he lay there quietly a while longer, breathing lightly\nas if he perhaps expected the total stillness to bring things back\nonto their real and natural state.\n\nBut then he said to himself: "Before it strikes quarter past seven\nI'll definitely have to have got properly out of bed. And by then\nsomebody will have come round from work to ask what's happened to me\nas well, as they open up at work before seven o'\'clock." And so he\nset himself to the task of swinging the entire length of his body\nout of the bed all at the same time. If he succeeded in falling out\nof bed in this way and kept his head raised as he did so he could\nprobably avoid injuring it. His back seemed to be quite hard, and\nprobably nothing would happen to it falling onto the carpet. His\nmain concern was for the loud noise he was bound to make, and which\nnever through all the doors would probably raise concern if not\nalarm. But it was something that had to be risked.\n\nWhen Gregor was already sticking half way out of the bed - the new\nmethod was more of a game than an effort, all he had to do was rock\nback and forth - it occurred to him how simple everything would be\nif somebody came to help him. Two strong people - he had his father\nand the maid in mind - would have been more than enough; they would\nonly have to push their arms under the dome of his back, peel him\naway from the bed, bend down with the load and then be patient and\ncareful as he swang over onto the floor, where, hopefully, the\nlittle legs would find a use. Should he really call for help\nthough, even apart from the fact that all the doors were locked?\nDespite all the difficulty he was in, he could not suppress a smile\nat this thought.\n\nAfter a while he had already moved so far across that it would have\nbeen hard for him to keep his balance if he rocked too hard. The\ntime was now ten past seven and he would have to make a final\ndecision very soon. Then there was a ring at the door of the flat.\n"That'll be someone from work", he said to himself, and froze very\nstill, although his little legs only became all the more lively as\nthey danced around. For a moment everything remained quiet.\n"They're not opening the door", Gregor said to himself, caught in\nsome nonsensical hope. But then of course, the maid's firm steps\nwent to the door as ever and opened it. Gregor only needed to hear the visitor's first words of greeting and he knew who it was - the chief clerk himself. Why did Gregor have to be the only one condemned to work for a company where they immediately became highly suspicious at the slightest shortcoming? Were all employees, every none of them, louts, was there not one of them who was faithful and devoted who would go so mad with pangs of conscience that he couldn't get out of bed if he didn't spend at least a couple of hours in the morning on company business? Was it really not enough to let one of the trainees make enquiries - assuming enquiries were even necessary - did the chief clerk have to come himself, and did they have to show the whole, innocent family that this was so suspicious that only the chief clerk could be trusted to have the wisdom to investigate it? And more because these thoughts had made him upset than through any proper decision, he swang himself with all his force out of the bed. There was a loud thump, but it wasn't really a loud noise. His fall was softened a little by the carpet, and Gregor's back was also more elastic than he had thought, which made the sound muffled and not too noticeable. He had not held his head carefully enough, though, and hit it as he fell; annoyed and in pain, he turned it and rubbed it against the carpet.

"Something's fallen down in there", said the chief clerk in the room on the left. Gregor tried to imagine whether something of the sort that had happened to him today could ever happen to the chief clerk too; you had to concede that it was possible. But as if in gruff reply to this question, the chief clerk's firm footsteps in his highly polished boots could now be heard in the adjoining room.
From the room on his right, Gregor's sister whispered to him to let him know: "Gregor, the chief clerk is here." "Yes, I know", said Gregor to himself; but without daring to raise his voice loud enough for his sister to hear him.
Then the chief clerk called "Good morning, Mr. Samsa". "He isn't well", said his mother to the chief clerk, while his father continued to speak through the door. "He isn't well, please believe me. Why else would Gregor have missed a train! The lad only ever thinks about the business. It nearly makes me cross the way he never goes out in the evenings; he's been in town for a week now but stayed home every evening. He sits with us in the kitchen and just reads the paper or studies train timetables. His idea of relaxation is working with his fretsaw. He's made a little frame, for instance, it only took him two or three evenings, you'll be amazed how nice it is; it's hanging up in his room; you'll see it as soon as Gregor opens the door. Anyway, I'm glad you're here; we wouldn't have been able to get Gregor to open the door by ourselves; he's so stubborn; and I'm sure he isn't well, he said this morning that he is, but he isn't." "I'll be there in a moment", said Gregor slowly and thoughtfully, but without moving so that he would not miss any word of the conversation. "Well I can't think of any other way of explaining it, Mrs. Samsa", said the chief clerk, "I hope it's nothing serious. But on the other hand, I must say that if we\people in commerce ever become slightly unwell then, fortunately or\nunfortunately as you like, we simply have to overcome it because of\nbusiness considerations." "Can the chief clerk come in to see you\nnow then?", asked his father impatiently, knocking at the door\nagain. "No", said Gregor. In the room on his right there followed\na painful silence; in the room on his left his sister began to cry.\n\nSo why did his sister not go and join the others? She had probably\nonly just got up and had not even begun to get dressed. And why was\nshe crying? Was it because he had not got up, and had not let the\nchief clerk in, because he was in danger of losing his job and if\nthat happened his boss would once more pursue their parents with the\nsame demands as before? There was no need to worry about things like\nthat yet. Gregor was still there and had not the slightest\nintention of abandoning his family. For the time being he just lay\nthere on the carpet, and no-one who knew the condition he was in\nwould seriously have expected him to let the chief clerk in. It was\nonly a minor courtesy, and a suitable excuse could easily be\nfound for it later on, it was not something for which Gregor could\nbe sacked on the spot. And it seemed to Gregor much more sensible\nto leave him now in peace instead of disturbing him with talking at\nhim and crying. But the others didn't know what was happening, they\nwere worried, that would excuse their behaviour.\n\nThe chief clerk now raised his voice, "Mr. Samsa", he called to him,\n"what is wrong? You barricade yourself in your room, give us no more\nthan yes or no for an answer, you are causing serious and\nunnecessary concern to your parents and you fail - and I mention\nthis just by the way - you fail to carry out your business duties in\na way that is quite unheard of. I'm speaking here on behalf of your\nparents and of your employer, and really must request a clear and\nimmediate explanation. I am astonished, quite astonished. I\nthought I knew you as a calm and sensible person, and now you\nsuddenly seem to be showing off with peculiar whims. This morning,\nyour employer did suggest a possible reason for your failure to\nappear, it's true - it had to do with the money that was recently\nentrusted to you - but I came near to giving him my word of honour\nthat that could not be the right explanation. But now that I see\nyour incomprehensible stubbornness I no longer feel any wish\nwhatsoever to intercede on your behalf. And nor is your position\nall that secure. I had originally intended to say all this to you\nin private, but since you cause me to waste my time here for no good\nreason I don't see why your parents should not also learn of it.\nYour turnover has been very unsatisfactory of late; I grant you that\nit's not the time of year to do especially good business, we\nrecognise that; but there simply is no time of year to do no\nbusiness at all, Mr. Samsa, we cannot allow there to be."\n\n"But Sir", called Gregor, beside himself and forgetting all else in\nthe excitement, "I'll open up immediately, just a moment. I'm\nslightly unwell, an attack of dizziness, I haven't been able to get\nup. I'm still in bed now. I'm quite fresh again now, though. I'm\njust getting out of bed. Just a moment. Be patient! It's not quite\nas easy as I'd thought. I'm quite alright now, though. It's\nshocking, what can suddenly happen to a person! I was quite alright\nlast night, my parents know about it, perhaps better than me, I had\na small symptom of it last night already. They must have noticed\nit. I don't know why I didn't let you know at work! But you always\nt think you can get over an illness without staying at home. Please,\ndon't make my parents suffer! There's no basis for any of the\naccusations you're making; nobody's ever said a word to me about any\nof these things. Maybe you haven't read the latest contracts I sent\nin. I'll set off with the eight o'clock train, as well, these few\nhours of rest have given me strength. You don't need to wait, sir;\nI'll be in the office soon after you, and please be so good as to\nntell that to the boss and recommend me to him!"\nAnd while Gregor gushed out these words, hardly knowing what he was\nsaying, he made his way over to the chest of drawers - this was\nneasily done, probably because of the practise he had already had in\nbed - where he now tried to get himself upright. He really did want\nnto open the door, really did want to let them see him and to speak\nwith the chief clerk; the others were being so insistent, and he was\ncurious to learn what they would say when they caught sight of him.\nIf they were shocked then it would no longer be Gregor's\nresponsibility and he could rest. If, however, they took everything\nncalmly he would still have no reason to be upset, and if he hurried\nhe really could be at the station for eight o'clock. The first few\nntimes he tried to climb up on the smooth chest of drawers he just\nslid down again, but he finally gave himself one last swing and\nstood there upright; the lower part of his body was in serious pain\nbut he no longer gave any attention to it. Now he let himself fall\nagainst the back of a nearby chair and held tightly to the edges of\nit with his little legs. By now he had also calmed down, and kept\nquiet so that he could listen to what the chief clerk was saying.\n"Did you understand a word of all that?" the chief clerk asked his\nparents, "surely he's not trying to make fools of us". "Oh, God!"\ncalled his mother, who was already in tears, "he could be seriously\nill and we're making him suffer. Grete! Grete!" she then cried.\n"Mother?" his sister called from the other side. They communicated\nacross Gregor's room. "You'll have to go for the doctor straight\naway. Gregor is ill. Quick, get the doctor. Did you hear the way\nGregor spoke just now?" "That was the voice of an animal", said the\nchief clerk, with a calmness that was in contrast with his mother's\nscreams. "Anna! Anna!" his father called into the kitchen through\nthe entrance hall, clapping his hands, "get a locksmith here, now!"\nAnd the two girls, their skirts swishing, immediately ran out\nthrough the hall, wrenching open the front door of the flat as they\nwent. How had his sister managed to get dressed so quickly? There\nwas no sound of the door banging shut again; they must have left it\nopen; people often do in homes where something awful has happened.\n\nGregor, in contrast, had become much calmer. So they couldn't\nunderstand his words any more, although they seemed clear enough to\nhim, clearer than before - perhaps his ears had become used to the\nsound. They had realised, though, that there was something wrong\nwith him, and were ready to help. The first response to his\nsituation had been confident and wise, and that made him feel\nbetter. He felt that he had been drawn back in among people, and\nfrom the doctor and the locksmith he expected great and surprising\nachievements - although he did not really distinguish one from the\nother. Whatever was said next would be crucial, so, in order to\nmake his voice as clear as possible, he coughed a little, but taking\ncare to do this not too loudly as even this might well sound\ndifferent from the way that a human coughs and he was no longer sure\nhe could judge this for himself.

Meanwhile, it had become very\nquiet in the next room. Perhaps his parents were sat at the table\nwhispering with the chief clerk, or perhaps they were all pressed\nagainst the door and listening.\n\nGregor slowly pushed his way over to the door with the chair. Once\nthere he let go of it and threw himself onto the door, holding\nhimself upright against it using the adhesive on the tips of his\nlegs. He rested there a little while to recover from the effort\ninvolved and then set himself to the task of turning the key in the\nlock with his mouth. He seemed, unfortunately, to have no proper\nnteeth - how was he, then, to grasp the key? - but the lack of teeth\nwas, of course, made up for with a very strong jaw; using the jaw,\nhe really was able to start the key turning, ignoring the fact that\nhe must have been causing some kind of damage as a brown fluid came\nfrom his mouth, flowed over the key and dripped onto the floor.\n"Listen", said the chief clerk in the next room, "he's turning the\nkey." Gregor was greatly encouraged by this; but they all should\nhave been calling to him, his father and his mother too: "Well done,\nGregor", they should have cried, "keep at it, keep hold of the\nlock!" And with the idea that they were all excitedly following his\nnefforts, he bit on the key with all his strength, paying no\nattention to the pain he was causing himself. As the key turned\naround he turned around the lock with it, only holding himself\nupright with his mouth, and hung onto the key or pushed it down\nagain with the whole weight of his body as needed. The clear sound\nof the lock as it snapped back was Gregor's sign that he could break\nhis concentration, and as he regained his breath he said to himself:\n"So, I didn't need the locksmith after all". Then he lay his head on\nthe handle of the door to open it completely.\nBecause he had to open the door in this way, it was already wide\nopen before he could be seen. He had first to slowly turn himself\naround one of the double doors, and he had to do it very carefully\nif he did not want to fall flat on his back before entering the\nroom. He was still occupied with this difficult movement, unable to\npay attention to anything else, when he heard the chief clerk\nexclaim a loud "Oh!", which sounded like the soughing of the wind.\nNow he also saw him - he was the nearest to the door - his hand\npressed against his open mouth and slowly retreating as if driven by\na steady and invisible force. Gregor's mother, her hair still\nshevelled from bed despite the chief clerk's being there, looked\nat his father. Then she unfolded her arms, took two steps forward\ntowards Gregor and sank down onto the floor into her skirts that\nspread themselves out around her as her head disappeared down onto\nher breast. His father looked hostile, and clenched his fists as if\nwanting to knock Gregor back into his room. Then he looked\nuncertainly round the living room, covered his eyes with his hands\nand wept so that his powerful chest shook.\nSo Gregor did not go into the room, but leant against the inside of\nthe other door which was still held bolted in place. In this way\nonly half of his body could be seen, along with his head above it\nwhich he leant over to one side as he peered out at the others.\nMeanwhile the day had become much lighter; part of the endless,\ngrey-black building on the other side of the street - which was a\nhospital - could be seen quite clearly with the austere and regular\ncolumn of windows piercing its facade; the rain was still\ncalling, now throwing down large, individual droplets which hit the\nground one at a time. The washing up from breakfast lay on the\ntable; there was so much of it because, for Gregor\ 's father,\nbreakfast was the most important meal of the day and he would\nstretch it out for several hours as he sat reading a number of\ndifferent newspapers. On the wall exactly opposite there was\nphotograph of Gregor when he was a lieutenant in the army, his sword\nin his hand and a carefree smile on his face as he called forth\nrespect for his uniform and bearing. The door to the entrance hall\nwas open and as the front door of the flat was also open he could\nsee onto the landing and the stairs where they began their way down\nbelow.\n"Now, then", said Gregor, well aware that he was the only one to\nhave kept calm, "I\\'ll get dressed straight away now, pack up my\nsamples and set off. Will you please just let me leave? You can\nsee", he said to the chief clerk, "that I\\'m not stubborn and I\nlike to do my job; being a commercial traveller is arduous but\nwithout travelling I couldn\\'t earn my living. So where are you\ngoing, in to the office? Yes? Will you report everything accurately,\nthen? It\\'s quite possible for someone to be temporarily unable to\nwork, but that\\'s just the right time to remember what\\'s been\nachieved in the past and consider that later on, once the difficulty\nhas been removed, he will certainly work with all the more diligence\nand concentration. You\\'re well aware that I\\'m seriously in debt to\nour employer as well as having to look after my parents and my\nsister, so that I\\'m trapped in a difficult situation, but I will\nwork my way out of it again. Please don\\'t make things any harder\nfor me than they are already, and don\\'t take sides against me at the\noffice. I know that nobody likes the travellers. They think we\nearn an enormous wage as well as having a soft time of it. That\\'s\njust prejudice but they have no particular reason to think better of\nit. But you, sir, you have a better overview than the rest of the\nstaff, in fact, if I can say this in confidence, a better overview\nthan the boss himself - it\\'s very easy for a businessman like him to\nmake mistakes about his employees and judge them more harshly than\nhe should. And you\\'re also well aware that we travellers spend\nalmost the whole year away from the office, so that we can very\neasily fall victim to gossip and chance and groundless complaints,\nand it\\'s almost impossible to defend yourself from that sort of\nthing, we don\\'t usually even hear about them, or if at all it\\'s when\nwe arrive back home exhausted from a trip, and that\\'s when we feel\nthe harmful effects of what\\'s been going on without even knowing\nwhat caused them. Please, don\\'t go away, at least first say\nsomething to show that you grant that I\\'m at least partly right!"\nBut the chief clerk had turned away as soon as Gregor had started to\nspeak, and, with protruding lips, only stared back at him over his\ntrembling shoulders as he left. He did not keep still for a moment\nwhile Gregor was speaking, but moved steadily towards the door\nwithout taking his eyes off him. He moved very gradually, as if\nthere had been some secret prohibition on leaving the room. It was\nonly when he had reached the entrance hall that he made a sudden\nmovement, drew his foot from the living room, and rushed forward in\na panic. In the hall, he stretched his right hand far out towards\nthe stairway as if out there, there were some supernatural force\nwaiting to save him.\n\nGregor realised that it was out of the question to let the chief\nclerk go away in this mood if his position in the firm was not to be\nput into extreme danger. That was something his parents did not\nunderstand very well; over the years, they had become convinced that\nthis job would provide for Gregor for his entire life, and besides,\nthey had so much to worry about at present that they had lost sight\nof any thought for the future. Gregor, though, did think about the\nfuture. The chief clerk had to be held back, calmed down, convinced\nand finally won over; the future of Gregor and his family depended\non it! If only his sister were here! She was clever; she was already\nin tears while Gregor was still lying peacefully on his back. And\nthe chief clerk was a lover of women, surely she could persuade him;\nshe would close the front door in the entrance hall and talk him out\nof his shocked state. But his sister was not there, Gregor would\nhave to do the job himself. And without considering that he still\nwas not familiar with how well he could move about in his present\nstate, or that his speech still might not - or probably would not - be understood, he let go of the door; pushed himself through the\nopening; tried to reach the chief clerk on the landing who,\nridiculously, was holding on to the banister with both hands; but\nGregor fell immediately over and, with a little scream as he sought\nsomething to hold onto, landed on his numerous little legs. Hardly\nhad that happened than, for the first time that day, he began to\nfeel alright with his body; the little legs had the solid ground\nunder them; to his pleasure, they did exactly as he told them; they\nwere even making the effort to carry him where he wanted to go; and\nhe was soon believing that all his sorrows would soon be finally at\nan end. He held back the urge to move but swayed from side to side\nas he crouched there on the floor. His mother was not far away in\nfront of him and seemed, at first, quite engrossed in herself, but\nthen she suddenly jumped up with her arms outstretched and her\nfingers spread shouting: "Help, for pity's sake, Help!" The way she\nheld her head suggested she wanted to see Gregor better, but the\nunthinking way she was hurrying backwards showed that she did not;\nshe had forgotten that the table was behind her with all the\nbreakfast things on it; when she reached the table she sat quickly\ndown on it without knowing what she was doing; without even seeming\nto notice that the coffee pot had been knocked over and a gush of\ncoffee was pouring down onto the carpet.\n\n"Mother, mother", said Gregor gently, looking up at her. He had\ncompletely forgotten the chief clerk for the moment, but could not\nhelp himself snapping in the air with his jaws at the sight of the\nflow of coffee. That set his mother screaming anew, she fled from\nthe table and into the arms of his father as he rushed towards her.\nGregor, though, had no time to spare for his parents now; the chief\nclerk had already reached the stairs; with his chin on the banister,\nhe looked back for the last time. Gregor made a run for him; he\nwanted to be sure of reaching him; the chief clerk must have\nexpected something, as he leapt down several steps at once and\ndisappeared; his shouts resounding all around the staircase. The\nflight of the chief clerk seemed, unfortunately, to put Gregor's\nfather into a panic as well. Until then he had been relatively self\ncontrolled, but now, instead of running after the chief clerk\nhimself, or at least not impeding Gregor as he ran after him,\nGregor's father seized the chief clerk's stick in his right hand (the chief clerk had left it behind on a chair, along with his hat and overcoat), picked up a large newspaper from the table with his left, and used them to drive Gregor back into his room, stamping his foot at him as he went. Gregor's appeals to his father were of no help, his appeals were simply not understood, however much he humbly turned his head his father merely stamped his foot all the harder. Across the room, despite the chilly weather, Gregor's mother had pulled open a window, leant far out of it and pressed her hands to her face. A strong draught of air flew in from the street towards the stairway, the curtains flew up, the newspapers on the table fluttered and some of them were blown onto the floor. Nothing would stop Gregor's father as he drove him back, making hissing noises at him like a wild man. Gregor had never had any practice in moving backwards and was only able to go very slowly. If Gregor had only been allowed to turn round he would have been back in his room straight away, but he was afraid that if he took the time to do that his father would become impatient, and there was the threat of a lethal blow to his back or head from the stick in his father's hand many moment. Eventually, though, Gregor realised that he had no choice as he saw, to his disgust, that he was quite incapable of going backwards in a straight line; so he began, as quickly as possible and with frequent anxious glances at his father, to turn himself round. It went very slowly, but perhaps his father was able to see his good intentions as he did nothing to hinder him, in fact now and then he used the tip of his stick to give directions from a distance as to which way to turn. If only his father would stop that unbearable hissing! It was making Gregor quite confused. When he had nearly finished turning round, still listening to that hissing, he made a mistake and turned himself back a little the way he had just come. He was pleased when he finally had his head in front of the doorway, but then saw that it was too narrow, and his body was too broad to get through it without further difficulty. In his present mood, it obviously did not occur to his father to open the other of the double doors so that Gregor would have enough space to get through. He was merely fixed on the idea that Gregor should be got back into his room as quickly as possible. Nor would he ever have allowed Gregor the time to get himself upright as preparation for getting through the doorway. What he did, making more noise than ever, was to drive Gregor forwards all the harder as if there had been nothing in the way; it sounded to Gregor as if there was now more than one father behind him; it was not a pleasant experience, and Gregor pushed himself into the doorway without regard for what might happen. One side of his body lifted itself, he lay at an angle in the doorway, one flank scraped on the white door and was painfully injured, leaving vile brown flecks on it, soon he was stuck fast and would not have been able to move at all by himself, the little legs along one side hung quivering in the air while those on the other side were pressed painfully against the ground. Then his father gave him a hefty shove from behind which released him from where he was held and sent him flying, and heavily bleeding, deep into his room. The door was slammed shut with the stick, then, finally, all was quiet.

It was not until it was getting dark that evening that Gregor awoke from his deep and coma-like sleep. He would have woken soon\nafterwards anyway even if he hadn't been disturbed, as he had had\nenough sleep and felt fully rested. But he had the impression that\nsome hurried steps and the sound of the door leading into the front\nroom being carefully shut had woken him. The light from the\\nelectric street lamps shone palely here and there onto the ceiling\\nand tops of the furniture, but down below, where Gregor was, it was\\ndark. He pushed himself over to the door, feeling his way clumsily\\nwith his antennae - of which he was now beginning to learn the value\\n- in order to see what had been happening there. The whole of his\\nleft side seemed like one, painfully stretched scar, and he limped\\nbadly on his two rows of legs. One of the legs had been badly\\njinjured in the events of that morning - it was nearly a miracle that\\nonly one of them had been - and dragged along lifelessly.\n\nIt was only when he had reached the door that he realised what it\\nactually was that had drawn him over to it; it was the smell of\\nsomething to eat. By the door there was a dish filled with\\nsweetened milk with little pieces of white bread floating in it. He\\nwas so pleased he almost laughed, as he was even hungrier than he\\nhad been that morning, and immediately dipped his head into the\\nmilk, nearly covering his eyes with it. But he soon drew his head\\nback again in disappointment; not only did the pain in his tender\\nleft side make it difficult to eat the food - he was only able to\\nearth if his whole body worked together as a snuffling whole - but the\\nmilk did not taste at all nice. Milk like this was normally his\\nfavourite drink, and his sister had certainly left it there for him\\nbecause of that, but he turned, almost against his own will, away\\nfrom the dish and crawled back into the centre of the room.\n\nThrough the crack in the door, Gregor could see that the gas had\\nbeen lit in the living room. His father at this time would normally\\nbe sat with his evening paper, reading it out in a loud voice to\\nGregor\\'s mother, and sometimes to his sister, but there was now not\\na sound to be heard. Gregor\\'s sister would often write and tell him\\nabout this reading, but maybe his father had lost the habit in\\nrecent times. It was so quiet all around too, even though there\\nmust have been somebody in the flat. "What a quiet life it is the\\nfamily lead", said Gregor to himself, and, gazing into the darkness,\\nfeels a great pride that he was able to provide a life like that in\\nsuch a nice home for his sister and parents. But what now, if all\\nthis peace and wealth and comfort should come to a horrible and\\nfrightening end? That was something that Gregor did not want to\\nthink about too much, so he started to move about, crawling up and\\ndown the room.\n\nOnce during that long evening, the door on one side of the room was\\nopened very slightly and hurriedly closed again; later on the door\\non the other side did the same; it seemed that someone needed to\\nenter the room but thought better of it. Gregor went and waited\\nimmediately by the door, resolved either to bring the timorous\\nvisitor into the room in some way or at least to find out who it\\nwas; but the door was opened no more that night and Gregor waited in\\nvain. The previous morning while the doors were locked everyone had\\nwanted to get in there to him, but now, now that he had opened up\\none of the doors and the other had clearly been unlocked some time\\nduring the day, no-one came, and the keys were in the other sides.\n\nIt was not until late at night that the gaslight in the living room\\nwas put out, and now it was easy to see that his parents and sister had\nstayed awake all that time, as they all could be distinctly heard as\ntthey went away together on tip-toe. It was clear that no-one would\ncome into Gregor\'s room any more until morning; that gave him plenty\nof time to think undisturbed about how he would have to re-arrange\nhis life. For some reason, the tall, empty room where he was forced\nonto remain made him feel uneasy as he lay there flat on the floor,\nthough he had been living in it for five years. Hardly aware\nof what he was doing other than a slight feeling of shame, he\nhurried under the couch. It pressed down on his back a little, and\nhe was no longer able to lift his head, but he nonetheless felt\nimmediately at ease and his only regret was that his body was too\nbroad to get it all underneath.\nHe spent the whole night there. Some of the time he passed in a\nlight sleep, although he frequently woke from it in alarm because of\nhis hunger, and some of the time was spent in worries and vague\nhopes which, however, always led to the same conclusion: for the\ntime being he must remain calm, he must show patience and the\ngreatest consideration so that his family could bear the\nunpleasantness that he, in his present condition, was forced to\nimpose on them.\nGregor soon had the opportunity to test the strength of his\ndecisions, as early the next morning, almost before the night had\nended, his sister, nearly fully dressed, opened the door from the\nfront room and looked anxiously in. She did not see him straight\naway, but when she did notice him under the couch - he had to be\nsomewhere, for God\'s sake, he couldn't have flown away - she was so\nshocked that she lost control of herself and slammed the door shut\nagain from outside. But she seemed to regret her behaviour, as she\nopened the door again straight away and came in on tip-toe as if\nentering the room of someone seriously ill or even of a stranger.\nGregor had pushed his head forward, right to the edge of the couch,\nand watched her. Would she notice that he had left the milk as it\nwas, realise that it was not from any lack of hunger and bring him\nsome other food that was more suitable? If she didn't do it\nherself he would rather go hungry than draw her attention to it,\nalthough he did feel a terrible urge to rush forward from under the\ncouch, throw himself at his sister\'s feet and beg her for something\ngood to eat. However, his sister noticed the full dish immediately\nand looked at it and the few drops of milk splashed around it with\nsome surprise. She immediately picked it up - using a rag,\nnot her bare hands - and carried it out. Gregor was extremely\ncurious as to what she would bring in its place, imagining the\nwildest possibilities, but he never could have guessed what his\nsister, in her goodness, actually did bring. In order to test his\ntaste, she brought him a whole selection of things, all spread out\non an old newspaper. There were old, half-rotten vegetables; bones\nfrom the evening meal, covered in white sauce that had gone hard;\nfew raisins and almonds; some cheese that Gregor had declared\neatible two days before; a dry roll and some bread spread with\nbutter and salt. As well as all that she had poured some water into\nthe dish, which had probably been permanently set aside for Gregor\'s\nuse, and placed it beside them. Then, out of consideration for\nGregor\'s feelings, as she knew that he would not eat in front of\nher, she hurried out again and even turned the key in the lock\nso\nthat Gregor would know he could make things as comfortable for\nhimself as he liked. Gregor's little legs whirred, at last he could\neat. What\'s more, his injuries must already have completely healed\nas he found no difficulty in moving. This amazed him, as more than\na month earlier he had cut his finger slightly with a knife, he\nthought of how his finger had still hurt the day before yesterday.\n"Am I less sensitive than I used to be, then?", he thought, and was\nalready sucking greedily at the cheese which had immediately, almost\ncompellingly, attracted him much more than the other foods on the\nnewspaper. Quickly one after another, his eyes watering with\npleasure, he consumed the cheese, the vegetables and the sauce; the\nfresh foods, on the other hand, he didn't like at all, and even\ndragged the things he did want to eat a little way away from them\nbecause he couldn't stand the smell. Long after he had finished\neating and lay lethargic in the same place, his sister slowly turned\nthe key in the lock as a sign to him that he should withdraw. He\nwas immediately startled, although he had been half asleep, and he\nhurried back under the couch. But he needed great self-control to\nstay there even for the short time that his sister was in the room,\nas eating so much food had rounded out his body a little and he\ncould hardly breathe in that narrow space. Half suffocating, he\nwatched with bulging eyes as his sister unselfconsciously took a\nbroom and swept up the left-overs, mixing them in with the food he\nhad not even touched at all as if it could not be used any more.\nShe quickly dropped it all into a bin, closed it with its wooden\nlid, and carried everything out. She had hardly turned her back\nbefore Gregor came out again from under the couch and stretched\nhimself.\n\nThis was how Gregor received his food each day now, once in the\nmorning while his parents and the maid were still asleep, and the\nsecond time after everyone had eaten their meal at midday as his\nparents would sleep for a little while then as well, and Gregor's\nsister would send the maid away on some errand. Gregor's father and\nmother certainly did not want him to starve either, but perhaps it\nwould have been more than they could stand to have any more\nexperience of his feeding than being told about it, and perhaps his\nsister wanted to spare them what distress she could as they were\nindeed suffering enough.\n\nIt was impossible for Gregor to find out what they had told the\ndoctor and the locksmith that first morning to get them out of the\nflat. As nobody could understand him, nobody, not even his sister,\nthought that he could understand them, so he had to be content to\nhear his sister's sighs and appeals to the saints as she moved about\nhis room. It was only later, when she had become a little more used\nto everything - there was, of course, no question of her ever\nbecoming fully used to the situation - that Gregor would sometimes\nCatch a friendly comment, or at least a comment that could be\nconstrued as friendly. "He's enjoyed his dinner today", she might\nsay when he had diligently cleared away all the food left for him,\nor if he left most of it, which slowly became more and more\ninfrequent, she would often say, sadly, "now everything's just been\nleft there again".\n\nAlthough Gregor wasn't able to hear any news directly he did listen\nto much of what was said in the next rooms, and whenever he heard\nanyone speaking he would scurry straight to the appropriate door and\npress his whole body against it. There was seldom any conversation,\nespecially at first, that was not about him in some way, even if\only in secret. For two whole days, all the talk at every mealtime\was about what they should do now; but even between meals they spoke\about the same subject as there were always at least two members of\nthe family at home - nobody wanted to be at home by themselves and\nit was out of the question to leave the flat entirely empty. And on\nthe very first day the maid had fallen to her knees and begged\nGregor's mother to let her go without delay. It was not very clear\nhow much she knew of what had happened but she left within a quarter\nof an hour, tearfully thanking Gregor's mother for her dismissal as\nif she had done her an enormous service. She even swore\nemphatically not to tell anyone the slightest about what had\nhappened, even though no-one had asked that of her.\nNow Gregor's sister also had to help his mother with the cooking;\nalthough that was not so much bother as no-one ate very much.\nGregor often heard how one of them would unsuccessfully urge another\nto eat, and receive no more answer than "no thanks, I've had enough"\nor something similar. No-one drank very much either. His sister\nwould sometimes ask his father whether he would like a beer, hoping\nfor the chance to go and fetch it herself. When his father then\nsaid nothing she would add, so that he would not feel selfish, that\nshe could send the housekeeper for it, but then his father would\nclose the matter with a big, loud "No", and no more would be said.\nEven before the first day had come to an end, his father had\nexplained to Gregor's mother and sister what their finances and\nprospects were. Now and then he stood up from the table and took\nsome receipt or document from the little cash box he had saved from\nhis business when it had collapsed five years earlier. Gregor heard\nhow he opened the complicated lock and then closed it again after he\nhad taken the item he wanted. What he heard his father say was some\nof the first good news that Gregor heard since he had first been\nincarcerated in his room. He had thought that nothing at all\nremained from his father's business, at least he had never told him\nanything different, and Gregor had never asked him about it anyway.\nTheir business misfortune had reduced the family to a state of total\ndespair, and Gregor's only concern at that time had been to arrange\nthings so that they could all forget about it as quickly as\npossible. So then he started working especially hard, with a fiery\nvigour that raised him from a junior salesman to a travelling\nrepresentative almost overnight, bringing with it the chance to earn\nmoney in quite different ways. Gregor converted his success at work\nstraight into cash that he could lay on the table at home for the\nbenefit of his astonished and delighted family. They had been good\ntimes and they had never come again, at least not with the same\nsplendour, even though Gregor had later earned so much that he was\nin a position to bear the costs of the whole family, and did bear\nthem. They had even got used to it, both Gregor and the family,\nthey took the money with gratitude and he was glad to provide it,\nalthough there was no longer much warm affection given in return.\nGregor only remained close to his sister now. Unlike him, she was\nvery fond of music and a gifted and expressive violinist, it was his\nsecret plan to send her to the conservatory next year even though it\nwould cause great expense that would have to be made up for in some\nother way. During Gregor's short periods in town, conversation with\nhis sister would often turn to the conservatory but it was only ever\mentioned as a lovely dream that could never be realised. Their\nparents did not like to hear this innocent talk, but Gregor thought\nabout it quite hard and decided he would let them know what he\nplanned with a grand announcement of it on Christmas day.\n\nThat was the sort of totally pointless thing that went through his\nmind in his present state, pressed upright against the door and\nlistening. There were times when he simply became too tired to\ncontinue listening, when his head would fall wearily against the\nDoor and he would pull it up again with a start, as even the\nslightest noise he caused would be heard next door and they would\nall go silent. "What\\'s that he\\'s doing now", his father would say\nafter a while, clearly having gone over to the door, and only then\nwould the interrupted conversation slowly be taken up again.\n\nWhen explaining things, his father repeated himself several times,\npartly because it was a long time since he had been occupied with\nthese matters himself and partly because Gregor\\'s mother did not\nunderstand everything the first time. From these repeated explanations\nGregor learned, to his pleasure, that despite all their misfortunes\nthere was still some money available from the old days. It was not\na lot, but it had not been touched in the meantime and some interest\nhad accumulated. Besides that, they had not been using up all the\nmoney that Gregor had been bringing home every month, keeping only a\nlittle for himself, so that that, too, had been accumulating.\nBehind the door, Gregor nodded with enthusiasm in his pleasure at\nthis unexpected thrift and caution. He could actually have used\nthis surplus money to reduce his father\\'s debt to his boss, and the\nday when he could have freed himself from that job would have come\nmuch closer, but now it was certainly better the way his father had\ndone things.\n\nThis money, however, was certainly not enough to enable the family\nto live off the interest; it was enough to maintain them for,\nperhaps, one or two years, no more. That\\'s to say, it was money\nthat should not really be touched but set aside for emergencies;\nmoney to live on had to be earned. His father was healthy but old,\nand lacking in self confidence. During the five years that he had\nnot been working - the first holiday in a life that had been full of\nstrain and no success - he had put on a lot of weight and become\nvery slow and clumsy. Would Gregor\\'s elderly mother now have to go\nand earn money? She suffered from asthma and it was a strain for her\nto move about the home, every other day would be spent\nstruggling for breath on the sofa by the open window. Would his\nsister have to go and earn money? She was still a child of\nseventeen, her life up till then had been very enviable,\nconsisting\nof wearing nice clothes, sleeping late, helping out in the business,\njoining in with a few modest pleasures and most of all playing the\nviolin. Whenever they began to talk of the need to earn money,\nGregor would always first let go of the door and then throw himself\nonto the cool, leather sofa next to it, as he became quite hot with\nshame and regret.\n\nHe would often lie there the whole night through, not sleeping a\nwink but scratching at the leather for hours on end. Or he might go\nonto all the effort of pushing a chair to the window, climbing up onto\nthe sill and, propped up in the chair, leaning on the window to\nstare out of it. He had used to feel a great sense of freedom from\ndoing this, but doing it now was obviously something more remembered\nthan experienced, as what he actually saw in this way was becoming\nless distinct every day, even things that were quite near; he had\nused to curse the ever-present view of the hospital across the\nstreet, but now he could not see it at all, and if he had not known\nthat he lived in Charlottenstrasse, which was a quiet street despite\nbeing in the middle of the city, he could have thought that he was\nlooking out the window at a barren waste where the grey sky and the\ngrey earth mingled inseparably. His observant sister only needed to\nnotice the chair twice before she would always push it back to its\nexact position by the window after she had tidied up the room, and\nnever left the inner pane of the window open from then on.\n\nIf Gregor had only been able to speak to his sister and thank her\nfor all that she had to do for him it would have been easier for him\nto bear it; but as it was it caused him pain. His sister,\nnaturally, tried as far as possible to pretend there was nothing\nburdensome about it, and the longer it went on, of course, the\nbetter she was able to do so, but as time went by Gregor was also\nable to see through it all so much better. It had even become very\nunpleasant for him, now, whenever she entered the room. No sooner\nhad she come in than she would quickly close the door as a\nprecaution so that no-one would have to suffer the view into\nGregor's room, then she would go straight to the window and pull it\nhurriedly open almost as if she were suffocating. Even if it was\ncold, she would stay at the window breathing deeply for a little\nwhile. She would alarm Gregor twice a day with this running about\nand noise making; he would stay under the couch shivering the whole\nwhile, knowing full well that she would certainly have liked to\nspare him this ordeal, but it was impossible for her to be in the\nsame room with him with the windows closed.\n\nOne day, about a month after Gregor's transformation when his sister\nno longer had any particular reason to be shocked at his appearance,\nshe came into the room a little earlier than usual and found him\nstill staring out the window, motionless, and just where he would be\nmost horrible. In itself, his sister's not coming into the room\nwould have been no surprise for Gregor as it would have been\ndifficult for her to immediately open the window while he was still\nthere, but not only did she not come in, she went straight back and\nclosed the door behind her, a stranger would have thought he had\nthreatened her and tried to bite her. Gregor went straight to hide\nhimself under the couch, of course, but he had to wait until midday\nbefore his sister came back and she seemed much more uneasy than\nusual. It made him realise that she still found his appearance\nunbearable and would continue to do so, she probably even had to\novercome the urge to flee when she saw the little bit of him that\nprotruded from under the couch. One day, in order to spare her even\nthis sight, he spent four hours carrying the bedsheet over to the\ncouch on his back and arranged it so that he was completely covered\nand his sister would not be able to see him even if she bent down.\nIf she did not think this sheet was necessary then all she had to do\nwas take it off again, as it was clear enough that it was no\npleasure for Gregor to cut himself off so completely. She left the\nsheet where it was. Gregor even thought he glimpsed a look of\ngratitude one time when he carefully looked out from under the sheet\nto see how his sister liked the new arrangement.\n\nFor the first fourteen days, Gregor's parents could not bring\nt themselves to come into the room to see him. He would often hear\nt them say how they appreciated all the new work his sister was doing\neven though, before, they had seen her as a girl who was somewhat\ntuseless and frequently been annoyed with her. But now the two of\nt them, father and mother, would often both wait outside the door of\ngregor\'s room while his sister tidied up in there, and as soon as\nshe went out again she would have to tell them exactly how\neverthing looked, what Gregor had eaten, how he had behaved this\ntime and whether, perhaps, any slight improvement could be seen.\nHis mother also wanted to go in and visit Gregor relatively soon but\nhis father and sister at first persuaded her against it. Gregor\nl listened very closely to all this, and approved fully. Later,\nthough, she had to be held back by force, which made her call out:\n"Let me go and see Gregor, he is my unfortunate son! Can\t you\nt understand I have to see him?", and Gregor would think to himself\nt that maybe it would be better if his mother came in, not every day\tnof course, but one day a week, perhaps; she could understand\neverthing much better than his sister who, for all her courage, was\nt still just a child after all, and really might not have had an\tnadult\'s appreciation of the burdensome job she had taken on.\n\nGregor\'s wish to see his mother was soon realised. Out of\nc onsideration for his parents, Gregor wanted to avoid being seen at\nt the window during the day, the few square meters of the floor did\tnnot give him much room to crawl about, it was hard to just lie\tnquietly through the night, his food soon stopped giving him any\tn pleasure at all, and so, to entertain himself, he got into the habit\tnof crawling up and down the walls and ceiling. He was especially\tnfond of hanging from the ceiling; it was quite different from lying\tnon the floor; he could breathe more freely; his body had a light\tnswing to it; and up there, relaxed and almost happy, it might happen\nt that he would surprise even himself by letting go of the ceiling and\tn landing on the floor with a crash. But now, of course, he had far\tnbetter control of his body than before and, even with a fall as\ngreat as that, caused himself no damage. Very soon his sister\tnoticed Gregor\'s new way of entertaining himself - he had, after\tn all, left traces of the adhesive from his feet as he crawled about -\tn and got it into her head to make it as easy as possible for him by\tnremoving the furniture that got in his way, especially the chest of\tndrawers and the desk. Now, this was not something that she would be\tnable to do by herself; she did not dare to ask for help from her\tnfather; the sixteen year old maid had carried on bravely since the\tncook had left but she certainly would not have helped in this, she\tnhad even asked to be allowed to keep the kitchen locked at all times\tnand never to have to open the door unless it was especially\tnimportant; so his sister had no choice but to choose some time when\ngregor\'s father was not there and fetch his mother to help her. As\nshe approached the room, Gregor could hear his mother express her\tnjoy, but once at the door she went silent. First, of course, his\tsister came in and looked round to see that everything in the room\tnwas alright; and only then did she let her mother enter. Gregor had\tnhurriedly pulled the sheet down lower over the couch and put more\tnfolds into it so that everything really looked as if it had just\tnbeen thrown down by chance. Gregor also refrained, this time, from\tnspying out from under the sheet; he gave up the chance to see his\tnmother until later and was simply glad that she had come. "You can\ncome in, he can\'t be seen", said his sister, obviously leading her\nin by the hand. The old chest of drawers was too heavy for a pair\nof feeble women to be heaving about, but Gregor listened as they\npushed it from its place, his sister always taking on the heaviest\npart of the work for herself and ignoring her mother\'s warnings that\nshe would strain herself. This lasted a very long time. After\nlabouring at it for fifteen minutes or more his mother said it would\nbe better to leave the chest where it was, for one thing it was too\nheavy for them to get the job finished before Gregor\'s father got\nhome and leaving it in the middle of the room it would be in his way\nnever more, and for another thing it wasn\'t even sure that taking the\nfurniture away would really be any help to him. She thought just\nthe opposite; the sight of the bare walls saddened her right to her\nheart; and why wouldn\'t Gregor feel the same way about it, he\'d been\nused to this furniture in his room for a long time and it would make\nhim feel abandoned to be in an empty room like that. Then, quietly,\nalmost whispering as if wanting Gregor (whose whereabouts she did\nnot know) to hear not even the tone of her voice, as she was\nconvinced that he did not understand her words, she added "and by\ntaking the furniture away, won\'t it seem like we\'re showing that\nwe\'ve given up all hope of improvement and we\'re abandoning him to\nscope for himself? I think it\'d be best to leave the room exactly the\nway it was before so that when Gregor comes back to us again he\'ll\nfind everything unchanged and he\'ll be able to forget the time\nin\nbetween all the easier".\nHearing these words from his mother made Gregor realise that the\nlack of any direct human communication, along with the monotonous\nlife led by the family during these two months, must have made him\nconfused - he could think of no other way of explaining to himself\nwhy he had seriously wanted his room emptied out. Had he really\nwanted to transform his room into a cave, a warm room fitted out\nwith the nice furniture he had inherited? That would have let him\ncrawl around unimpeded in any direction, but it would also have let\nhim quickly forget his past when he had still been human. He had\ncome very close to forgetting, and it had only been the voice of his\nmother, unheard for so long, that had shaken him out of it.

do\neven more for him. Grete would probably be the only one who would\ndare enter a room dominated by Gregor crawling about the bare walls\nby himself.\n\nSo she refused to let her mother dissuade her. Gregor\'s mother\nalready looked uneasy in his room, she soon stopped speaking and\nhelped Gregor\'s sister to get the chest of drawers out with what\nstrength she had. The chest of drawers was something that Gregor\ncould do without if he had to, but the writing desk had to stay.\nHardly had the two women pushed the chest of drawers, groaning, out\nof the room than Gregor poked his head out from under the couch to\nsee what he could do about it. He meant to be as careful and\nconsiderate as he could, but, unfortunately, it was his mother who\ncame back first while Grete in the next room had her arms round the\nchest, pushing and pulling at it from side to side by herself\nwithout, of course, moving it an inch. His mother was not used to\nthe sight of Gregor, he might have made her ill, so Gregor hurried\nbackwards to the far end of the couch. In his startlement, though,\nhe was not able to prevent the sheet at its front from moving a\nlittle. It was enough to attract his mother\'s attention. She stood\nvery still, remained there a moment, and then went back out to\nGrete.\n\nGregor kept trying to assure himself that nothing unusual was\nhappening, it was just a few pieces of furniture being moved after\nall, but he soon had to admit that the women going to and fro, their\nlittle calls to each other, the scraping of the furniture on the\nfloor, all these things made him feel as if he were being assailed\nfrom all sides. With his head and legs pulled in against him and\nhis body pressed to the floor, he was forced to admit to himself\nthat he could not stand all of this much longer. They were emptying\nhis room out; taking away everything that was dear to him; they had\nalready taken out the chest containing his fretsaw and other tools;\nnow they threatened to remove the writing desk with its place\nclearly worn into the floor, the desk where he had done his homework\nas a business trainee, at high school, even while he had been at\ninfant school--he really could not wait any longer to see whether\nthe two women\'s intentions were good. He had nearly forgotten they\nwere there anyway, as they were now too tired to say anything while\nthey worked and he could only hear their feet as they stepped\nheavily on the floor.\n\nSo, while the women were leant against the desk in the other room\n-catching their breath, he sallied out, changed direction four times\nnot knowing what he should save first before his attention was\nsuddenly caught by the picture on the wall - which was already\ndenuded of everything else that had been on it - of the lady dressed\nin copious fur. He hurried up onto the picture and pressed himself\nagainst its glass, it held him firmly and felt good on his hot\nbelly. This picture at least, now totally covered by Gregor,\nwould\ncertainly be taken away by no-one. He turned his head to face the\nroom into the living room so that he could watch the women when they\ncame back.\n\nThey had not allowed themselves a long rest and came back quite\nsoon; Grete had put her arm around her mother and was nearly\ncarrying her. "What shall we take now, then?", said Grete and\nlooked around. Her eyes met those of Gregor on the wall. Perhaps\nonly because her mother was there, she remained calm, bent her face\nonto her so that she would not look round and said, albeit hurriedly\nand with a tremor in her voice: "Come on, let\'s go back in the\nliving room for a while?" Gregor could see what Grete had in mind,\nshe wanted to take her mother somewhere safe and then chase him down\nfrom the wall. Well, she could certainly try it! He sat unyielding\non his picture. He would rather jump at Grete\n's face.\nBut Grete\n's words had made her mother quite worried, she stepped to\nnone side, saw the enormous brown patch against the flowers of the\nwallpaper, and before she even realised it was Gregor that she saw\nscreamed: "Oh God, oh God!" Arms outstretched, she fell onto the\ncoUCH as if she had given up everything and stayed there immobile.\n"Gregor!" shouted his sister, glowering at him and shaking her fist.\nThat was the first word she had spoken to him directly since his\ntransformation. She ran into the other room to fetch some kind of\nsmelling salts to bring her mother out of her faint; Gregor wanted\nnto help too - he could save his picture later, although he stuck\nfast to the glass and had to pull himself off by force; then he,\nntoo, ran into the next room as if he could advise his sister like in\nthe old days; but he had to just stand behind her doing nothing; she\nwas looking into various bottles, he startled her when she turned\nround; a bottle fell to the ground and broke; a splinter cut\nGregor\n's face, some kind of caustic medicine splashed all over him;\nnow, without delaying any longer, Grete took hold of all the bottles\nshe could and ran with them in to her mother; she slammed the door\nshut with her foot. So now Gregor was shut out from his mother,\nwho, because of him, might be near to death; he could not open the\nndoor if he did not want to chase his sister away, and she had to\nstay with his mother; there was nothing for him to do but wait; and,\noppressed with anxiety and self-reproach, he began to crawl about,\nhe crawled over everything, walls, furniture, ceiling, and finally\nin his confusion as the whole room began to spin around him he fell\ndown into the middle of the dinner table.\n\nHe lay there for a while, numb and immobile, all around him it was\nquiet, maybe that was a good sign. Then there was someone at the\nndoor. The maid, of course, had locked herself in her kitchen so\nthat Grete would have to go and answer it. His father had arrived\nhome. "What\n's happened?" were his first words; Grete\n's appearance\nmust have made everything clear to him. She answered him with\nsubdued voice, and openly pressed her face into his chest: "Mother\n's\nfainted, but she\n's better now. Gregor got out." "Just as I\nexpected", said his father, "just as I always said, but you women\nwouldn\n't listen, would you." It was clear to Gregor that Grete had\nnot said enough and that his father took it to mean that something\nbad had happened, that he was responsible for some act of violence.\nThat meant Gregor would now have to try to calm his father, as he\ndid not have the time to explain things to him even if that had been\npossible. So he fled to the door of his room and pressed himself\nagainst it so that his father, when he came in from the hall, could\nsee straight away that Gregor had the best intentions and would go\nback into his room without delay, that it would not be necessary to\ndrive him back but that they had only to open the door and he would\ndisappear.\n\nHis father, though, was not in the mood to notice subtleties like\nthat; "Ah!", he shouted as he came in, sounding as if he were both\nangry and glad at the same time. Gregor drew his head back from the\nndoor and lifted it towards his father. He really had not imagined\nhis father the way he stood there now; of late, with his new habit\nof crawling about, he had neglected to pay attention to what was\ngoing on the rest of the flat the way he had done before. He really\nought to have expected things to have changed, but still, still, was\nthat really his father? The same tired man as used to be laying\nthere entombed in his bed when Gregor came back from his business\ntrips, who would receive him sitting in the armchair in his\nnightgown when he came back in the evenings; who was hardly even\nable to stand up but, as a sign of his pleasure, would just raise\nhis arms and who, on the couple of times a year when they went for a\nwalk together on a Sunday or public holiday wrapped up tightly in\nhis overcoat between Gregor and his mother, would always labour his\nway forward a little more slowly than them, who were already walking\nslowly for his sake; who would place his stick down carefully and,\nif he wanted to say something would invariably stop and gather his\ncompanions around him. He was standing up straight enough now;\ndressed in a smart blue uniform with gold buttons, the sort worn by\nthe employees at the banking institute; above the high, stiff collar\nof the coat his strong double-chin emerged; under the bushy\neyebrows, his piercing, dark eyes looked out fresh and alert; his\nnormally unkempt white hair was combed down painfully close to his\nscalp. He took his cap, with its gold monogram from, probably, some\nbank, and threw it in an arc right across the room onto the sofa,\nput his hands in his trouser pockets, pushing back the bottom of his\nlong uniform coat, and, with look of determination, walked towards\nGregor. He probably did not even know himself what he had in mind,\nbut nonetheless lifted his feet unusually high. Gregor was amazed\nat the enormous size of the soles of his boots, but wasted no time\nwith that - he knew full well, right from the first day of his new\nlife, that his father thought it necessary to always be extremely\nstrict with him. And so he ran up to his father, stopped when his\nfather stopped, scurried forwards again when he moved, even\nslightly. In this way they went round the room several times\nwithout anything decisive happening, without even giving the\nimpression of a chase as everything went so slowly. Gregor remained\nall this time on the floor, largely because he feared his father\nmight see it as especially provoking if he fled onto the wall or\nceiling. Whatever he did, Gregor had to admit that he certainly\nwould not be able to keep up this running about for long, as for\neach step his father took he had to carry out countless movements.\nHe became noticeably short of breath, even in his earlier life his\nlungs had not been very reliable. Now, as he lurched about in his\nefforts to muster all the strength he could for running he could\nhardly keep his eyes open; his thoughts became too slow for him to\nthink of any other way of saving himself than running; he almost\nforgot that the walls were there for him to use although, here, they\nwere concealed behind carefully carved furniture full of notches and\nprotrusions - then, right beside him, lightly tossed, something flew\ndown and rolled in front of him. It was an apple; then another one\nimmediately flew at him; Gregor froze in shock; there was no longer\nany point in running as his father had decided to bombard him. He\nhad filled his pockets with fruit from the bowl on the sideboard and\nnow, without even taking the time for careful aim, threw one apple\nafter another. These little, red apples rolled about on the floor,\nknocking into each other as if they had electric motors. An apple\nthrown without much force glanced against Gregor's back and slid off without doing any harm. Another one however, immediately following it, hit squarely and lodged in his back; Gregor wanted to drag himself away, as if he could remove the surprising, the incredible pain by changing his position; but he felt as if nailed to the spot and spread himself out, all his senses in confusion. The last thing he saw was the door of his room being pulled open, his sister was screaming, his mother ran out in front of her in her blouse (as his sister had taken off some of her clothes after she had fainted to make it easier for her to breathe), she ran to his father, her skirts unfastened and sliding one after another to the ground, stumbling over the skirts she pushed herself to his father, her arms around him, uniting herself with him totally - now Gregor lost his ability to see anything - her hands behind his father's head begging him to spare Gregor's life.

Because of his injuries, Gregor had lost much of his mobility - probably permanently. He had been reduced to the condition of an ancient invalid and it took him long, long minutes to crawl across his room - crawling over the ceiling was out of the question - but this deterioration in his condition was fully (in his opinion) made up for by the door to the living room being left open every evening. He got into the habit of closely watching it for one or two hours before it was opened and then, lying in the darkness of his room where he could not be seen from the living room, he could watch the family in the light of the dinner table and listen to their conversation - with everyone's permission, in a way, and thus quite differently from before.

They no longer held the lively conversations of earlier times, of course, the ones that Gregor always thought about with longing when he was tired and getting into the damp bed in some small hotel room.

All of them were usually very quiet nowadays. Soon after dinner, his father would go to sleep in his chair; his mother and sister would urge each other to be quiet; his mother, bent deeply under the lamp, would sew fancy underwear for a fashion shop; his sister, who had taken a sales job, learned shorthand and French in the evenings so that she might be able to get a better position later on.

Gregor's father would slumber where he was, fully dressed, as if always ready to serve and expecting to hear the voice of his superior even here. The uniform had not been new to start with, but as a result of this it slowly became even shabbier despite the efforts of Gregor's mother and sister to look after it. Gregor would often spend the whole evening looking at all the stains on this coat, with its gold buttons always kept polished and shiny, \nwhile the old man in it would sleep, highly uncomfortable but \npeaceful. \n\nAs soon as it struck ten, Gregor\ 's mother would speak gently to his\ nfather to wake him and try to persuade him to go to bed, as he\ncouldn\ 't sleep properly where he was and he really had to get his\nsleep if he was to be up at six to get to work. But since he had\neen in work he had become more obstinate and would always insist on\nstaying longer at the table, even though he regularly fell asleep\land it was then harder than ever to persuade him to exchange the\ncchair for his bed. Then, however much mother and sister would\nipertune him with little reproaches and warnings he would keep\nslowly shaking his head for a quarter of an hour with his eyes\nclosed and refusing to get up. Gregor\ 's mother would tug at his\nsleeve, whisper endearments into his ear, Gregor\ 's sister would\neave her work to help her mother, but nothing would have any effect\on him. He would just sink deeper into his chair. Only when the\ntwo women took him under the arms he would abruptly open his eyes, \nlook at them one after the other and say: "What a life! This is what\neace I get in my old age!" And supported by the two women he would\nlift himself up carefully as if he were carrying the greatest load\nhimself, let the women take him to the door, send them off and carry\on by himself while Gregor\ 's mother would throw down her needle and\nhis sister her pen so that they could run after his father and\ncontinue being of help to him. \n\nWho, in this tired and overworked family, would have had time to\ngive more attention to Gregor than was absolutely necessary? The\nhousehold budget became even smaller; so now the maid was dismissed; \nan enormous, thick-boned charwoman with white hair that flapped\naround her head came every morning and evening to do the heaviest\nwork; everything else was looked after by Gregor\ 's mother on top of\nthe large amount of sewing work she did. Gregor even learned,\nlistening to the evening conversation about what price they had\nhoped for, that several items of jewellery belonging to the family\nhad been sold, even though both mother and sister had been very fond\nof wearing them at functions and celebrations. But the loudest\ncomplaint was that although the flat was much too big for their\npresent circumstances, they could not move out of it, there was no\nimaginable way of transferring Gregor to the new address. He could\nsee quite well, though, that there were more reasons than\nconsideration for him that made it difficult for them to move, it\nwould have been quite easy to transport him in any suitable crate\nwith a few air holes in it; the main thing holding the family back\nfrom their decision to move was much more to do with their total\ndespair, and the thought that they had been struck with a misfortune\nunlike anything experienced by anyone else they knew or were related\nto. They carried out absolutely everything that the world expects\nfrom poor people, Gregor\ 's father brought bank employees their\nbreakfast, his mother sacrificed herself by washing clothes for\nstrangers, his sister ran back and forth behind her desk at the\nbehest of the customers, but they just did not have the strength to\nndo any more. And the injury in Gregor\ 's back began to hurt as much\nas when it was new. After they had come back from taking his father\nto bed Gregor\ 's mother and sister would now leave their work where\nit was and sit close together, cheek to cheek; his mother would\npoint to Gregor\ 's room and say "Close that door, Grete", and then, \nwhen he was in the dark again, they would sit in the next room and\nttheir tears would mingle, or they would simply sit there staring\ndry-eyed at the table.\n\nGregor hardly slept at all, either night or day. Sometimes he would\ntthink of taking over the family\\'s affairs, just like before, the\tnext time the door was opened; he had long forgotten about his boss\inand the chief clerk, but they would appear again in his thoughts,\nthe salesmen and the apprentices, that stupid teaboy, two or three\nfriends from other businesses, one of the chambermaids from a\nprovincial hotel, a tender memory that appeared and disappeared\nagain, a cashier from a hat shop for whom his attention had been\nserious but too slow, - all of them appeared to him, mixed together\nwith strangers and others he had forgotten, but instead of helping\nhim and his family they were all of them inaccessible, and he was\nnglad when they disappeared. Other times he was not at all in the\nmood to look after his family, he was filled with simple rage about\nthe lack of attention he was shown, and although he could think of\nnothing he would have wanted, he made plans of how he could get into\nthe pantry where he could take all the things he was entitled to,\neven if he was not hungry. Gregor\\'s sister no longer thought about\nhow she could please him but would hurriedly push some food or\nother\ninto his room with her foot before she rushed out to work in the\nmorning and at midday, and in the evening she would sweep it away\nagain with the broom, indifferent as to whether it had been eaten or\nmore often than not - had been left totally untouched. She still\ncleared up the room in the evening, but now she could not have been\nmany quicker about it. Smears of dirt were left on the walls, here\nand there were little balls of dust and filth. At first, Gregor\nwent into one of the worst of these places when his sister arrived\nas a reproach to her, but he could have stayed there for weeks\nwithout his sister doing anything about it; she could see the dirt\nas well as he could but she had simply decided to leave him to it.\nAt the same time she became touchy in a way that was quite new for\nher and which everyone in the family understood - cleaning up\nGregor\\'s room was for her and her alone. Gregor\\'s mother did once\nthoroughly clean his room, and needed to use several bucketfuls of\nwater to do it - although that much dampness also made Gregor ill\nand he lay flat on the couch, bitter and immobile. But his mother\nwas to be punished still more for what she had done, as hardly had\nhis sister arrived home in the evening than she noticed the change\nin Gregor\\'s room and, highly aggrieved, ran back into the living\nroom where, despite her mothers raised and imploring hands, she\nbroke into convulsive tears. Her father, of course, was startled\nout of his chair and the two parents looked on astonished and\nhelpless; then they, too, became agitated; Gregor\\'s father, standing\nonto the right of his mother, accused her of not leaving the cleaning\nof Gregor\\'s room to his sister; from her left, Gregor\\'s sister\nscreamed at her that she was never to clean Gregor\\'s room again;\nwhile his mother tried to draw his father, who was beside himself\nwith anger, into the bedroom; his sister, quaking with tears,\nthumped on the table with her small fists; and Gregor hissed in\nanger that no-one had even thought of closing the door to save him\nthe sight of this and all its noise.\n\nGregor\\'s sister was exhausted from going out to work, and looking\nafter Gregor as she had done before was even more work for her, but\neven so his mother ought certainly not to have taken her place.\nGregor, on the other hand, ought not to be neglected. Now, though,\nthe charwoman was here. This elderly widow, with a robust bone\nstructure that made her able to withstand the hardest of things in\nher long life, wasn't really repelled by Gregor. Just by chance one\nday, rather than any real curiosity, she opened the door to Gregor's\nroom and found herself face to face with him. He was taken totally\nby surprise, no-one was chasing him but he began to rush to and fro\nwhile she just stood there in amazement with her hands crossed in\nfront of her. From then on she never failed to open the door\nslightly every evening and morning and look briefly in on him. At\nfirst she would call to him as she did so with words that she\nprobably considered friendly, such as "come on then, you old\ndung-beetle!", or "look at the old dung-beetle there!" Gregor never\nresponded to being spoken to in that way, but just remained where he\nwas without moving as if the door had never even been opened. If\nonly they had told this charwoman to clean up his room every day\ninstead of letting her disturb him for no reason whenever she felt\nlike it! One day, early in the morning while a heavy rain struck the\nwindowpanes, perhaps indicating that spring was coming, she began to\nspeak to him in that way once again. Gregor was so resentful of it\nthat he started to move toward her, he was slow and infirm, but it\nwas like a kind of attack. Instead of being afraid, the charwoman\njust lifted up one of the chairs from near the door and stood there\nwith her mouth open, clearly intending not to close her mouth until\nthe chair in her hand had been slammed down into Gregor's back.\n"Aren't you coming any closer, then?", she asked when Gregor turned\nround again, and she calmly put the chair back in the corner.\n\nGregor had almost entirely stopped eating. Only if he happened to\nfind himself next to the food that had been prepared for him he\nmight take some of it into his mouth to play with it, leave it there\na few hours and then, more often than not, spit it out again. At\nfirst he thought it was distress at the state of his room that\nstopped him eating, but he had soon got used to the changes made\nthere. They had got into the habit of putting things into this room\nthat they had no room for anywhere else, and there were now many\nsuch things as one of the rooms in the flat had been rented out to\nthree gentlemen. These earnest gentlemen - all three of them had\nfull beards, as Gregor learned peering through the crack in the\ndoors\never day - were painfully insistent on things'\nbeing tidy. This\nmeant not only in their own room but, since they had taken a room in\nthis establishment, in the entire flat and especially in the\nkitchen. Unnecessary clutter was something they could not tolerate,\nespecially if it was dirty. They had moreover brought most of their\nown furnishings and equipment with them. For this reason, many\nthings had become superfluous which, although they could not be\nsold, the family did not wish to discard. All these things found\ntheir way into Gregor's room. The dustbins from the kitchen found\ntheir way in there too. The charwoman was always in a hurry, and\nanything she couldn't use for the time being she would just chuck\nin\nthere. He, fortunately, would usually see no more than the object\nand the hand that held it. The woman most likely meant to fetch the\nthings back out again when she had time and the opportunity, or to\nthrow everything out in one go, but what actually happened was that\nthey were left where they landed when they had first been thrown\nunless Gregor made his way through the junk and moved it somewhere\nelse. At first he moved it because, with no other room free where\nhe could crawl about, he was forced to, but later on he came to\nenjoy it although moving about in that way left him sad and tired to\ndeath, and he would remain immobile for hours afterwards.\n\nThe gentlemen who rented the room would sometimes take their evening\nmeal at home in the living room that was used by everyone, and so\nthe door to this room was often kept closed in the evening. But\nGregor found it easy to give up having the door open, he had, after\nall, often failed to make use of it when it was open and, without\nthe family having noticed it, lain in his room in its darkest\ncorner. One time, though, the charwoman left the door to the living\nroom slightly open, and it remained open when the gentlemen who\nrented the room came in in the evening and the light was put on.\nThey sat up at the table where, formerly, Gregor had taken his meals\nwith his father and mother, they unfolded the serviettes and picked\nup their knives and forks. Gregor's mother immediately appeared in\nthe doorway with a dish of meat and soon behind her came his sister\nwith a dish piled high with potatoes. The food was steaming, and\nfilled the room with its smell. The gentlemen bent over the dishes\nset in front of them as if they wanted to test the food before\neating it, and the gentleman in the middle, who seemed to count as\nan authority for the other two, did indeed cut off a piece of meat\nwhile it was still in its dish, clearly wishing to establish whether\nit was sufficiently cooked or whether it should be sent back to the\nkitchen. It was to his satisfaction, and Gregor's mother and\nsister, who had been looking on anxiously, began to breathe again\nand smiled.\n\nThe family themselves ate in the kitchen. Nonetheless, Gregor's\nfather came into the living room before he went into the kitchen,\nbowed once with his cap in his hand and did his round of the table.\n\nThe gentlemen stood as one, and mumbled something into their beards.\nThen, once they were alone, they ate in near perfect silence. It\nseemed remarkable to Gregor that above all the various noises of\neating their chewing teeth could still be heard, as if they had\nwanted to show Gregor that you need teeth in order to eat and it was\nnot possible to perform anything with jaws that are toothless\nhowever nice they might be. "I'd like to eat something", said\nGregor anxiously, "but not anything like they're eating. They do\nfeed themselves. And here I am, dying!"\n\nThroughout all this time, Gregor could not remember having heard the\nviolin being played, but this evening it began to be heard from the\nkitchen. The three gentlemen had already finished their meal, the\none in the middle had produced a newspaper, given a page to each of\nthe others, and now they leant back in their chairs reading them and\nsmoking. When the violin began playing they became attentive, stood\nup and went on tip-toe over to the door of the hallway where they\nstood pressed against each other. Someone must have heard them in\nthe kitchen, as Gregor's father called out: "Is the playing perhaps\nunpleasant for the gentlemen? We can stop it straight away." "On\nthe contrary", said the middle gentleman, "would the young lady not\nlike to come in and play for us here in the room, where it is, after\nall, much more cosy and comfortable?" "Oh yes, we'd love to",\ncalled back Gregor's father as if he had been the violin player\nhimself. The gentlemen stepped back into the room and waited.\nGregor\'s father soon appeared with the music stand, his mother with\nthe music and his sister with the violin. She calmly prepared\neverything for her to begin playing; his parents, who had never\nrented a room out before and therefore showed an exaggerated\ncourtesy towards the three gentlemen, did not even dare to sit on\ntheir own chairs; his father leant against the door with his right\nhand pushed in between two buttons on his uniform coat; his mother,\nthough, was offered a seat by one of the gentlemen and sat - leaving\nthe chair where the gentleman happened to have placed it - out of\nthe way in a corner.\n\nHis sister began to play; father and mother paid close attention,\none on each side, to the movements of her hands. Drawn in by the\nplaying, Gregor had dared to come forward a little and already had\nhis head in the living room. Before, he had taken great pride in\nhow considerate he was but now it hardly occurred to him that he had\nbecome so thoughtless about the others. What's more, there was now\nall the more reason to keep himself hidden as he was covered in the\ndust that lay everywhere in his room and flew up at the slightest\nmovement; he carried threads, hairs, and remains of food about on\nhis back and sides; he was much too indifferent to everything now to\nlay on his back and wipe himself on the carpet like he had used to\ndo several times a day. And despite this condition, he was not too\nshy to move forward a little onto the immaculate floor of the living\nroom.\n\nNo-one noticed him, though. The family was totally preoccupied with\nthe violin playing; at first, the three gentlemen had put their\nhands in their pockets and come up far too close behind the music\nstand to look at all the notes being played, and they must have\ndisturbed Gregor's sister, but soon, in contrast with the family,\nthey withdrew back to the window with their heads sunk and talking\nto each other at half volume, and they stayed by the window while\nGregor's father observed them anxiously. It really now seemed very\nobvious that they had expected to hear some beautiful or\nentertaining violin playing but had been disappointed, that they had\nhad enough of the whole performance and it was only now out of\npoliteness that they allowed their peace to be disturbed. It was\nespecially unnerving, the way they all blew the smoke from their\ncigarettes upwards from their mouth and noses. Yet Gregor's\nsister\nwas playing so beautifully. Her face was leant to one side,\nfollowing the lines of music with a careful and melancholy\nexpression. Gregor crawled a little further forward, keeping his\nhead close to the ground so that he could meet her eyes if the\nchance came. Was he an animal if music could captivate him so? It\nseemed to him that he was being shown the way to the unknown\nnourishment he had been yearning for. He was determined to make his\nway forward to his sister and tug at her skirt to show her she might\ncome into his room with her violin, as no-one appreciated her\nplaying here as much as he would. He never wanted to let her out of\nhis room, not while he lived, anyway; his shocking appearance\nshould, for once, be of some use to him; he wanted to be at every\ndoors of his room at once to hiss and spit at the attackers; his\nsister should not be forced to stay with him, though, but stay of\nher own free will; she would sit beside him on the couch with her\nnear bent down to him while he told her how he had always intended to\nsend her to the conservatory, how he would have told everyone about\nit last Christmas - had Christmas really come and gone already? - if\nthis misfortune hadn\t got in the way, and refuse to let anyone\ndissuade him from it. On hearing all this, his sister would break\nout in tears of emotion, and Gregor would climb up to her shoulder\nand kiss her neck, which, since she had been going out to work, she\nhad kept free without any necklace or collar.\n\n"Mr. Samsa!", shouted the middle gentleman to Gregor's father,\npointing, without wasting any more words, with his forefinger at\nGregor as he slowly moved forward. The violin went silent, the\nmiddle of the three gentlemen first smiled at his two friends,\nshaking his head, and then looked back at Gregor. His father seemed\nonto think it more important to calm the three gentlemen before\nDriving Gregor out, even though they were not at all upset and\nseemed to think Gregor was more entertaining than the violin playing\nhad been. He rushed up to them with his arms spread out and\nattempted to drive them back into their room at the same time as\ntrying to block their view of Gregor with his body. Now they did\nbecome a little annoyed, and it was not clear whether it was his\nfather's behaviour that annoyed them or the dawning realisation that\nthey had had a neighbour like Gregor in the next room without\nknowing it. They asked Gregor's father for explanations, raised\ntheir arms like he had, tugged excitedly at their beards and moved\nback towards their room only very slowly. Meanwhile Gregor's sister\nhad overcome the despair she had fallen into when her playing was\nsuddenly interrupted. She had let her hands drop and let violin and\nbow hang limply for a while but continued to look at the music as if\nstill playing, but then she suddenly pulled herself together, lay\nthe instrument on her mother's lap who still sat laboriously\nstruggling for breath where she was, and ran into the next room\nwhich, under pressure from her father, the three gentlemen were more\nquickly moving toward. Under his sister's experienced hand, the\npillows and covers on the beds flew up and were put into order and\nshe had already finished making the beds and slipped out again\nbefore the three gentlemen had reached the room. Gregor's father\nseemed so obsessed with what he was doing that he forgot all the\nrespect he owed to his tenants. He urged them and pressed them\nuntil, when he was already at the door of the room, the middle of\nthe three gentlemen shouted like thunder and stamped his foot and\nthereby brought Gregor's father to a halt. "I declare here and\nnow", he said, raising his hand and glancing at Gregor's mother and\nsister to gain their attention too, "that with regard to the\nrepugnant conditions that prevail in this flat and with this family"\nhere he looked briefly but decisively at the floor - "I give\nimmediate notice on my room. For the days that I have been living\nhere I will, of course, pay nothing at all, on the contrary I will\nconsider whether to proceed with some kind of action for damages\nfrom you, and believe me it would be very easy to set out the\ngrounds for such an action." He was silent and looked straight\nahead as if waiting for something. And indeed, his two friends\njoined in with the words: "And we also give immediate notice." With\nthat, he took hold of the door handle and slammed the door.\n\nGregor's father staggered back to his seat, feeling his way with his\nhands, and fell into it; it looked as if he was stretching himself\nout for his usual evening nap but from the uncontrolled way his head\nepted nodding it could be seen that he was not sleeping at all.\nThroughout all this, Gregor had lain still where the three gentlemen\nhad first seen him. His disappointment at the failure of his plan,\nand perhaps also because he was weak from hunger, made it impossible\nfor him to move. He was sure that everyone would turn on him any\nmoment, and he waited. He was not even startled out of this state\nwhen the violin on his mother's lap fell from her trembling fingers\nand landed loudly on the floor.\n\n"Father, Mother", said his sister, hitting the table with her hand\nas introduction, "we can't carry on like this. Maybe you can't see\nit, but I can. I don't want to call this monster my brother, all I\ncan say is: we have to try and get rid of it. We've done all that's\nhumanly possible to look after it and be patient, I don't think\nanyone could accuse us of doing anything wrong."\n\n"She's absolutely right", said Gregor's father to himself. His\nmother, who still had not had time to catch her breath, began to\ncough dully, her hand held out in front of her and a deranged\nexpression in her eyes.\n\nGregor's sister rushed to his mother and put her hand on her\nforehead. Her words seemed to give Gregor's father some more\nindefinite ideas. He sat upright, played with his uniform cap between\nthe plates left by the three gentlemen after their meal, and\noccasionally looked down at Gregor as he lay there immobile.\n\n"We have to try and get rid of it", said Gregor's sister, now\nspeaking only to her father, as her mother was too occupied with\ncoughing to listen, "it'll be the death of both of you, I can see it\ncoming. We can't all work as hard as we have to and then come home\nto be tortured like this, we can't endure it. I can't endure it any\nmore." And she broke out so heavily in tears that they flowed down\nthe face of her mother, and she wiped them away with mechanical hand\nmovements.\n\n"My child", said her father with sympathy and obvious understanding,\n"what are we to do?"\n\nHis sister just shrugged her shoulders as a sign of the helplessness\nand tears that had taken hold of her, displacing her earlier\nuncertainty.\n\n"If he could just understand us", said his father almost as a\nquestion; his sister shook her hand vigorously through her tears as\na sign that of that there was no question.\n\n"If he could just understand us", repeated Gregor's father, closing\nhis eyes in acceptance of his sister's certainty that that was quite\nimpossible, "then perhaps we could come to some kind of arrangement\nwith him. But as it is ..." \n\n"It's got to go", shouted his sister, "that's the only way, Father.\nYou've got to get rid of the idea that that's Gregor. We've only\nharmed ourselves by believing it for so long. How can that be?\nGregor? If it were Gregor he would have seen long ago that it's not\npossible for human beings to live with an animal like that and he\\nwould have gone of his own free will. We wouldn't have a brother\nany more, then, but we could carry on with our lives and remember\nhim with respect. As it is this animal is persecuting us, it's\nand driven out our tenants, it obviously wants to take over the whole\nflat and force us to sleep on the streets. Father, look, just\nlook", she suddenly screamed, "he's starting again!" In her alarm,\nwhich was totally beyond Gregor's comprehension, his sister even\nabandoned his mother as she pushed herself vigorously out of her\nchair as if more willing to sacrifice her own mother than stay\nanywhere near Gregor.

She rushed over to behind her father, who had\ncome excited merely because she was and stood up half raising his\nhands in front of Gregor\'s sister as if to protect her.\n\nBut Gregor had had no intention of frightening anyone, least of all\nhis sister. All he had done was begin to turn round so that he\ncould go back into his room, although that was in itself quite\nstartling as his pain-wracked condition meant that turning round\nrequired a great deal of effort and he was using his head to help\nhimself do it, repeatedly raising it and striking it against the\nfloor. He stopped and looked round. They seemed to have realised\nhis good intention and had only been alarmed briefly. Now they all\nlooked at him in unhappy silence. His mother lay in her chair with\nher legs stretched out and pressed against each other, her eyes\nnearly closed with exhaustion; his sister sat next to his father\nwith her arms around his neck.\n\n"Maybe now they'll let me turn round", thought Gregor and went back\nonto work. He could not help panting loudly with the effort and had\nsometimes to stop and take a rest. No-one was making him rush any\nmore, everything was left up to him. As soon as he had finally\nfinished turning round he began to move straight ahead. He was\namazed at the great distance that separated him from his room, and\ncould not understand how he had covered that distance in his weak\nstate a little while before and almost without noticing it. He\nconcentrated on crawling as fast as he could and hardly noticed that\nthere was not a word, not any cry, from his family to distract him.\nHe did not turn his head until he had reached the doorway. He did\nnot turn it all the way round as he felt his neck becoming stiff,\nbut it was nonetheless enough to see that nothing behind him had\nchanged, only his sister had stood up. With his last glance he saw\nthat his mother had now fallen completely asleep.\n\nHe was hardly inside his room before the door was hurriedly shut,\nbolted and locked. The sudden noise behind Gregor so startled him\nthat his little legs collapsed under him. It was his sister who had\nbeen in so much of a rush. She had been standing there waiting and\nsprung forward lightly, Gregor had not heard her coming at all, and\nas she turned the key in the lock she said loudly to her parents "At\nlast!".\n\n"What now, then?", Gregor asked himself as he looked round in the\ndarkness. He soon made the discovery that he could no longer move\nat all. This was no surprise to him, it seemed rather that being\nable to actually move around on those spindly little legs until then\nwas unnatural. He also felt relatively comfortable. It is true\nthat his entire body was aching, but the pain seemed to be slowly\ngetting weaker and weaker and would finally disappear altogether.\nHe could already hardly feel the decayed apple in his back or the\ninflamed area around it, which was entirely covered in white dust.\nHe thought back of his family with emotion and love. If it was\npossible, he felt that he must go away even more strongly than his\nsister. He remained in this state of empty and peaceful rumination\nuntil he heard the clock tower strike three in the morning. He\nwatched as it slowly began to get light everywhere outside the\nwindow too. Then, without his willing it, his head sank down\ncompletely, and his last breath flowed weakly from his nostrils.\n\nWhen the cleaner came in early in the morning - they'd often asked\nher not to keep slamming the doors but with her strength and in her\nhurry she still did, so that everyone in the flat knew when she'd\arrived and from then on it was impossible to sleep in peace - she\nmade her usual brief look in on Gregor and at first found nothing\nspecial. She thought he was laying there so still on purpose,\nplaying the martyr; she attributed all possible understanding to\nhim. She happened to be holding the long broom in her hand, so she\ntried to tickle Gregor with it from the doorway. When she had no\nsuccess with that she tried to make a nuisance of herself and poked\nat him a little, and only when she found she could shove him across\nthe floor with no resistance at all did she start to pay attention.\nShe soon realised what had really happened, opened her eyes wide,\nwhistled to herself, but did not waste time to yank open the bedroom\nndoors and shout loudly into the darkness of the bedrooms: "Come and\n'ave a look at this, it's dead, just lying there, stone dead!"\nMr. and Mrs. Samsa sat upright there in their marriage bed and had\nnto make an effort to get over the shock caused by the cleaner before\nthey could grasp what she was saying. But then, each from his own\ninside, they hurried out of bed. Mr. Samsa threw the blanket over his\nshoulders, Mrs. Samsa just came out in her nightdress; and that is\nhow they went into Gregor's room. On the way they opened the door\nnto the living room where Grete had been sleeping since the three\ngentlemen had moved in; she was fully dressed as if she had never\nbeen asleep, and the paleness of her face seemed to confirm this.\n"Dead?", asked Mrs. Samsa, looking at the charwoman enquiringly,\neven though she could have checked for herself and could have known\nit even without checking. "That's what I said", replied the\ncleaner, and to prove it she gave Gregor's body another shove with\nthe broom, sending it sideways across the floor. Mrs. Samsa made a\nmovement as if she wanted to hold back the broom, but did not\ncomplete it. "Now then", said Mr. Samsa, "let's give thanks to God\nfor that". He crossed himself, and the three women followed his\nexample. Grete, who had not taken her eyes from the corpse, said:\n"Just look how thin he was. He didn't eat anything for so long.\nThe food came out again just the same as when it went in". Gregor's\nbody was indeed completely dried up and flat, they had not seen it\nuntil then, but now he was not lifted up on his little legs, nor did\nhe do anything to make them look away.\n\n"Grete, come with us in here for a little while", said Mrs. Samsa\nwith a pained smile, and Grete followed her parents into the bedroom\nbut not without looking back at the body. The cleaner shut the door\nand opened the window wide. Although it was still early in the\nmorning the fresh air had something of warmth mixed in with it. It\nwas already the end of March, after all.\n\nThe three gentlemen stepped out of their room and looked round\nin\namazement for their breakfasts; they had been forgotten about.\n"Where is our breakfast?", the middle gentleman asked the cleaner\nirritably. She just put her finger on her lips and made a quick and\nsilent sign to the men that they might like to come into Gregor's\nroom. They did so, and stood around Gregor's corpse with their\nhands in the pockets of their well-worn coats. It was now quite\nlight in the room.\n\nThen the door of the bedroom opened and Mr. Samsa appeared in his\nuniform with his wife on one arm and his daughter on the other. All\nof them had been crying a little; Grete now and then pressed her\nface against her father's arm.\n\n"Leave my home. Now!", said Mr. Samsa, indicating the door and\nwithout letting the women from him. "What do you mean?", asked the\ncmiddle of the three gentlemen somewhat disconcerted, and he smiled\nsweetly. The other two held their hands behind their backs and\nccontinually rubbed them together in gleeful anticipation of a loud\nquarrel which could only end in their favour. "I mean just what I\nsaid", answered Mr. Samsa, and, with his two companions, went in a\nstraight line towards the man. At first, he stood there still,\nlooking at the ground as if the contents of his head were\nrearranging themselves into new positions. "Alright, we'll go\nthen", he said, and looked up at Mr. Samsa as if he had been\nsuddenly overcome with humility and wanted permission again from\nMr. Samsa for his decision. Mr. Samsa merely opened his eyes wide\nand briefly nodded to him several times. At that, and without\ndelay, the man actually did take long strides into the front\nhallway; his two friends had stopped rubbing their hands some time\nbefore and had been listening to what was being said. Now they\njumped off after their friend as if taken with a sudden fear that\nMr. Samsa might go into the hallway in front of them and break the\nconnection with their leader. Once there, all three took their hats\nfrom the stand, took their sticks from the holder, bowed without a\nword and left the premises. Mr. Samsa and the two women followed\nthem out onto the landing; but they had had no reason to mistrust\nthe men's intentions and as they leaned over the landing they saw how\nthe three gentlemen made slow but steady progress down the many\nsteps. As they turned the corner on each floor they disappeared and\nwould reappear a few moments later; the further down they went, the\nmore that the Samsa family lost interest in them; when a butcher's\nboy, proud of posture with his tray on his head, passed them on his\nway up and came nearer than they were, Mr. Samsa and the women came\naway from the landing and went, as if relieved, back into the flat.\nThey decided the best way to make use of that day was for relaxation\nand to go for a walk; not only had they earned a break from work but\nthey were in serious need of it. So they sat at the table and wrote\nthree letters of excusal, Mr. Samsa to his employers, Mrs. Samsa\nto her contractor and Grete to her principal. The cleaner came in\nwhile they were writing to tell them she was going, she'd finished\nher work for that morning. The three of them at first just nodded\nwithout looking up from what they were writing, and it was only when\nthe cleaner still did not seem to want to leave that they looked up\nin irritation. "Well?", asked Mr. Samsa. The charwoman stood in\nthe doorway with a smile on her face as if she had some tremendous\ngood news to report, but would only do it if she was clearly asked\nonto. The almost vertical little ostrich feather on her hat, which\nhad been a source of irritation to Mr. Samsa all the time she had\nbeen working for them, swayed gently in all directions. "What is it\nyou want then?", asked Mrs. Samsa, whom the cleaner had the most\nrespect for. "Yes", she answered, and broke into a friendly laugh\nthat made her unable to speak straight away, "well then, that thing\nthere, you needn't worry about how you're going to get rid of it.\nThat's all been sorted out." Mrs. Samsa and Grete bent down over\ntheir letters as if intent on continuing with what they were\nwriting; Mr. Samsa saw that the cleaner wanted to start describing\neverything in detail but, with outstretched hand, he made it quite\nunclear that she was not to. So, as she was prevented from telling\nthem all about it, she suddenly remembered what a hurry she was in\nand, clearly peeved, called out "Cheerio then, everyone", turned\nround sharply and left, slamming the door terribly as she went.\n\n"Tonight she gets sacked", said Mr. Samsa, but he received no reply\nfrom either his wife or his daughter as the charwoman seemed to have\ndestroyed the peace they had only just gained. They got up and went\nover to the window where they remained with their arms around each\nother. Mr. Samsa twisted round in his chair to look at them and sat\nthere watching for a while. Then he called out: "Come here, then.\nLet's forget about all that old stuff, shall we. Come and give me a\nbit of attention". The two women immediately did as he said,\nhurrying over to him where they kissed him and hugged him and then\nthey quickly finished their letters.\n\nAfter that, the three of them left the flat together, which was\nsomething they had not done for months, and took the tram out to the\nopen country outside the town. They had the tram, filled with warm\nsunshine, all to themselves. Leant back comfortably on their seats,\nthey discussed their prospects and found that on closer examination\nthey were not at all bad - until then they had never asked each\nother about their work but all three had jobs which were very good\nand held particularly good promise for the future. The greatest\nimprovement for the time being, of course, would be achieved quite\nreadily by moving house; what they needed now was a flat that was\nsmaller and cheaper than the current one which had been chosen by\nGregor, one that was in a better location and, most of all, more\npractical. All the time, Grete was becoming livelier. With all the\nworry they had been having of late her cheeks had become pale, but,\nwhile they were talking, Mr. and Mrs. Samsa were struck, almost\nsimultaneously, with the thought of how their daughter was\nblossoming into a well built and beautiful young lady. They became\nquieter. Just from each other's glance and almost without knowing\nit they agreed that it would soon be time to find a good man for\nher. And, as if in confirmation of their new dreams and good\nintentions, as soon as they reached their destination Grete was the\nfirst to get up and stretch out her young body.\n\nEnd of the Project Gutenberg EBook of Metamorphosis, by Franz Kafka\nTranslated by David Wyllie.\n\n*** END OF THIS PROJECT GUTENBERG EBOOK METAMORPHOSIS ***\n\nThis file should be named 5200.txt or 5200.zip *****\nThis and all associated files of various formats will be found in:\n\n<http://www.gutenberg.net/5/2/0/5200/>\n\nUpdated editions will replace the previous one--the old editions\nwill be renamed.\n\nCreating the works from public domain print editions means that no\none owns a United States copyright in these works, so the Foundation\n(and you!) can copy and distribute it in the United States without\npermission and without paying copyright royalties.\nSpecial rules, set forth in the General Terms of Use part of this license,\napply to\ncopying and distributing Project Gutenberg-tm electronic works\nto\nprotect the PROJECT GUTENBERG-tm concept and trademark. 1.E.1.\n\n1.E.7. Do not charge a fee for access to, viewing, displaying,\nperforming, copying or distributing any Project Gutenberg-tm works\nunless you comply with paragraph 1.E.8 or 1.E.9.\n\n1.E.8. You may charge a reasonable fee for copies of or providing\naccess to or distributing Project Gutenberg-tm electronic works provided\nthat\n- You pay a royalty fee of 20% of the gross profits you derive from\nthe use of Project Gutenberg-tm works calculated using the method\nyou already use to calculate your applicable taxes. The fee is\nowed to the owner of the Project Gutenberg-tm trademark, but he\nhas agreed to donate royalties under this paragraph to the\nProject Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation. Royalty payments\nmust be paid within 60 days following each date on which you\nprepare (or are legally required to prepare) your periodic tax\nreturns. Royalty payments should be clearly marked as such and\nsent to the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation at the\naddress specified in Section 4, "Information about donations to\nthe Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation."\n\n- You provide a full refund of any money paid by a user who notifies\nyou in writing (or by e-mail) within 30 days of receipt that s/he\ndoes not agree to the terms of the full Project Gutenberg-tm\nLicense. You must require such a user to return or\ndestroy all copies of the works possessed in a physical medium\nand discontinue all use of and all access to other copies of\nProject Gutenberg-tm works.\n\n- You provide, in accordance with paragraph 1.F.3, a full refund of any\nmoney paid for a work or a replacement copy, if a defect in the\nelectronic work is discovered and reported to you within 90 days\nof receipt of the work.\n\n- You comply with all other terms of this agreement for free\ndistribution of Project Gutenberg-tm works.\n\n1.E.9. If you wish to charge a fee or distribute a Project Gutenberg-tm\\nelectronic work or group of works on different terms than are set\\nforth in this agreement, you must obtain permission in writing from\\nboth the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation and Michael\\nHart, the owner of the Project Gutenberg-tm trademark. Contact the\\nFoundation as set forth in Section 3 below.\n\n1.F.\n\n1.F.1. Project Gutenberg volunteers and employees expend considerable\\neffort to identify, do copyright research on, transcribe and proofread\\npublic domain works in creating the Project Gutenberg-tm\\ncollection. Despite these efforts, Project Gutenberg-tm electronic\\nworks, and the medium on which they may be stored, may contain\\n"Defects," such as, but not limited to, incomplete, inaccurate or\\ncorrupt data, transcription errors, a copyright or other intellectual\\nproperty infringement, a defective or damaged disk or other medium, a\\ncomputer virus, or computer codes that damage or cannot be read by\\nyour equipment.\n\n1.F.2. LIMITED WARRANTY, DISCLAIMER OF DAMAGES - Except for the \"Right\\nof Replacement or Refund\" described in paragraph 1.F.3, the Project\\nGutenberg Literary Archive Foundation, the owner of the Project\\nGutenberg-tm trademark, and any other party distributing a Project\\nGutenberg-tm electronic work under this agreement, disclaim all\\nliability to you for damages, costs and expenses, including legal\\nfees. YOU AGREE THAT YOU HAVE NO REMEDIES FOR NEGLIGENCE, STRICT\\nLIABILITY, BREACH OF WARRANTY OR BREACH OF CONTRACT EXCEPT THOSE\\nPROVIDED IN PARAGRAPH F3. YOU

AGREE THAT THE FOUNDATION, THE\nTRADEMARK OWNER, AND ANY DISTRIBUTOR UNDER THIS AGREEMENT WILL NOT BE\nLIABLE TO YOU FOR ACTUAL, DIRECT, INDIRECT, CONSEQUENTIAL, PUNITIVE OR\nINCIDENTAL DAMAGES EVEN IF YOU GIVE NOTICE OF THE POSSIBILITY OF SUCH\nDAMAGE.\n\n1.F.3. LIMITED RIGHT OF REPLACEMENT OR REFUND - If you discover a\nndefect in this electronic work within 90 days of receiving it, you can\nreceive a refund of the money (if any) you paid for it by sending a\nwritten explanation to the person you received the work from. If you\nreceived the work on a physical medium, you must return the medium with\nyour written explanation. The person or entity that provided you with\nthe defective work may elect to provide a replacement copy in lieu of a\nrefund. If you received the work electronically, the person or entity\nproviding it to you may choose to give you a second opportunity to\nreceive the work electronically in lieu of a refund. If the second copy\nis also defective, you may demand a refund in writing without further\nopportunities to fix the problem.\n\n1.F.4. Except for the limited right of replacement or refund set forth\nin paragraph 1.F.3, this work is provided to you 'AS-IS,' WITH NO OTHER\nWARRANTIES OF ANY KIND, EXPRESS OR IMPLIED, INCLUDING BUT NOT LIMITED TO\nWARRANTIES OF MERCHANTABILITY OR FITNESS FOR ANY PURPOSE.\n\n1.F.5. Some states do not allow disclaimers of certain implied\nwarranties or the exclusion or limitation of certain types of damages.\nIf any disclaimer or limitation set forth in this agreement violates the\nlaw of the state applicable to this agreement, the agreement shall be\ninterpreted to make the maximum disclaimer or limitation permitted by\nthe applicable state law. The invalidity or unenforceability of any\nprovision of this agreement shall not void the remaining provisions.\n\n1.F.6. INDEMNITY - You agree to indemnify and hold the Foundation, the\ntrademark owner, any agent or employee of the Foundation, anyone\nproviding copies of Project Gutenberg-tm electronic works in accordance\nwith this agreement, and any volunteers associated with the production,\npromotion and distribution of Project Gutenberg-tm electronic works,\nharmless from all liability, costs and expenses, including legal fees,\nthat arise directly or indirectly from any of the following which you do\nnor cause to occur: (a) distribution of this or any Project Gutenberg-tm\nwork, (b) alteration, modification, or additions or deletions to any\nProject Gutenberg-tm work, and (c) any Defect you cause.\n\nSection 2. Information about the Mission of Project Gutenberg-\nProject Gutenberg-tm is synonymous with the free distribution of\nelectronic works in formats readable by the widest variety of computers\nincluding obsolete, old, middle-aged and new computers. It exists\nbecause of the efforts of hundreds of volunteers and donations from\npeople in all walks of life.\nVolunteers and financial support to provide\nvolunteers with the assistance they need, is critical to reaching Project\nGutenberg-tm's goals and ensuring that the Project Gutenberg-tm collection\nwill remain freely available for generations to come. In 2001, the\nProject Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation was created to provide a\nsecure and permanent future for Project Gutenberg-tm and future\ngenerations.\nTo learn more about the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation\nand how your efforts and donations can help, see Sections 3 and

4\inand the Foundation web page at <http://www.pglaf.org>. \n\nSection 3.
Information about the Project Gutenberg Literary Archive\nFoundation\n\nThe Project Gutenberg Literary Archive Foundation is a non profit\n501(c)(3) educational corporation organized under the laws of the\nstate of Mississippi and granted tax exempt status by the Internal\nRevenue Service. The Foundation's EIN or federal tax identification\nnumber is 64-6221541. Its 501(c)(3) letter is posted at\n<http://pglaf.org/fundraising>. Contributions to the Project Gutenberg\nLiterary Archive Foundation are tax deductible to the full extent\npermitted by U.S. federal laws and your state's laws.\n\nThe Foundation's principal office is located at 4557 Melan Dr. S.\nFairbanks, AK, 99712., but its volunteers and employees are scattered\nthroughout numerous locations. Its business office is located at\n809 North 1500 West, Salt Lake City, UT 84116, (801) 596-1887, email\nbusiness@pglaf.org. Email contact links and up to date contact\ninformation can be found at the Foundation's web site and official\npage at <http://pglaf.org>\nFor additional contact information:\nDr. Gregory B. Newby\nChief Executive and Director\ngbnewby@pglaf.org\n\nSection 4. Information about Donations to the Project Gutenberg\nLiterary Archive Foundation\n\nProject Gutenberg-tm depends upon and cannot survive without wide\nspread public support and donations to carry out its mission of\nincreasing the number of public domain and licensed works that can be\nfreely distributed in machine readable form accessible by the widest\narray of equipment including outdated equipment. Many small\ndonations\n($1 to $5,000) are particularly important to maintaining tax\nexempt\nstatus with the IRS.\n\nThe Foundation is committed to complying with the laws regulating\ncharities and charitable donations in all 50 states of the United\nStates. Compliance requirements are not uniform and it takes\na\nconsiderable effort, much paperwork and many fees to meet and keep up\nwith these requirements. We do not solicit donations in locations\nwhere we have not received written confirmation of compliance. To\nSEND DONATIONS or determine the status of compliance for any\nparticular state visit <http://pglaf.org>\n\nWhile we cannot and do not solicit contributions from states where we\nhave not met the solicitation requirements, we know of no prohibition\nagainst accepting unsolicited donations from donors in such states who\napproach us with offers to donate.\n\nInternational donations are gratefully accepted, but we cannot make\nany statements concerning tax treatment of donations received from\noutside the United States. U.S. laws alone swamp our small staff.\n\nPlease check the Project Gutenberg Web pages for current\ndonation\nmethods and addresses. Donations are accepted in a number of other\nways including including checks, online payments and credit card\ndonations. To donate, please visit: <http://pglaf.org/donate>

Section 5. General Information About Project Gutenberg-tm electronic\nworks.\nProfessor Michael S. Hart is the originator of the Project Gutenberg-tm\nconcept of a library of electronic works that could be freely shared\nwith anyone. For thirty years, he produced and distributed Project\nGutenberg-tm eBooks with only a loose network of volunteer support.\nProject Gutenberg-tm eBooks are often created from several printed\neditions, all of which are confirmed as Public Domain in the U.S.\nunless a copyright notice is included. Thus, we do not necessarily\nkeep eBooks in compliance with any particular paper edition.\n\nMost people start at our Web site which has the main PG search facility:\n\nThis Web site includes information about Project Gutenberg-tm,\nincluding how to make donations to the Project Gutenberg Literary\nArchive Foundation, how to help produce our new eBooks, and how to\nsubscribe to our email newsletter to hear about new eBooks.'
